

Some suicides, most people safe Viet 'horrors' not evident yet

By GEORGE ESPER

SAIGON (AP) — From presidents and generals to prostitutes, Vietnamese fleeing the city after the Revolution left Saigon by the tens of thousands in the final days before its takeover.

Others stayed. Some who could have left in the U.S. evacuation refused to leave relatives behind. Some stayed in hope of a reunification that would allow them to see again loved ones who stayed in North Vietnam after the 1954 Geneva agreements that partitioned the country at the 17th Parallel.

Tens of thousands were unable to get out. Some were still trying to escape by sea after the Revolutionary Government had occupied Saigon. Some high officials killed themselves. Others died trying to escape.

There were no visible signs of the bloodbath predicted by U.S. officials from Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger on down.

One army captain said the North Vietnamese could have slaughtered thousands of soldiers and civilians but fired ahead of them only to stop them. He was captured, released within two days and told he could visit his family.

"If they tried to kill, they could have killed everybody," he said. "They told us, 'Don't worry. There will be no killing.'"

High-ranking Saigon officials were told to register with the Revolutionary Government, then set free for the time being. The authorities simply ignored them in the first weeks after the takeover, too busy with more important work.

Several generals were reported to have killed themselves. They included Maj. Gen. Pham Van Phu, commander of the 2nd military corps that embraced the Central Highlands, where the downfall of the Saigon government began in a hasty and chaotic retreat during March.

Lesser officials also took their own lives, including a police lieutenant colonel who shot himself to death before my eyes. President Nguyen Van Thieu and his family and Premier Tran Thien Khiem departed in style aboard an air force plane to Taipei several days before rockets closed Tan Son Nhut Air Base.

Tran Van Lam, former Senate president and the foreign minister who signed the January 1973 Paris cease-fire agreement for South Vietnam, had said publicly he would stay. But sources said he left for the United States.

Gen. Cao Van Vien, chairman of the joint general staff under Thieu, was reported to have left with the U.S. Navy.

A broadcast journalist in California said she was present when Vien arrived at El Toro Marine Air State last week with a plane load of refugees. She said he was met by a staff car sent by Marine Gen. Robert N. Taylor and taken to an unknown destination. An El Toro spokesman said Vien left the base and his whereabouts are unknown.

Another reported suicide was Tran Chanh Tran, an official in the Hanoi Viet Minh government in 1954 who defected to the south and served in various posts in the Saigon government, including foreign minister in 1968. Friends said he killed himself at 4 a.m. May 2, two days after Saigon was occupied. He

City voters go to polls Tuesday

council in balance

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

A quiet political campaign comes to an end Tuesday as Long Beach voters go to the polls to choose nine City Council members for three-year terms and decide on five proposed amendments to the City Charter.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. at 443 precincts throughout the city.

City Clerk Elaine Hamilton said there are 135,133 registered voters. There were 117,204 voters registered for the primary election March 18.

The voter turnout in the primary was 39,720, or 33.9 per cent of those registered. Mrs. Hamilton said she anticipates voting Tuesday may climb over 40 per cent.

As in the primary, voters will punch out their choices on a computer-card ballot. After the polls close, the cards will be brought to the city's computer center to be tallied.

Returns from the computer will be checked periodically throughout the evening by the city clerk's staff, and results will be displayed by use of two projectors set up in the City Hall council chambers. Candidates and their supporters are expected to gather in the chambers for the returns.

Mrs. Hamilton said she expects final returns to be in by about 11 to 11:30 p.m.

The nine City Council offices will be the only elective offices on the ballot, because the offices of city attorney, city auditor and city prosecutor were all determined in the primary election. City Auditor Murray T. Courson and City Prosecutor Robert W. Parkin were unopposed, and City Atty. Leonard Putnam polled more than half of all votes and was elected without a runoff.

In the primary, voting for City Council was on a district basis, and two candidates were nominated in

Gunpoint surrender

A sailor who allegedly called police and threatened to shoot himself and any officer who came near him walks out of his girlfriend's apartment at 2074 Cedar Ave. Saturday afternoon covered by drawn guns of police. Officers said Joseph J. Valley, 18, of the USS Hoel abandoned his loaded .22-caliber rifle and walked out after policewoman Ludmila Christensen talked him into surrendering. Valley was alone in the apartment, and no shots were fired. Police said the incident followed a dispute between Valley and his girlfriend.

Many flee Laos, fear Red takeover

Combined News Services

Fearing an imminent takeover by the Communist Pathet Lao, more than 2,000 persons fled from Laos into Thailand Saturday — including high-ranking Laotian officials, border police said.

Premier Souvanna Phouma's coalition government Saturday announced that four right-wing cabinet members had resigned, the official government radio said. The resignations opened the way for a takeover of cabinet control by the Communist-led Pathet Lao.

The radio identified the ministers who resigned as Defense Minister Sisouk Na Champassak; Finance Minister Ngon Sannanikone; Deputy Foreign Minister Tiene Thone Chantharasy, and Deputy Public Works Minister Houmphanh Sansayngasith.

No replacements were immediately announced, but it was believed they would be replaced by nominal rightists or neutralists who would not resist Pathet Lao views on policy matters.

Earthquake rattles Chile

SANTIAGO (UPI)—A strong earthquake rocked a 900-mile stretch of Chile Saturday and a tidal wave watch was issued, then later canceled, for the Pacific Ocean.

The early morning tremor, which damaged at least 100 homes, was felt for 900 miles from Santiago to Puerto Montt and reached an intensity of from 7 to 8 on the international 12-point scale in some localities, according to the emergency office of the Chilean Interior Ministry.

There were no immediate reports of casualties.

Saturday afternoon the National Weather Service office in Honolulu issued a bulletin saying: it was "not known at this time if a Pacific wide tsunami (tidal wave) has been generated," but that weather officials in Valparaiso, 60 miles northwest of Santiago, Antofagasta, 700 miles north of Santiago, and Puerto Montt, 575 miles south southwest of Santiago, had been notified to be on the alert.

Hawaii state civil defense officials announced several hours later that a tidal wave watch had been canceled because "scientists say there is no danger of a Pacific wide tsunami."

The quake temporarily cut communications with Puerto Montt and Concepcion, a large industrial

County starts firing strikers at hospital

But doctors

By MIKE JELF
Staff Writer

Facing firings which began in the morning, interns and residents at Martin Luther King Hospital in Willowbrook voted Saturday night to continue their strike.

Earlier, County Health Services Director Liston A. Witherhill had announced that 22 strikers were "terminated" because they "abandoned their positions" by staying off duty for the fourth consecutive day.

He said 11 more striking doctors face the fourth-day deadline today and 32 or 33 more face it Monday.

LATE Saturday evening, assistant hospital administrator Terry Ford announced "a lot of people are breaking ranks" and returning to work.

"They have indicated that a number of strikers will be returning tomorrow," he added.

But Dr. Louis Simpson, leader of the strike, announced on the heels of Ford's statement that the protesting interns and residents had voted at a general meeting Saturday night to reaffirm the strike and authorized their negotiators to continue pursuing the strike's objectives.

As the county mailed letters of dismissal, Simpson held an afternoon press conference to announce plans to file a class action suit against the county.

The lawsuit will allege the county has failed to provide the public with good patient care, Simpson said.

The striking doctors come under a county rule which permits dismissal of any employee who fails to report to work for three days, said Dan Grindell, deputy to County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn.

The interns and residents are considered temporary contract employees and are not eligible for civil service rights to appeal their firings, he added.

County officials may have left the door open for reinstatement of at least some of the fired doctors, however.

WITHERILL said the hospital administration would consider, on an individual basis, letters from discharged doctors who think they

Embargo-ending plan for Cuba told

By GEORGE GEDDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger indicated on Saturday that a "general understanding" has been reached in the Organization of American States on a formula for ending the OAS embargo against Cuba.

Although Kissinger did not give specifics, the formula reportedly includes calling a special meeting later this year to revise the procedures for ending the 11-year trade and diplomatic embargo against the island.

As outlined by foreign ministers attending the OAS general assembly meeting here, the proposal would allow the sanctions to be lifted by a simple majority instead of by a two-thirds margin. Currently, 12 of the 21 voting nations are on record in favor of overturning the OAS policy — more than half, but two votes short of the requisite two-thirds.

"I have the impression there is a general understanding of where we want to go," Kissinger told reporters at the start of the third day of the general assembly session.

Pressed for additional information, Kissinger said, "You've got to leave some room for secret diplomacy."

Later, Costa Rican Foreign Minister Gonzalo Fazio acknowledged that a meeting to revise the OAS treaty procedures "most probably" would be held later this year and that his country may serve as

Stanton killer reward posted

When Leon Goodell returned from work to his Stanton home at 12230 Briarwood St. at 7 p.m. April 21, he walked into a house of horror.

He found the body of his wife, Donna Rae Goodell, 42, lying on the floor in a pool of blood, dead from savage blows on the head with a heavy instrument.

Detectives said there was no evidence of forced entry and no indication of a struggle. The death weapon in the mystery slaying has not been found.

Secret Witness will pay $2,000 for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of Mrs. Goodell's killer. If you have such information, call Secret Witness at 436-2526 between 8 a.m. and midnight on weekdays, or between 3 p.m. and 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Or write to: Se-

Rocky in poorer days

When he was a youth in 1930, as Nelson Rockefeller tells the story, he wanted to furnish his first home in expensive American antiques, but his father didn't want to pay for them.

So, without identifying himself, the enterprising young Dartmouth graduate went door to door through Vermont and New Hampshire and bought the furniture from farmers and town-folk at a price he could afford.

"There was an old house where George Washington was supposed to have slept in—one of those Dutch colonial houses—and my mother was fixing it over and I was going to live there when I got married," Rockefeller explained to reporters during a chat on Air Force II recently.

"So I said to my father I would like to get some antiques—pine and maple—early American, and he said it was too expensive," the vice president said.

His father, John D. Rockefeller Jr., said he would pay to furnish the house in antique reproductions. The house was on the family estate, Pocantico Hills, overlooking the Hudson River at Tarrytown, N.Y.

Cleaver

The father of former Black Panther leader Eldridge Cleaver was found dead in his Chicago apartment, officials said Saturday night.

The body of Leroy Cleaver, 72, was discovered Friday, said a spokesman at a Chicago hospital where the body was taken. Cause of death wasn't known immediately, but officials said he had been dead for several days.

The elder Cleaver, a retired Santa Fe Railroad worker, is survived by his widow, Thelma, of Pasadena, Calif., six children and 10 grandchildren.

Eldridge Cleaver, 38, once served as minister of information for the Black Panthers. His autobiography, "Soul On Ice," was written during a prison term. He fled the U.S. when his parole was canceled after a 1968 shootout in Oakland. Since then, he has lived in Algiers and Havana, Cuba.

Requiem

Austrian Cardinal Franz Koenig, at a requiem Mass Saturday in Vienna for Cardinal Josef Mindszenty, criticized Hungary's Communist government for failing to clear the former Hungarian primate of criminal charges alleged during a show trial in 1949.

Mindszenty, who died in exile last week at the age of 83, lay in state at St. Stephen's Cathedral in a dark wooden coffin surrounded by six candles. He is to be buried Wednesday at Mariazell in the Austrian Province of Styria.

Transplant

Betty Anick, the world's longest surviving heart transplant patient, was released from St. Luke's Hospital in Milwaukee Saturday after a week's stay. She had been hospitalized after complaining of abdominal and lower back pains.

Mrs. Anick, 56, West Allis, Wis., received her new heart at St. Luke's Oct. 21, 1968.

"I took the blueprints of the house, I laid out the furniture in each room, I then took the price of the reproduction and put it on each piece and then I added it up for each room—the totals—then I went to my father and said, if I could furnish the house within this total, will you let me have the money?" Rockefeller said. "So he said, 'yes.'"

"Then I spent my weekends the last year at college going around to old houses in Vermont, New Hampshire, in the attics and buying these pieces—knocking on doors," he said. "It was a little embarrassing."

"Did you tell them your name?" he was asked.

"No. I just knocked on the door and said, 'Could I look in your attic? Have you got anything in the barn?'" he replied. "There were a lot of nice people out there."

Rockefeller said when he was researching the project, the books by the experts said there was no such thing as an early American pine grandfather's clock.

"I found two," he said. "One I bought for $12 and one for $16. So I really did pretty well."

Hruska

Nebraska Sen. Roman Hruska, the Senate's second-ranking Republican, has announced that he will not seek re-election when his term expires in 1977, according to the Omaha World-Herald.

In a copyrighted story in Sunday's editions, the World-Herald reported that Hruska said he hoped Omaha Republican Rep. John Y. McCollister would be elected to succeed him. McCollister, now in his third House term, has said he would run for the Senate next year if Hruska bowed out. He has been making campaign preparations for the Senate race.

Hruska, 70, who will have spent more than 22 years in the Senate when his term expires in 1977, has served longer there than any Nebraskan except George Norris.

Acquitted

An Italian court Saturday acquitted deported U.S. Mafia boss Frank "Three Fingers" Coppola of charges of instigating a murder attempt on a police official.

A jury in Florence deliberated nearly 10 hours before absolving the 75-year-old former Kansas City gangster and his two accused hired gunmen of all charges.

Coppola, who was expelled from the U.S. in 1948, and his codefendants had been charged with the shooting of police official Angelo Mangano outside his Rome home on April 5, 1973. But the prosecution suffered a severe blow when its key witness, a police informer who claimed he overheard the three discussing the murder plot, fled to Singapore for what he described as "reasons of personal safety."

Informal

U.S. Commerce Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton said Saturday in Tokyo he would go to Peking next week to hold "informal" talks with Chinese officials on various trade problems between the U.S. and China.

'Revolution secure,' Castro feels

Cuba after 16 years: a showcase

By SAM SUMMERLIN

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — The Cuban revolution, born in flamboyant chaos, has evolved into a well-oiled machine, running incessantly to make this island the showcase of socialist planning.

Fidel Castro is the symbol of the transformation.

The revolutionary hero still wears the dark beard and the olive drab fatigues that became his trademark when he fought against the Batista regime in the Sierra Maestra and then rode into Havana in triumph in January of 1959.

But Castro today is no longer concerned about "counterrevolutionaries," enemies or even foreign invaders.

"THE revolution is secure," he says. "For many years the revolution had to fight for survival and has succeeded. Now it marches on at a marvelous pace."

Castro today wears horn-rimmed glasses befitting a corporate executive as he pores over planning charts and production graphs, or while he toils through the countryside to talk to the Cuban people.

Castro likes to take the wheel of his open, Soviet-made jeep with such visitors as Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., at his side, touring newly constructed, low-cost housing projects, modern schools and factories and agriculture institutes, searching for ways to boost Cuba's production.

A Russian-made, high-powered rifle is strapped to the dashboard of Castro's jeep and a few bodyguards with pistols follow. But Castro says plots against his life are a thing of the past.

Editor's Note — The writer of this dispatch is Latin American editor of The Associated Press. He was bureau chief in Havana 20 years ago, before Fidel Castro's revolution. Recently he went to Cuba with a press party covering Sen. George McGovern's visit.)

HE RELISHES hand-shaking and the cheers of crowds of children and others yelling "Viva Fidel" as he escorts his American visitors.

Castro left it to his aides to show McGovern through the old presidential palace which once was the office of dictator Fulgencio Batista but now houses relics of the revolution and the Bay of Pigs invasion.

The rebel hero, now 47 years old, shows no interest in having the old decaying buildings in Havana repainted, much less reconstructed. Castro pours Cuba's pesos into buildings that will educate the youth and factories that he hopes will eventually rocket Cuba into a boom economy.

Everywhere there is construction — new apartment complexes, new highways and factories.

Gone are the gambling casinos from the luxury hotels, but the corridors and dining rooms are filled with European businessmen, hustling deals in a market place of nine million people living the last 16 years in trade isolation from their one-time dominant supplier, the United States.

A BABBLE of tongues — Russian, French, German, Czech and a sprinkling from Africa and Asia — mixes with those of an increasing flow of tourists from Canada, Mexico and other nations which have been friendly to the Castro regime.

The streets of Havana are filled now with Ford Falcons and Chevy Vegas, from the production lines of U.S. subsidiaries in Argentina.

The new black and beige sedans are beginning to outnumber the old, pre-1959 cars which have been kept on the roads by Cuban ingenuity.

McGovern said he was taken by Cuba's example of virtually all work and little play in its drive to achieve economic growth.

Late at night some Cubans still sit on the Havana seawall savoring sea breezes or take a break in open air restaurants throughout the city. But otherwise there seems little time for relaxation.

At the Lenin School, where Cuba's most talented youngsters are being trained in a modernistic campus, 25 hours a week are spent in the classroom and another 15 hours a week in what the Cubans proudly call "productive labor."

PUPILS in the 6th to 13th grades were producing one transistor radio every two minutes on a small assembly line adjoining the classroom. The radios, bearing the brands "Agricola" on their bright yellow plastic casings, were destined for farm workers so they can listen to music and Cuba's own particular brand of newscasts.

In a country where Fidel Castro is unquestionably the dominant figure, there are virtually no posters of his bearded face anywhere.

Asked about this, one young escort from the Foreign Ministry said, "Fidel is too busy living and doing to be glorified — we only glorify our heroes after they are dead."

But the highways are lined with posters extolling the Communist Party.

Castro escorted McGovern through the streets of Havana until 3 a.m. one morning, defying the senator to spot one policeman. McGovern said later, "Castro was right — I didn't see a single cop, and I understand there is virtually no crime here."

An occasional account of a robbery is carried in the newspaper, but Cuban escorts said that criminals are "not put behind bars," but kept busy on work details for what they described as "rehabilitation."

Cuba was spared the crunch of the oil crisis last year. The Soviet Union has furnished oil to Cuba at half the going world price. But now, apparently to ease the strain on the Soviets, a triangular deal has been negotiated whereby Venezuela and Mexico will furnish Cuba oil in exchange for Soviet goods.

A few hours after McGovern flew back to Washington on Friday, Castro demonstrated his kinship with the Soviet Union which he acknowledges as having saved his revolution by pumping more than $1.5 billion a day into Cuba, by extending long-term credits, by sending technicians, and filling the gap of Cuban exiles and by training technicians.

One of Castro's boldest steps to boost his nation's industrial production is construction of a nuclear power plant, scheduled to go on line in 1977. The Soviet Union is understood to have encouraged the project, hoping to cut its flow of oil to the island.

After 16 years, Cuba now is embarking along a constitutionally complex plan to institutionalize Communist rule. A pilot election in Matanzas Province encouraged plans for the first national congress since Castro took power.

The project has prompted speculation that it might diminish the role of Castro.

Asked about this at a news conference, Castro calmly replied that there is nothing in the constitutional plan that would affect his role, but he said: "I would be the last man to stand in the way of letting others assume some of my work and responsibilities."

LBSU bucks trend: Crime rate dropping

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

Officer Nate Riddick was patrolling Long Beach State University one night when he saw a middle-aged man get out of a car carrying a bundle and disappear into the bushes near a building.

Since it hadn't been long since a live bomb had been planted on campus at the height of student protests, Riddick approached the bushes with caution. He found the suspect digging a hole with a shovel.

When Riddick identified himself as a police officer, the nervous suspect explained that his pet boa constrictor had died and he was burying it.

ALTHOUGH the boa-constrictor incident was one of the more bizarre situations the campus Public Safety Department has investigated, it has one characteristic common to real crime at the university: The suspect was not a student.

In that case, Riddick didn't make an arrest, but told the snake-lover to pack up his boa and go home.

JACK BRICK

When arrests have been made, 80 per cent of the suspects have been nonstudents, according to Jack Brick, LBSU's director of public safety.

Brick, who is police chief for the sprawling, 1.5-square-mile campus, said the most serious crimes at LBSU are committed by criminals who think the university will be easy pickings for theft, robbery or rape.

"THE CAMPUS was a crime-free sanctuary for years," Brick said. "We didn't have the same problems as in the community."

"Many students think that's still the case. They leave their wallets and purses on library tables when they go into the stacks to get a book. But nowadays, there's a chance the wallet will be missing when they come back."

Despite occasional robberies and rape attempts, LBSU is still a safer place than UCLA, USC and many other campuses.

CAMPUS POLICE officers have been killed by off-campus criminals at UC Riverside and Ventura Junior College. A San Diego State University police officer died of a heart attack after being beaten last September.

The same month, two USC students were shot to death while strolling on Fraternity Row, just off campus.

Early in December, a coed was murdered in her dorm room at San Diego State.

Crime—particularly serious crime—has invaded college campuses during the past decade.

USC, LOCATED in a high-crime neighborhood, has spent millions on protection and has a force of more than 50 security officers.

Campus police forces at Long Beach State and Dominguez Hills State have been beefed up. But officials at the two universities said that, unlike many campuses, the crime rate is dropping there.

One reason LBSU is safer is because it's located in one of the lowest-crime neighborhoods in the city. In addition, there are only a few hundred students living in on-campus dorms, and dorms elsewhere have been crime targets.

But another factor is changes made in the campus police force that go beyond its recent change of name to "Public Safety Department."

BRICK HAS taken some of his men out of the cars in which they once patrolled the campus perimeter and put them on walking beats in the interior of the campus, particularly at night.

"Some campus police departments try to emulate the local police or sheriff and concentrate on vehicle patrols," Brick said. "But the situations aren't alike. We're responsible for everything on campus. We felt we couldn't accomplish much by driving around."

To better patrol the parking lots, where cars and the stereos, radios and other components inside them have been targets for thieves, Brick put officers dressed in old clothes on bikes and in private cars.

Youth parley set Saturday

There still are 10 openings for adult participants in Saturday's Long Beach Coordinating Council "Conference on Justice—Focus on Youth," a spokeswoman for the event has announced.

Lauraine Barber said 140 students also are scheduled to attend the conference.

State Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, is scheduled as keynote speaker for the 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. seminar at Hughes Junior High School, 3486 California Ave.

Most of the conference time is to be devoted to small seminars with experts from the courts, police, probation and public and private social welfare services and model exercises on how juvenile cases are handled, Ms. Barber added.

Though it has been organized with assistance of the state attorney general's office especially for the students of public and private schools within the area of the Long Beach Unified School District, the conference also is designed for up to 60 teachers and other adults, said Ms. Barber.

Interested adults should make reservations for the conference with Roy Womack at the school district headquarters.

Ms. Barber said information packages for the conference are to be mailed to the participants. Students who have signed up should check with their school principals if the materials are not received, and adults should contact Womack, she said.

HE BELIEVES this has helped cut crime at LBSU at a time when crime is on the increase in almost every surrounding city.

Although there are still a few weeks left in the school year, crime statistics from the college look much better so far this year than last.

During this school year, there have been 12 burglaries in campus buildings, compared with 28 last year.

There have been 39 auto burglaries this year, compared with 46 the year before. The figures for car theft are 20 this year, 41 last year.

Petty thefts are down from 436 to 180. Incidents of disturbing the peace are down from 11 to 2 and sex offenses from 34 to 22.

THERE HAS been one attempted rape on campus each year. There were four robberies this year and three last year.

Brick hopes to cut crime even more with crime-fighting technology.

He's proposed an intrusion-alarm system for the university library and areas where money is kept. A better fire-alarm system is also in the works.

In addition, Brick is considering an "access control system" that would substitute electromagnetic cards instead of keys to gain access to buildings.

New bicycle racks are slated to be installed to reduce bicycle thefts and approval has been received to put in emergency phones throughout the campus.

FILMS ON WAYS to avoid rape and theft are being shown on campus.

"We are shifting concentration from crime or incident follow-up to prevention," Brick said.

At Dominguez Hills, there have been fewer crimes than in most years, according to Police Chief Werth Harvey.

While Brick has increased foot patrol, Harvey has put marked police cars on campus perimeters, and he credits this "visibility" for cutting crime.

Problems at the smaller Dominguez Hills campus have been different than at LBSU, Harvey said.

"Our biggest problem has been street crime spilling in from Compton," he said. "But since we've added three men to our 11-man force—and increased our visibility—the crime rate has been dropped."

"A LOT OF the crime was being committed by people who will stay away if they see a black and white patrol car."

Like Brick, Harvey said his staff has been more effective since getting away from the original state college policy of "hiring retired 55-year-old security guards."

Campus police are now trained police officers, often in their 20s or 30s.

Council race nearly over

each district to run in Tuesday's general election. The candidates, with their primary vote and percentage, are:

First District—E. John Hanna, 56, shipyard administrator (1,031 votes, 26.92 per cent); Don Phillips, 49, incumbent (1,871 votes, 48.86 per cent).

Second District—Bert Bond, 60, incumbent (1,335 votes, 23.29 per cent); Wallace W. Edgerton, 40, government teacher-businessman (1,353 votes, 23.61 per cent).

Third District—Charles "Cal" Calix, 53, retired police sergeant (861 votes, 16.20 per cent); Renee Simon, 46, incumbent (4,261 votes, 80.18 per cent).

Fourth District—Thomas J. Clark, 41, incumbent (3,147 votes, 75.81 per cent); Phillip B. Greer, 21, student (339 votes, 8.16 per cent).

Fifth District—Ernie Kell, 46, businessman (1,264 votes, 22.39 per cent); Jo Ann Richards, 41, housewife-community leader (1,142 votes, 20.23 per cent).

Sixth District—James P. McGuinness Sr., 53, public relations director (899 votes, 40.6 per cent); James H. Wilson, 46, incumbent (1,315 votes, 59.39 per cent).

Seventh District—Ronald A. Morgan, 33, hospital administrator (671 votes, 13.14 per cent); Eunice N. Sato, 53, incumbent (3,065 votes, 60.06 per cent).

Eighth District—Wes Carroll

Jr., 33, business executive (847 votes, 20.03 per cent); E. F. "Ted" Cruchley, 67, incumbent (1,235 votes, 29.21 per cent).

Ninth District—Larry Nelson Jones, 28, teacher (1,029 votes, 37.85 per cent); Russ Rubley, 54, incumbent (1,231 votes, 45.29 per cent).

The only district in which no incumbent is running is the Fifth District, where Mayor Edwin W. Wade chose not to seek reelection after serving 15 years on the City Council—all five terms as mayor.

Results of the Long Beach election may be learned Tuesday night by telephoning 432-5967. The League of Women voters of Long Beach, working in cooperation with the Independent Press-Telegram, will report the results starting about 8 p.m.

Council members elected Tuesday will begin their terms on July 7. The City Charter prescribes that terms begin on the first Monday after the first of July. Among their first actions will be the election of one of their members as mayor for the next three years.

The five proposed amendments to the city charter are:

Prop. 1—Would require that a public hearing be held on any proposed change in civil service rules; would permit the appointment of individuals who have 1. passed a civil service exam, 2. are on an existing eligible list and 3. are em- ployed by the city in a program funded by the county, state or federal government, to a classified position for which the individual is qualified without regard to his position on the eligible list.

Prop. 2—Would permit the City Council, by ordinance, to establish imprest cash funds for minor expenditures, more commonly known as petty-cash funds.

Prop. 3—Would provide that the retention of city records be on the basis of state law, rather than established by charter.

Prop. 4—Would provide that the veterans' preference credit of 10 points on civil service exams be limited to a period of 10 years from the date of the individual's discharge; disabled veterans, the spouse of a disabled veteran and the unmarried spouse of a dead veteran would retain the 10-point credit for life.

Prop. 5—Would delete from the charter "procedural" election provisions, which either would be put into a city Election Code Ordinance or be covered by the State Election Code, and would extend the time for calling and conducting special elections in the event of a City Council vacancy by 30 days; would also permit, rather than require, the City Council to fill a vacancy that occurred on the council within 120 days of a primary nominating election, instead of the present 90 days.

Bay MD strike seeps out

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The doctors' boycott, under way in eight Northern California counties since May 1 in protest of rocketing malpractice insurance rates, was expected Saturday to spread to other counties in varying degrees after the weekend.

The boycott has caused many layoffs or shortened hours at about 50 hospitals in the populous San Francisco Bay area. Some non-private hospitals, not affected by the walkout since their personnel are otherwise insured, reported a booming business in patients unable to obtain care at their own hospitals.

The protest, principally of anesthesiologists and other private hospital-associated physicians, was expected to spread Monday to Sacramento, San Mateo and Santa Clara counties. In Santa Cruz County, a dozen anesthesiologists announced Friday refusal to handle any but urgent surgery.

The San Francisco Examiner said it received reports that similar personnel in San Diego County were thinking of going out.

In San Francisco, Dr. Sanford Marcus, president of the Union of American Physicians, claimed to have received at least 40 calls from doctors in Arizona, Colorado, Florida, Oregon and New York who "feel the moment has come when this issue must be faced nationwide and are strongly considering the same action in their areas."

"They are looking at what we are doing here as a possible model," said Marcus. "They believe this thing must be brought to a head."

Marcus, although heartened by legislative progress toward easing the situation, warned that doctors will not go back to work without immediate action freezing insurance premiums at last year's level.

The physicians are in arms over malpractice insurance premium hikes up to 322 per cent. Anesthesiologists face hikes from $5,377 to $18,264 a year.

A general practitioner who occasionally assisted in the operating room said his insurance went from $3,000 a year to more than $8,000.

"I'm not going to be assisting in surgery any more," he said.

The people hardest hit in the eight counties which first rebelled against the increases have been hospital workers laid off or put on short hours as a result of plummeting patient loads in some 50 hospitals in San Francisco, Marin, Alameda and Contra Costa counties.

The University of California Medical Center in San Francisco, whose anesthesiologists are insured through the university, reported it was jammed Friday with patients diverted from private hospitals by their doctors.

A hospital spokesman said occupancies were "over 100 per cent" in the surgical specialties including vascular, obstetrics, neurosurgery, orthopedics, ear, nose and throat.

'Heir chaser' racket told

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Mass-mailing "heir chasers" are raking in thousands of dollars from Californians who think they may share in abandoned property and unclaimed estates, state Controller Kenneth Cory reported Saturday.

"People throughout the state regularly receive unsolicited letters encouraging them to believe they may possibly be claimants to property and estates when there actually is only the most remote possibility of this happening," Cory said.

He said the letters offer to supply copies of documents on a specific property or estate in return for a fee.

"Rarely ever is a claimant found by this method, but the copying fees add up to a fine income for the people who send the letters," Cory said in a news release.

Cory said the "heir chaser" makes widespread use of the lists of abandoned property and unclaimed estates which are maintained as public records by his office. He said anyone can get extra information from the files without paying a fee.

Girls raped, set on fire; 1 suspect held

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Police Saturday arrested one of two men suspected of raping two teen-age Conshohocken, Pa., girls, dousing them with gasoline and then setting them on fire. One girl burned to death and the other was in critical condition.

Homicide detectives said Robert Rigler, 22, of Conshohocken, was arrested in Philadelphia. They said he would be charged formally later.

The other suspect, identified as Charles Stickle, 20, of West Conshohocken, was still at large, police said.

Beverly Roddenbough,

16, who survived the ordeal, suffered burns over 90 per cent of her body.

A hospital spokesman said earlier reports that she underwent amputation of both arms, legs and ears and removal of her eye were erroneous.

A nun at St. Agnes Hospital said the Roddenbough girl also had multiple knife wounds.

The other girl, Tina Statuti, also 16, burned to death.

John W. Statuti, 19, of Lansdale, brother of the victim, said when his sister left home Friday night, she was "supposed to see a (male) friend who was beaten up. She was supposed to be home by midnight."

Police said Miss Roddenbough and Miss Statuti were accosted late Friday night, raped and then driven to a vacant trailer in Manayunk where they were doused with gasoline and set on fire.

Authorities said Miss Statuti burned to death when the trailer exploded. Miss Roddenbough, who was blown from the trailer, was found about 15 feet away by firemen who learned of the explosion from local residents.

Miss Roddenbough told police from her bed at St. Agnes Hospital here that she and her girlfriend met the men Friday night. She told police the suspects took them to a Conshohocken apartment where they were both raped.

They were then forced into a green panel truck and driven to a trailer parking lot in Manayunk, she told police.

According to police, the girls were forced into a trailer loaded with rolls of cardboard and paper. Miss Roddenbough said one of the men tried to strangle her and as she lost consciousness she sensed the gasoline being poured over her body.

Texas twister, storms do harm

United Press International

Thunderstorms dotted portions of the nation's coastal areas Saturday. Texas, pounded by heavy rains and at least one tornado, was hardest hit.

Thunderstorms developed over parts of southern Texas, northern Florida and southern Georgia. Other storms ranged over southern New England and along the Northwest coastline from western Washington into extreme Northern California.

San Marco, Tex., reported a tornado which damaged a hangar and seven planes. Austin, Tex., recorded the heaviest afternoon rainfall amounts with three-quarters of an inch.

MOTORISTS in parts of two counties of southwest Texas, east of the Pecos River, were advised of flooding in low-water crossings.

Another thunderstorm hit in the Plains from northeast Colorado and central Nebraska into Montana and the western Dakotas.

The rains stayed away from Omaha, Neb., where between 1,200 and 1,300 National Guardsmen patrolled the city's streets to keep sightseers from the scene of last week's devastating tornadoes.

"This has been a particularly rough year for the guard with the winter blizzards and everything," said Col. Burl Johnson, state civil defense director.

Johnson said after an aerial tour of the ravaged 2,000-square block area, "From the air you get one horrible devastation. But on the ground you can feel, smell and touch and you can just appreciate the magnitude of the damn thing. It's a gigantic task."

Many areas of Wyoming are nearing potential flood problems because of an expected heavy runoff of melting snow, the U.S. Soil Conservation Service said Saturday.

The service said snow-pack accumulation has been increasing above average for the past three months, and May may

Device to replace aerosol spray told

THOMASTON, Conn. (UPI) — The Risdon Manufacturing Co. said Saturday it has developed three new spray packages to replace the fluorocarbons used in millions of aerosol spray cans and criticized as damaging the atmosphere.

The firm said the new spray systems are a "new generation in convenience packaging of consumer products."

The first of the three, a manual pump that sprays liquid or viscous products without any propellant, will be marketed later this year, said Gerald E. Rideout, manager of the Aerosol and Packaging Components Division.

The leak-resistant pump, which can be used on glass, plastic or metal containers, is expected to be used for the packaging of cosmetic, household and pharmaceutical products, he said.

The second alternative uses carbon dioxide as a propellant to produce a fine, misty spray pattern and is suitable for hair sprays, deodorants and disinfectants, he said.

The third utilizes a plastic barrier pack filled with compressed air to dispense such products as cheese, hand cream and skin lotions. The barrier pack separates the propellant from the product.

AEROSOL sprays using fluorocarbons have been criticized because many scientists believe the propellant breaks down the ozone layer.

The manual pump valve is a new design, Rideout said, and will reduce the possibility of accidental dispensing of the container which may contain potentially harmful products.

"The tendency of some previously available pump packages to leak has been a problem in pump dispensing of costly fragrances," Augustus T. DeVera, a specialty products manager, said.

"Leakage can occur during shipment, in storage, on store shelves, even on the consumer's dressing table," he said. THE carbon dioxide system uses a valve with larger diameter orifices to reduce the tendency of miniaturized valves to clog, Rideout said. Conventional carbon dioxide spray cans also produce heavy and wet dispersions instead of an acceptable spray pattern, he said.

Pipeline packs 'em in — like sardines 75 acres burned

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — It's not a bad deal — if you don't mind sleeping in the corner of the kitchen or bunking with five other human sardines in a 15-by-15-foot former living room.

And sharing the lone bathroom with 45 other tenants really isn't a problem, the landlord says, because everybody goes to work at different times.

Kitchen privileges are included, but there's no refrigerator.

It's all yours — if you can find a vacancy — for $10 a night, or you can take advantage of the $40-per-week rate.

That's the situation facing a growing number of newcomers and job-seekers lured to Fairbanks by the trans-Alaska pipeline. Rooming houses are cropping up in every corner of the city and, while the rates are steep, few vacancies exist.

A check of rooming-house advertisements in the Daily News-Miner revealed six vacant bunks in seven houses, with prices ranging from $7.50 to $10 a night and $40 to $70 a week.

Most are homes converted into dorm-style rooming houses with bunks crammed into every nook. Privacy is unheard of. One features an estimated 45 people living in a converted one-story, two-bedroom house with a basement, according to a city fire inspector.

Another small house includes 26 bunks sectioned off for men and women and a kitchen about 5 feet wide and 15 feet. The house appeared clean.

Some houses include shower and kitchen facilities, while others offer only a bunk and a roof over one's head. Some are clean and relatively neat while others are filthy, with garbage strewn about.

But for the person who has combed the city searching for any shelter available, a $10-a-night rooming house may be a palace. And for the landlord-owner, pulling in perhaps $8,000 a month beats working seven days a week on the pipeline.

However, city officials are faced with the prospect of fire and health hazards as well as zoning violations, and court action is being considered.

Borough Asst. Atty. Jane Kauver said the biggest problems are rooming houses located in residential zones and those with "just too many people in them."

Many rooming houses also apparently do not meet fire codes. Fire Inspector Bill Hao said that, of about 10 rooming houses contacted, none met fire codes. The houses are checked for adequate exits, fire extinguishers and fire alarms, he said.

RIDGECREST (UPI) — A brush and timber fire broke out Saturday afternoon in the rugged Sand Canyon area in the Sierra Nevada foothills, and the blaze burned at least 75 acres of watershed before the first fire units arrived on the scene. The cause of the blaze in the Rodecker Flats section was not known.

IRS calls for naming informers

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. (UPI)—The Internal Revenue Service has ordered its special agents across the country to divulge the names of their confidential informants and the move could endanger lives and destroy IRS investigative operations, the Long Island newspaper Newsday reported Saturday.

The March 17 directive from IRS Commissioner Donald C. Alexander "has so shaken the agency's special agents that the 4,000-member Federal Crime Investigators Association is considering legal action to restrain Alexander," the paper said.

"The national office asked all regional commissioners to instruct their special agents to turn in the names of all their confidential informants to their group chiefs," Larry Batdorf, an IRS public affairs officer in Washington, told Newsday.

Descendants reenact Ft. Ticonderoga fall

TICONDEROGA, N.Y. (AP) — Benedict Arnold nearly stole the show Saturday with his good humor and quick wit as he, Ethan Allen and the Green Mountain Boys captured Ft. Ticonderoga again, and again, and again.

Ronald Arnold, a 31-year-old teacher and salesman from Kingston, Ont., whose bantam build matched that of his ancestor, kept answering the obvious question.

"EVERYBODY and his dog keeps asking me how it feels to be a descendant of Benedict Arnold. How do I know? I've never not been descended from Benedict Arnold," he said.

The bespectacled Arnold acknowledged "there's no question" that Benedict, an American hero early in the war, became a traitor when he tried to betray West Point to the British later in the Revolution. But Ronald, who drove here with his 2-year-old son, John Benedict Arnold, enjoyed noting that part of the Arnold clan had long since emigrated to Canada. "We had to leave, you know," Ronald said with a smile.

More than 150 descendants of Arnold, Allen and the Green Mountain Boys were joined by thousands of spectators Saturday during the three reenactments of the capture of Ft. Ticonderoga.

Gov. Hugh Carey, accompanied by seven of his children, congratulated the patriot descendants "for their life-like reenactment. If that's what can happen in the middle of the night, maybe I should keep a musket by my bed in the mansion. But with this year's budget, I don't know that anyone would want to recapitulate it." The governor says the state has a $500 million budget deficit.

Jesse Becker, 49, of Mundelein, Ill., had been anticipating the spectacle ever since he visited the reconstructed stone fortress two years ago. A descendant of a Green Mountain Boy who guided Allen and his men to the fort, Becker took a week's vacation to participate in the reenactment.

"EVERYONE seems real proud of their heritage, and you don't see that much anymore," Becker said as he shivered in the predawn chill. "My own son, he could care less. I don't know why. They don't teach that in school anymore, I guess."

Dr. John K. Lattimer, a Columbia University urologist and an Ethan Allen descendant, portrayed his ancestor and led the attack on the ill-defended fort that captured its 40-odd British defenders and precious cannon. Echoing Allen's memorable words, he told the British captain to "Get out of there, you damned rat," and demanded the surrender of the fort overlooking Lake Champlain "in the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress."

Ex-agent defends CIA

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The former chief of CIA operations in Latin America insisted Saturday shortly after his retirement that the agency had nothing to do with the 1973 Chilean coup or any assassination plots in that part of the world.

CIA said aided by top firms

WASHINGTON — The CIA's use of the Howard R. Hughes organization to disguise its recovery of a sunken Soviet submarine is but the most recent example of a long-standing practice in which dozens, perhaps scores, of American companies have lent their names and reputations — usually for a price — to shield covert CIA activities abroad.

One intelligence source named more than 20 U.S. companies he said had entered into such agreements with the CIA over the past 15 years.

cause he was appalled at the lies, myths and misunderstandings about the CIA.

He said he had written to about 400 other former intelligence officials, inviting them to join with him in his post-retirement campaign to defend the CIA. Already, he said, 160 of them have joined his Association of Retired Intelligence Officers.

Phillips specifically denied charges that the CIA:

- Provided funds or encouragement to the strikes that led to the overthrow of Salvador Allende as president of Chile in 1970.

- Sterilized women and children in more than one Latin American country.
- Served as the "evil genius" behind American tuna-boat incursions in Ecuadorian waters.
- Was responsible for the recent kidnapping in Mexico of the father-in-law of President Luis Echeverria Alvarez.
- Organized "all kinds of activities involving Latin American political parties, labor unions and student organizations and demonstrations."

- Encouraged assassinations and repressive police and intelligence methods in a number of Latin American countries.
- Was responsible for "troublesome disturbances" in Lima last February.

Phillips repeatedly rejected any suggestion that the CIA took part in the overthrow and death of Allende.

Resettlement figures dwindling

Camp red tape 'imprisoning' refugees

By CAROL OPPENHEIM
Knight News Service
CAMP PENDLETON — The Vietnamese refugees have become snarled in American red tape that may keep them virtually imprisoned here for weeks.

Federal agencies have been preparing and processing immigration and other necessary documents around the clock. But the number of Vietnamese released for resettlement has been dwindling since last Sunday.

The airlifts from Guam, carrying an average of 2,000 persons a day, continued until Thursday night when Pendleton hung out a "no vacancy" sign. A Marine official reported the population had reached 18,762 in facilities designed for 18,081.

Planes still were flying to Ford Chaffee, Ark., but the Army camp could reach its 20,000 capacity early this week. Eglin Air Force Base in Florida had its maximum capacity reduced from 20,000 to 2,424 after pressure from Rep. Robert L.F. Sykes, D., Fla., chairman of the House subcommittee on defense appropriations.

Guam's capacity as a refugee transit stop was stretched almost to a breaking point Saturday. Authorities, who were forced to fly 3,000 more refugees to Wake Island, said they were eager to send on to the continental United States a large number ber of the 42,000 refugees. Crammed onto this U.S. island territory.

Already confused and often frightened, some of the refugees in Pendleton are becoming angry. One man charged: "They are holding us prisoner. I have a sponsor and enough money to live for one year. Why won't they let us go?"

The reasons behind the backlog are:

—In apparent reaction to vocal opposition to resettling the refugees in the United States and fears that criminals and "undesirables" may slip through, all Vietnamese must undergo a security check. Immigration officials here report they have received no security clearances so far.

—Every Vietnamese who is not an American dependent must have a bonafide sponsor. A number of persons who offered to become sponsors subsequently withdrew or were disqualified during the verification process; others had no idea a Vietnamese family had listed them as a sponsor and refused to take on the obligation.

—The church agencies charged with finding sponsors have been slow to gear up for action. Representatives claimed that lack of office space and telephones prevented them from starting work when the camp opened April 29.

Donald Day, assistant district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, said about 7,350 Vietnamese were awaiting security and sponsorship clearance Thursday when the camp shut its doors to new arrivals.

In the first chaotic days after the camp's opening, screening was minimal. The idea was to get the refugees in and out as fast as possible. Since then, federal agencies have repeatedly changed the processing procedures, adding such refinements as security checks, photos and fingerprinting.

As a result, the most recent arrivals are in camp two to three days before the initial processing is begun even though there are 80 immigration officers here.

Back in Washington, task force officials say the security clearance should be completed in four to five days. Day originally estimated the refugees would be in camp seven to ten days; last week, he said: "Realistically, I don't know how long it will be."

Immigration officials in Washington reported they also are planning delayed security checks on the American dependents already released. Any refugees or dependents judged ineligible for admission will not be returned to Vietnam, but will not be admitted here either, they said.

A survey of refugees on Guam last week showed that 28 per cent reported they had relatives in the United States and 34 per cent said they had sponsors. But in attempting to verify those sponsors here, it was learned that some Vietnamese took a casual "look me up if you ever get to the states" as for-

Viets to let aliens remain

By GEORGE ESPER

SAIGON (AP) — The military management committee of Saigon said Friday that "all honest foreigners not against" the Revolutionary Government can continue to work normally in Vietnam.

At least a dozen Americans are known to be in Saigon, including three Associated Press newsmen.

The city was functioning normally, although there appeared to be a shortage of piasters, the local currency, because banks remained closed.

Shops and markets were open, and many of the customers were souvenir-hunting Viet Cong troops.

Restaurants and hotels were operating with steak and good wine available at both major hotels, the Continental and the Caravelle.

Some black market stalls were still doing business and carried American cigarettes and Playboy magazines.

A communique ordered all foreigners, including diplomats, to report to authorities within 15 days with identification cards for registration.

But once registered, it said, they were free to go anywhere in Saigon. Newsmen were permitted to go into the countryside.

Waiting to see what Reds do

Many refugees may go home

By THOMAS C. FOX
Knight News Service

CAMP PENDLETON — A sizable number of refugees here indicate they are having second thoughts about leaving Vietnam. Some say they are taking a "wait-and-see" attitude to see what life under the Communists will be like before deciding where they will permanently settle.

It seems possible that many refugees may wish to return to Vietnam as their needs begin to clash with American realities.

Those who decide to go back would do so for personal reasons, they say, such as the desire to be with relatives or to grow old in villages and cities they left behind.

It seems likely many would be likely to want to return once they learn that life in America, compared to the life they have known, can be difficult and lonely.

The refugees most likely to settle in America are those who have relatives already living here. Many other refugees indicate they wish to move on, settling in Canada or Europe perhaps to be with relatives living there.

The Vietnamese most likely to return to Vietnam at a future date, Vietnamese here indicate, are those without blood or marital ties in either the United States or Europe.

These conclusions are based on interviews with hundreds of refugees here who indicate they might consider returning to Vietnam.

Many refugees, for example, say they left in haste, in a panic atmosphere fostered by what appeared to be an impending battle within Saigon and by an American airlift evacuation that, by its speed and selectivity, caused many to jump at the chance of fleeing Vietnam.

Many refugees, when asked why they left Vietnam, said they feared what would come under the Communists, adding they had no indication what Communist rule would be like.

Few said they feared Communist reprisals against them.

Some Vietnamese who worked for American firms said they were encouraged to leave by offers of jobs overseas.

Vietnamese maintain strong family ties, clinging to relatives for support far more than westerners.

Nearly all refugees here say they left close relatives in Vietnam because of the chaotic nature of the evacuation.

Much of the talk in the camp concerns relatives:

a mother of three children under 4 wanders about, crying, and asking for word of her husband who left Vietnam on a different plane. She does not know whether her husband got out.

Three family members who got out in the airlift await word whether six other members of their family got out by boat. The mother says she wants to return to Vietnam.

Such stories are seemingly endless here. Few refugees want to permanently sever ties with Vietnam.

"No one knew what would happen from one day to the next," a father of four young children said. "The people were running everywhere. No one knew what to do."

The new Saigon government — the Revolutionary Government — has repeatedly said it wants to work for reconciliation with all Vietnamese, no matter for whom they worked or what they did.

While it is too early to know the truth of such statements, western newsmen who have been given free movement in the Saigon area are reporting that life is returning to normal and they know of no Communist reprisals.

If such reports continue, they are likely to have a significant impact on refugees who are following developments in Vietnam closely.

Moreover, the new Saigon government seems to want the refugees to return.

'Friends welcome' at rites for one of last war dead

By GORDON HANSON

MARSHALLTOWN, Iowa (AP) — "We want people to come as friends, not just to see what's going on," says Mrs. Henry Judge of a memorial service for her son who was one of the last two American Marines to die in Vietnam.

The service will be Tuesday evening in the Marshalltown High School gymnasium, where 19-year-old Lance Cpl. Darwin Judge received his graduation diploma just last year.

Air Force S.Sgt. Loren Judge, 26, a brother of the dead Marine, said the Defense and State Departments have not revealed if the bodies can be returned.

"All the tears I've shed won't bring my boy back," Ida Judge continued. "At times, I can stand up to this, and there are times when I can't."

A lot of mothers have lost loved ones, and a lot more will. But this seems just a little harder than a normal death. So many friends have called, and so many letters ...

"WE'RE planning a private service when his body comes home," Mrs. Judge said Saturday. "It will be for the family and real close friends. We wait day by day to see what will happen."

Judge and Marine Cpl. Charles McMahon Jr. of Woburn, Mass., were killed April 28 in a Communist rocket attack on Saigon's Tan Son Nhut airbase as helicopters evacuated Americans and refugees.

They died about 12 hours before the evacuation ended. Their bodies were not recovered.

Mrs. Judge said Marine color and honor guards will escort the family at the service. An American flag will be given to the parents "as a token" pending actual funeral services.

Mrs. Judge is the American Legion Auxiliary's hospital representative at the Iowa Soldiers Home here. Henry Judge is a postal worker and World War II veteran who flew 27 combat missions in Europe as a tailgunner in a B17.

Vietnam reinvasion plan rejection told

By BOB WIEDRICH
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — As Saigon resistance turned into a rout a month ago, the Pentagon informed President Ford that an American military invasion at Da Nang would cut off 18 overextended North Vietnamese combat divisions fighting in South Vietnam.

Sources here agree that had Ford and Congress approved such a venture, Hanoi might have been dealt a crushing military defeat on the very eve of final victory.

But a reintroduction of American combat troops into Indochina, the same sources say, probably would have provoked the worst antiwar rioting in the U.S. since former President Richard M. Nixon's incursion into Cambodia.

There is no suggestion Ford considered invoking such an option at any time. Rather, it was one of several offered in the period when South Vietnam President Nguyen Thieu's orderly withdrawal from the Central Highlands had disintegrated into a military disaster and Hanoi had poured 400,000 North Vietnamese regulars into the South.

However, Ford did bring up the options as an illustration in discussions with congressional leaders of the need to use American combat troops to assure a safe evacuation of American citizens remaining in Vietnam before the Communist takeover.

Ford raised the subject in this context, sources here report: "If you're concerned about using American troops to evacuate American citizens, listen to what some guys are suggesting we do."

Those weren't Ford's exact words, but that was the substance of them as he sought Capitol Hill support for what proved to be limited use of U.S. Marines for the last-minute evacuation of Saigon.

According to what the Pentagon generals told Ford, North Vietnam had 18 of its 20 combat divisions already south of the demilitarized zone, outfits that were enjoying military successes with a speed totally unexpected by even their leaders in Hanoi.

In the accelerating panic and collapse, South Vietnamese troops were on the run, discarding or abandoning billions of dollars of U.S.-supplied weapons and supplies and the North Vietnamese units in hot pursuit had overextended if not outrun their vital supply lines.

Further, for the first time in 30 years of Southeast Asian strife, the war had assumed more conventional forms with Communist combat troops massed in traditional Western military formations that would permit virtual annihilation by massive aerial bombing and conventional military ground strategy.

Communist troops were moving south in convoys. Communist tanks and artillery, plus support units, jammed the roads. Antiaircraft guns, previously kept in the north to counter the possible threat of renewed air war as Hanoi repeatedly violated the Paris peace accords, had their muzzles depressed and also were being towed south.

At that moment, the deployment of a number of American Army and Marine divisions in an invasion of South Vietnam at a line of about Da Nang, 380 miles northeast of Saigon, might have had a devastating effect on the massed and overdrawn North Vietnamese.

Sources here explain Hanoi had permitted its troops to get into so potentially precarious a posture because of two reasons: —Confidence there would be no military retaliation by the U.S. after earlier tentative probes southward had failed to evoke reaction.

—The unexpected, almost total collapse of the South Vietnamese.

One can imagine the relish with which American military chiefs must have regarded the predicament in which Hanoi had permitted its armies to fall.

Instead of engaging in lethal shadow boxing with a virtually unseen enemy using guerrilla tactics in impenetrable jungle, the Communists were now out in the open where they could be seen and attacked with the superior firepower of American combat divisions.

Certainly, in examining such an option, if in fact President Ford even did, he also must have considered the probable violent domestic reactions that would surely have ensued. That is why sources here report he dismissed it out of hand as merely a contingency plan prepared by military advisers.

Asia debacle casts shadow over summit

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press

Jolted by the United States policy calamity in Indochina, the Atlantic Alliance finds itself in an atmosphere of crisis as President Ford looks toward a European journey this month aimed at strengthening American leadership of the West.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization will meet at the summit in Brussels May 29 and 30, and the outlook for a confident unity is a good deal less than bright.

The Vietnam debacle, the stubbornness of the Middle East and Greece military-industrial strength to protect against having to accept some form of Soviet hegemony over the whole continent. It holds on the other hand that the U.S. would be isolated in an unfriendly world if cut off from Europe, where Americans have enormous investment and trade stakes.

Some European leaders profess to see reassurance in polls suggesting that Americans would regard Europe as a different proposition from Indochina and would be more willing to defend it. Joseph Luns, NATO's secretary general, has suggested Europe should be relieved that the Americans are out of their long Asian entanglement and can concentrate on the West.

But although ringing pronouncements on the need for Atlantic unity are voiced frequently, there is plenty of disunity to occupy the Brussels summit, whose government chiefs face such perplexing problems as economic crisis, monetary and banking problems, the future of oil and raw materials resources for industry, the Middle East stalemate, just to list a few.

Political and economic problems preoccupy Europe, but leaders are eying military possibilities, too. Soviet power has grown at a faster rate in Europe than that of the West, and the Russians have a preponderance of men and equipment in central and northern Europe.

The Soviet buildup is at a time when nations like Britain, Denmark and the Netherlands, along with others, are thinking about cutbacks in their commitments largely because of the continuing economic troubles of the continent and rising public resistance to heavy military costs.

ANALYSIS

Turkish-Cyprus crises, and the aggressive Communist influence in Portugal are among factors tending to spotlight deterioration of the alliance around NATO's frayed perimeter.

The crisis atmosphere flows from conflicting assessments of such questions.

IF SOME European leaders feel they cannot live without NATO, some others clearly are running into difficulties living with it.

Some government chiefs either won't show up in Brussels or be there reluctantly. What surface unity is visible will come from the presence of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany, British Prime Minister Harold Wilson and some others.

President Ford, in the midst of a comprehensive review of foreign policy, has been seeing foreign leaders and assuring them that Indochina events "in no way weakened the U.S. resolve" to stand by commitments to America's allies.

BUT Europeans look also at Congress and listen also to the American public mood. They noted that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is represented gloomily assessing the impact of Indochina as a demonstration that the U.S. failed to keep its word to an ally. Some in Europe wonder: Is a superpower all powerful when it doesn't or cannot use its power to the full?

When NATO was born 26 years ago this spring, the United States was at the peak of its power and prestige, the one superpower, a nation without equal.

Today, there are two superpowers. Europe is in between, which makes understandable an emergent anxiety to keep the mighty Russian bear feeling peaceful. What was a solid front against putative Soviet ambitions looks a good deal less than solid right now.

NATO was a success from the standpoint that since the 15-nation alliance began there has been no Communist expansion in Europe, nor has there been a European war.

Today, weakened or not, NATO remains a safe roof under which Europe — as Europe — can confront political, economic and military problems with the U.S. A mutual dependence is advanced now as the strongest argument for a show of as much unity as can be demonstrated.

This argument holds that Europe has no choice but to rely on U.S.

Equity

Prior to the discovery of the life insurance swindle connected with the Equity Funding Corp., I canceled my policy and requested the cash surrender value. However, the subsequent court actions involving this firm suspended all refund payments and I've been unable to find out if and when I will get my money. Is it a lost cause? B.S., Long Beach.

Not necessarily since the bankrupt firm apparently has substantial assets, but it probably will be years before any money is paid to the company's policy holders and other creditors. The Equity Funding Corp., which went bankrupt in 1973 in one of the biggest swindles in U.S. business history, is the object of numerous lawsuits, and the assets won't be distributed until most of this litigation is completed. Two-thirds of the company's policies were issued to nonexistent persons, making the corporation appear prosperous and artificially inflating the worth of its stock. These policies were sold to other insurance companies for cash and the Equity officers also profited from selling their personally owned stock. Insurance companies, stock brokers and banks among others were swindled out of millions of dollars and have filed lawsuits to attempt to recoup their losses. The corporation's president and 17 other executives have been sentenced to prison on terms ranging from three to eight years.

Snake tales

We recently killed a rattlesnake on our property in the desert and we have been told that if you cut off the head of a snake and bury it, the poison remains lethal for years. Is this so? We'd also like to know if it's true that planting rosemary all around our property will keep out snakes. W.U., San Pedro.

The answer is no on both counts. "We know of no plant that is a deterrent to snakes," said Harvey Fischer, the reptile curator at the Los Angeles Zoo. The rosemary ring is simply another one of the hundreds of myths - like the old wife's tale that rattlesnakes won't crawl over a hemp rope - that have grown around reptiles through the ages. Fischer said that the venom in a rattler's head will remain potent for a day or two, but, like all organic materials, it will rapidly deteriorate.

Old check

My brother-in-law died in the Veterans Hospital in 1968, and his wife, who is my sister, received an insurance check for $2,000 from the federal government. She still hasn't cashed this check because she says she'll spend the money if she cashes it. How long can she hold this check and still be able to cash it? R.F., Avalon.

As far as the federal government is concerned, the check is good indefinitely, but many banks will refuse to accept a check when it's that old. "The longer she holds it, the more problems she's going to have trying to cash it," said a spokesman for the Veterans Administration. He recommended that your sister try to cash the check at her bank right away, and if she's unsuccessful, she should request that a new check be issued by the government. To do this, she will have to deliver the check to the VA regional office at 11000 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, and it will take a few weeks to process a replacement check.

Up a tree

Where can I go to learn how to research my family tree? Mrs. T.C., Downey.

You can get the help you need from the Southern California Genealogical Society's Heritage Library at 600 S. Central Ave., Glendale. Library hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Wednesday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday. Marge Fahy, library director, said they sponsor two free basic genealogy classes in Long Beach with the next sessions beginning in September. You can phone her at home in Long Beach at 422-8714 or at the library, 247-1620, for further information. Another genealogical society, the Questing Heirs, meets the first Sunday of the month at Community Savings and Loan, 3901 Atlantic Ave. A free beginners class starts at 1 p.m. followed by their regular meeting at 2. Phone Myrtille Molyneux for further information. You can also research your family history at the genealogical library operated by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Mormon) in the basement of the temple, 10741 Santa Monica Blvd., West Los Angeles, 474-9990. Consultants are on duty to help beginners. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday and 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday. The Long Beach Main Library, 4500 E. Atherton St., has a genealogical section in the literature and history department.

host. The meeting was proposed two days ago by Mexico.

The meeting would address only the question of procedure, not the sanctions themselves. A subsequent meeting would be required for a formal end to the embargo.

The Cuba issue is not on the general assembly agenda but it was the dominant theme in OAS corridors. In their only formal business of the day, the foreign ministers unanimously approved a resolution expressing their "profound hope" for early U.S.-Panamanian agreement on a new canal zone treaty which confers jurisdiction over the 500-square-mile area to Panama.

The Cuba disclosures occurred just three days after Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro raised the possibility of an improvement in his long-frigid relations with the U.S.

The White House has expressed interest in Castro's statements, noting that the gestures would fill the U.S. demand for reciprocity in steps toward normalizing relations.

President Ford, serving as host at a White House reception for the ministers Saturday night, gave a brief speech but made no reference to the Cuba issue.

Ford noted that the U.S. is negotiating a new Panama Canal treaty with Panama and said the new relationship with that country "will accommodate the important interests of both our countries and all of the nations of the world dependent on the canal."

After the delegates concluded their meeting in the afternoon, a crowd of Cuban exile demonstrators estimated by police at 1,100 gathered near OAS headquarters.

MANY CARRIED signs calling on hemispheric nations not to renew relations with Cuba and to retain the embargo against the island. Other signs said, "Russia out of Cuba," "Either Cuba is saved or America is lost" and "Have you asked the Cubans?" The demonstration was peaceful.

Former Cuban President Carlos Prío Socarras called the Castro regime "a ferocious tyranny." Castro's exiled sister Juanita, who broke with the regime years ago, described it as "treacherous."

Busing ordered for 'young' pupils

BOSTON (AP) — A new integration plan shifting the emphasis of busing from older to younger children was ordered Saturday by the federal judge who originally mandated the integration of Boston's schools.

The new plan, released by U.S. District Judge W. Arthur Garrity, calls for the busing of 21,000 school children next year, 12,000 of them in grades one through five.

'Dead man' revived at St. Mary's

A 55-year-old Long Beach man, pronounced dead on arrival by doctors at St. Mary Medical Center from an apparent heart attack, was "brought back to life" Saturday night, police reported.

Officer P. J. Perez said Rex Gonis, 377 Walnut Ave., was rushed to the hospital by an ambulance after he struck his head on the dashboard of his son's auto, while the two argued as they were driving on 7th St. near Cherry Ave. at 8:30 p.m.

Perez said Doctor J. R. MacDonald pronounced Gonis dead on arrival at 8:45 p.m. and then successfully performed routine medical treatment, including cardiopulmonary resuscitation and drugs. Perez said such treatment is done routinely on the slim chance it may revive the patient.

Gonis and his son Gary, about 19, were arguing when the elder Gonis grabbed the steering wheel as the son drove, Perez said.

The son swung at his father and applied the brakes, causing the father to strike his head against the dashboard, Perez added.

When the son noticed blood coming from his father's mouth, he summoned an ambulance which rushed Gonis to the hospital, where Perez said doctors detected no pulse or breath.

Perez said it took hospital personnel about five minutes to revive vital signs.

Seoul protesters ask U.S. support

SEOUL (UPI) — South Korean demonstrators burned North Korean President Kim Il-Sung in effigy at a mass public meeting Saturday and called on the United States to "honor its defense commitment" to support them against military threats from their Communist neighbor.

The participants in the demonstration at Seoul's Yoido Plaza — estimated by the organizers at 2 million persons — coupled their appeal to President Ford with a warning to the North Korean Communists not to consider South Korea as another Indochina.

No horrors evident yet in Communist Saigon

took an overdose of medicine, his friends said.

Nguyen Xian Oanh, acting premier in 1964-65, took a room in the Caravelle Hotel after the revolutionary forces moved into the city.

High-ranking police officials, including the much feared chief of immigration during the Thieu regime, were seen drinking coffee in Givral's, the local hangout for officials.

Some Vietnamese left wives, children and mistresses behind. Whole families were separated. Others who were offered evacuation stayed because they couldn't take mothers, brothers or sisters with them.

Two Vietnamese women told me the Vietnamese men they had lived with as common-law wives had found American friends to sponsor them on flights out in the final hours and shunted the women aside.

One of the women made it out on her own. The other is still here. She is not bitter but appears resigned to living under the Revolutionary Government.

"I lived with him for nine years," she said of her husband. "An American helped him get out. He took his girlfriend — she was the second wife of a general — with him, and he also took her sister. He should have taken me instead of the sister."

Prostitutes at first-class hotels in Saigon found their way out with the Americans.

A Vietnamese newspaper editor sent his wife and children out more than a week before the takeover. She had worked for the Americans. He could have gone, too, but he believed there would be a coalition government and all would end well.

He said he thought it was his duty to stay until the last minute because he was a newsman. As the takeover came, he regretted his decision and sought a way out desperately. He may never see his family again.

"I am stupid," he said, holding back tears.

Group says tales of Red reprisals false

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A private research group charged the administration Saturday with deliberately circulating unsubstantiated and apparently false reports of Communist reprisals against Vietnamese who once allied themselves with the United States or Saigon governments.

The church-sponsored group known as the Indochina Resource Center said the administration's claims were based on State Department memos from Saigon that proved "unworthy of credibility."

There has been no hard evidence of widespread reprisals in Vietnam since the Communist takeover, it said.

The group charged that the U.S. Embassy in Saigon began collecting material last March and April to prove that the Communists were "conducting a bloodbath" in the northern provinces they had captured in South Vietnam.

"After sifting through its reports to eliminate all those that indicated a peaceful transition," it said, "the embassy then forwarded to Washington only the most extreme reports of killing of threatened killing of Saigon officials."

"The intention apparently was to paint a lurid picture of Communist reprisals that would, in the words of one embassy official, 'affect ongoing deliberations about the aid program here.'" on the embassy Friday by student demonstrators.

Laotians flee to Thailand

Saigon's Liberation Radio reported 10 generals and 1,500 other senior officers of the former Saigon army reported to Viet Cong authorities in the first few hours of a registration ordered by the military government.

The broadcast, monitored in Bangkok, also said South Vietnam has asked Singapore, the Philippines, Thailand, Indonesia and Malaysia to inform shipborne Vietnamese refugees in their waters that they are welcome to come back. About 7,500 Vietnamese refugees are reported to be aboard a number of ships in Singapore harbor.

Meanwhile, small-scale fighting between Communist forces and last-ditch holdouts still was going on in scattered sections of South Vietnam Friday, more than a week after the Communist capture of Saigon.

Military sources reported that virtually all the country, including offshore islands, was under control of the new government and that what fighting continued was away from population centers.

"Among the holdouts are troops of the 25th Division about 15 miles northwest of Saigon and a small militia unit about 20 miles southeast of the capital," the sources said.

In other Indochina developments:

—Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield said in Washington the Pathet Lao "will very likely emerge as the dominant party" in Laos without serious repercussions elsewhere in Southeast Asia. Mansfield said he expects Laos, like Cambodia, "would like to remain as isolated as possible for the purpose of rehabilitating their country."

—A Phnom Penh broadcast said the new Cambodian government wanted no foreigners in the country because the nation was "too busy rebuilding a new and clean society" to be bothered with outsiders. Experts outside Cambodia said the ban on foreigners was aimed in part at least at the North Vietnamese, historical rivals of Cambodians.

—The North Vietnamese Communist party newspaper Nhan Dan, scoffing at U.S. predictions of a bloodbath following the takeover by the new Revolutionary Government in Saigon, claimed South Vietnam now is "a sea of joy, (with) nothing of the retaliation predicted by the United States but only love and mutual understanding among people." The newspaper was quoted in a broadcast by Radio Hanoi.

—The Japanese news agency Kyodo quoted a military officer in Saigon as saying that South Vietnam's most urgent task was the "anti-U.S. education" of the people.

—Thailand, among the first to recognize the new South Vietnamese government, accused Saigon's rulers of playing "political games" and making threats because the Thais had permitted the U.S. to remove American-supplied aircraft flown to Thailand by fleeing South Vietnamese.

had "just reasons" for being off work.

However, terminated doctors won't be able to get their jobs back just by saying they supported the strike's announced goal of improving patient care, Witherill said.

Witherill had said earlier the terminated doctors would be replaced quickly. He wouldn't say how that would be done, except that "we have contingency plans for that."

Saturday's firings followed a three-hour meeting late Friday, in which striking doctors voted to continue their walkout "despite the written threats from Los Angeles County to terminate all of us."

"Quality patient care is a fundamental right for all individuals," their statement said, "and the achievement of this right requires determined struggle."

Demands of the striking doctors originally included pay increases, but by the weekend strikers said pay wasn't an immediate issue.

From a seven-page list of demands, the doctors drew five "immediate demands" as the price for an end to the walkout.

These five points included demands for the hospital's pharmacy to be open 24 hours a day, faster filling of prescriptions for intravenous injections, adequate blood bank service, faster filling of prescriptions for outpatients and other improvements in service.

The effect of the strike on hospital operations was in dispute Saturday. Simpson claimed nurses and technicians were ready to join the walkout.

However Grindell said there was no indication the nurses were ready to leave their posts.

The deputy claimed absenteeism at the hospital on most Saturdays is 10 per cent, but that on Saturday it was only 6 per cent.

William Montgomery, the hospital's associate administrator, said all emergency cases were being admitted.

Embassy, Soviet airline bombed

BERKELEY POLICE EXAMINE DAMAGE AT SITE OF BOMBING SATURDAY. —UPI

WASHINGTON (AP) — Small bombs exploded Saturday outside the Mexican Embassy and the Soviet airline Aeroflot, causing minor damage but no reported injuries.

The explosions were within 15 minutes of each other in downtown Washington, but investigators reported no clues that would connect the two bombings.

The FBI said it had entered the investigation. A spokesman said "some type of low-order explosive" was involved in both incidents. Most of the damage was broken windows.

Aeroflot opened an office here this year after the airline began service between Washington and Moscow.

In Berkeley, Calif., a loud explosion shattered windows at a Pacific Gas & Electric Co. building Friday night. No injuries were reported.

A group calling itself "The New World Liberation Front" claimed responsibility for the bombing. The group in the past has demanded free power for the poor, lower rates for persons in fixed incomes and higher rates for corporations.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: Intuition and inspiration aid you this year when momentary crises arise. You grow and change with every experience and become more self-assured. What you do now establishes definite precedents for the uncharted future. Relationships require devotion. Today's natives are responsive to their environment, should learn and adopt sound eating habits early in life.

Aries (March 21-April 19): People are prone to speak more firmly than their real convictions merit, so don't believe anything of what they say. Originality brightens even casual talks. Travel brings results.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Your financial situation improves beyond expectations while group ventures encounter differences of opinion or indecision. Secret or lost information is finally available.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Sort things out in your head if you can or at least make a list and assign priorities. There's too much to do and too little time to waste. Business and career interests surface.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): If you're giving help, give only what you are asked for — too much complicates matters. Don't expect any support for your own projects.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Watch it! Because you know people very well, you rush past them and fail to hear what they have to say. Be selective as you explore fresh contacts, seek introductions or make a few.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do as little as you can without embarrassment this morning.

Behr, Beilenson, Berryhill, Greene, Kennick, Mills, Robbins, Song, Stevens, Wetmore, Zenovich.

Malpractice — Provides for the state to establish insurance pools to assure the availability of malpractice coverage for California doctors. The measure (SB398) passed the Senate on a 32-0 vote and was sent to the governor.

Democrats for (19): Alquist, Ayala, Beilenson, Collier, Dills, Dunlap, Garcia, Gregorio, Holden, Holmdahl, Moscone, Presley, Rains, Robbins, Robert, Rodda, Smith, Stern, Wedworth.

Republicans for (13): Behr, Carpenter, Cusanovich, Deukmejian, Grunsky, Nejedlik, Richardson, Russell, Schrade, Stevens, Stull, Way, Wetmore.

PERSONAL BACKGROUND
Born in Long Beach, Larry Jones, now 28, attended local schools and graduated from Poly High School in 1965. Long Beach City College and California State University at Long Beach provided further preparation for admission to Tennessee Technological University where he graduated with a Bachelor of Science in Secondary Education, Social Science. At present he is enrolled in the graduate program of California State College, Dominguez Hills, and is working towards a Masters Degree in Elementary Education, Curriculum Development. Larry also holds a Standard California Elementary Teaching Credential.

PROFESSION
A teacher in the Long Beach Unified School District since 1971, Larry is currently serving as the Head Teacher of the Child Development Center at Hudson Elementary School in West Long Beach. Larry is a faculty representative and member of the Teachers Association of Long Beach, the California Teachers Association, and the National Education Association.

COMMUNITY ACTIVITY
Out of concern for a number of issues, Larry ran for City Council in 1972 for the seat held by then incumbent Russ Rubley. While it was his first venture into the political arena, he tallied 46% of the vote.

9th DISTRICT City Council

Responsiveness
"District meetings are an integral part of the two-way communication necessary for effective representation." Channels of communication must be opened and maintained. Availability to people is the key issue. Citizen involvement is not only desirable but essential.

Quality of Life
The quality of life should supercede commercial interests. "It is a disgraceful inadequacy of the zoning laws that leave homeowners with the hazards of heavy industry in their backyards."

Crime
"The issue of crime in Long Beach is of major concern. Police substations would add more localized service to areas of need. Our already overburdened police department must have additional patrolmen to adequately serve the needs of a city the size of Long Beach."

Impact hearing on terminal set

Maritime Editor

The Los Angeles Harbor Department will conduct a public hearing May 29 regarding proposed dredging and landfilling for facilities to receive shipments of Liquefied Natural Gas (LNG) at a 50-acre site on Terminal Island.

The hearing is being held to provide for public discussion of the draft environmental impact report relative to the proposed terminal. Safety measures to be taken by the port will be presented by Fred B. Crawford, Harbor Department general manager.

Keith McKinney, vice president and general manager of Western LNG Terminal Co. which would operate the terminal, will describe its proposed operation and the investigations already made into environmental matters and the navigational and safety features being incorporated in the new LNG carriers. The ships will be almost the size of the Queen Mary and will bring the gas, liquefied by reducing its temperature down to a minus 260 degrees, from Cook Inlet off Alaska.

The meeting is to be held in the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union Hall, 231 C St., Wilmington, at 7 p.m.

THE WATERFRONT

Long Beach handled an all-time record of 29.8 million tons of cargo valued at $5.6 billion. The Port of Los Angeles, in the same period, "hosted" 3,026 ships carrying more than 26 million tons of cargo from 50 nations throughout the world. Los Angeles International Airport (LAX) served by 36 airlines, handled 24 million passengers and 1.4 billions pounds of cargo.

World Trade Week is sponsored by the Los Angeles Area Chamber of Commerce in cooperation with the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors, the Ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach, the Los Angeles Department of Airports and the Los Angeles Clearing House Association.

Soviet charge

The president of United States Lines, which calls at the Port of Long Beach, has accused the Soviet Government-owned Fesco Pacific Line, which also calls at Long Beach, with "disruptive rate practices" in that the Soviet line charges rates below those of American flag ships.

During a recent speech in Oakland, Edward J. Heine, Jr., president of USL, urged passage of a Congressional bill which he claimed "seeks to protect national flag lines from cutthroat rate tactics of non-national flag lines."

He called for support of the so-called Third Flag Bill which was introduced by Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii. The senator's bill provides that if a third flag carrier (a line which operates between two countries other than which the ship is registered) elects to charge a rate lower than American flag vessels the shipping company must demonstrate to the U.S. Federal Maritime Commission that the rate is compensatory on a normal commercial basis.

Heine said that shippers understandably are interested in obtaining the lowest rate possible. But he said the word "possible" must be construed to fall within the framework of a commercial competitive environment.

"All we ask is to be able to compete on equal terms," Heine said.

In the case of Fesco, Heine claims, the line does not carry any cargo between U.S. ports and those in the Soviet Union.

Funding need

Congressman Glenn M. Anderson, D-San Pedro, has asked Congress to provide increased federal funding to expedite the study of San Pedro Bay, currently underway by the Army Corps of Engineers, in order to permit Los Angeles and Long Beach port officials to begin expanding port facilities.

In testimony presented to the Appropriations Committee of both houses of Congress, Anderson requested a funding for the port study for 1976 fiscal year of $925,000, more than double the $450,000 requested by the administration.

Anderson pointed out that the appropriation of an additional $475,000 would trigger millions of dollars that Los Angeles-Long Beach port officials have ready to begin construction of additional facilities in the port areas.

"Presently, there is no remaining waterfront space available for construction of new port facilities. The ports are prepared to begin expansion but cannot initiate action until the Corps of Engineers study is complete," Anderson said.

"Without additional port construction, the increased cargo volume expected to arrive in the Southern California area in the next five years will be impossible to manage.

If this study is delayed further, the Los Angeles-Long Beach area will lose countless employment opportunities," the former California lieutenant governor added.

The federal government has invested approximately $39 million in capital improvements and $3 million in maintenance dredging for navigation facilities in the San Pedro Bay from 1871 to 1971, an average of less than $500,000 per year for the largest port complex on the Pacific Coast.

"Since the federal government collects more than $495 million annually in customs cargo moving through the ports and Los Angeles International Airport, I certainly feel that an appropriation of $925,000 at this time would be an excellent investment," Anderson said.

Testifying in support of Anderson's request were Lawrence L. Whitbeck, chief engineer of the Port of Los Angeles, and Bob N. Hoffmaster, chief engineer of the Long Beach Harbor Department.

Trade Week

The 49th observance of World Trade Week, May 18-24, will emphasize the role import and export activities play on Southern California's socio-economic stage.

The slogan this year is "World Trade Bridges the World," according to Robert D. Hudson, assistant traffic manager for the Los Angeles Harbor Department, and chairman of World Trade Week '75.

"Virtually every phase of our daily existence is touched by world trade operations funneling through the Los Angeles-Long Beach 'hub.' This operation provide employment for nearly 200,000 persons directly involved by virtue of import-export operations and in sea, air cargo, truck and railroad transportation," according to Hudson.

VO'LE May 13

for LONG BEACH CITY COUNCIL

The Choice is Yours!

The members of Long Beach Area Citizens Involved think it's time we had council members who will meet with constituents in neighborhood meetings and support occasional night meetings so working people can attend. We need a Council which will protect neighborhoods from pollution and overdevelopment and stop expansion of commercial traffic at the airport. We need an aggressive campaign to stop violent crime and to oppose gambling interests setting up shop in Long Beach.

We support three incumbents on the Council because of their dedication to community needs, their responsiveness and availability to constituents and their high standards of personal integrity.

- 3rd District — Renee Simon
- 4th District — Tom Clark
- 6th District — Jim Wilson

We need more people on the Council who will meet the high standards of honesty and hard work set by Councilwoman Simon, Councilmen Clark and Wilson. Long Beach Area Citizens Involved recommends:

- 1st District — John Hanna
- 2nd District — Wallace Edgerton
- 5th District — Joann Richards
- 8th District — Wes Carroll
- 9th District — Larry Jones

Summary of Secret Witness cases

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program to date has resulted in the arrest of 42 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $31,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the caselist below, one of the selected and varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense. Rewards in all cases will remain open until such cases are closed by police or until notification appears in print that the rewards are withdrawn.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing in care of the Secret Witness post office box.

Today's summaries follow:

—Rewards totaling $3,500 — including $2,000

guaranteed by Secret Witness and $1,500 pledged by store owner Christopher Saunders — will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Duane Fetting, 29-year-old clerk shot to death during a holdup at the Melody Liquor Store, 20716 S. Normandie Ave. in the Torrance area, on the morning of Feb. 5, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Wayne W. Chiodo, 45-year-old liquor store owner shot to death during a holdup at the Willowma Liquors, 425 W. Willow St., by two armed robbers on Dec. 29, 1974.

—A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of Douglas Lee Thompson, 23-year-old fugitive from a murder warrant in connection with the holdup slaying of David W. Arouette in his television repair shop at 6465 Long Beach Blvd. on Dec. 30, 1973, with an additional reward of $1,500 to be paid when and if Thompson is convicted of the murder.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of 26-year-old James D. Johnson, of Long Beach, found fatally wounded by two shotgun blasts fired in a beach-front public restroom at the foot of Eighth Place on the night of Oct. 7, 1974.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 47-year-old Shirley Claire Isselhardt, found shot to death and locked in the trunk of a car left parked in the Los Altos Shopping Center at 2270 Bellflower Blvd. in Long Beach on Sept. 1, 1974.

—A $500 reward will be paid for the arrest and robbery conviction of the bandit who held up the Farmers & Merchants bank branch at 3140 E. Anaheim St. on April 8, 1975, and the Bank of America branch at 2000 E.

Anaheim on April 11, 1975. He is described as a white man about 30 years old, 6 feet tall, 190 pounds, with a brown mustache and brown hair.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of nine young men whose bodies, most of them sexually mutilated and one decapitated, were found throughout a wide area of the Southland beginning on Dec. 26, 1972.

—A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and robbery conviction of any suspect taking a purse by force or threats in a street robbery.

—A $1,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and robbery conviction of the armed bandits who took $202,000 in jewelry and cash from the Imperial Jewelry Manufacturing

Co. of Long Beach on Feb. 21, 1974.

—A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the burglars who broke into the National Guard Armory across the street from the Compton City Hall on July 4, 1974, and took rifles, machine guns, grenade launchers, grenades, gas masks and ammunition.

How to become Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

This is how the last page of your "Secret Witness" letter should look after you have typed or printed your information about a crime.

DO NOT SIGN YOUR NAME. Instead, select a code name for yourself . . . any name, as long as it's not your own . . . and place it and a code number at the bottom of your letter. The code number should combine three letters and three numbers in any combination.

Tear off and keep a corner of the last page, with the same code name and number on it. Mail your letter to "Secret Witness," P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, 90801.

Lakeshore Apartments popular

LAKE VIEWS FROM PRIVATE PATIO AT LAKESHORE

Construction is now complete and renting is under way at Lakeshore Tennis Club Apartments in Santa Ana. This unit development of John D. Lusk & Son features one- and two-bedroom apartments with fireplaces, overlooking a large central lake.

"Most of our residents are young couples in the 25 to 35 year old age group," reports Gerald Mooney, rental agent. "Aside from the recreational facilities we have here, they seem especially impressed by the fireplaces and the large private patios and balconies. We've already rented over two-thirds of the units."

FACILITIES at Lakeshore Tennis Club Apartments include night-lighted tennis courts, a swimming pool and whirlpool, sand volley ball court shuffleboard and recreation center.

The recreation center has an open beam ceiling and houses the sauna plus a billiard room, game room with wet bar and a loft lounge with a color television and fireplace. A table tennis area is located by the pool, and gas barbecues are placed throughout the grounds.

Rental for the one-bedroom apartments are as low as $195 per month. The two-bedroom models start at $225. Some units are still available on a furnished basis. Three floor plans are available, each with a private patio or balcony and large walk-in storage area.

Other interior features include individual air conditioning, and kitchens with a separate dining area and pass through service counter. Kitchens are equipped with gas appliances and dishwasher.

LAKESHORE Tennis Club Apartments are close to both the San Diego and Newport freeways, placing them convenient to the Newport and Balboa marinas and restaurants.

The adult community is located in the area of South Coast Plaza. Take the San Diego Freeway to Fairview Street and drive north about a mile and a half to the decorated models at 2877 Fairview.

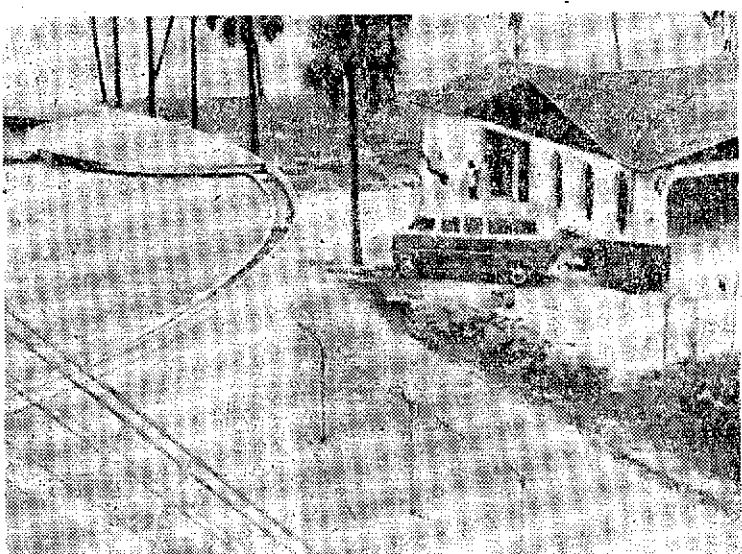

Decorated models may be seen daily from 10 to 6, and after 6 by appointment. For an appointment phone (714) 540-0770.

Beachwalk: Five plans

Unusual design variations within five different floorplans are available at Beachwalk, A.J. Hall's new townhome development at Huntington Seaciff, located within 1,500 yards of the Huntington Beach shoreline. One and two story plans have two, three and four bedrooms with two 2½ and three deluxe baths.

Five furnished models are open daily at the site displaying the long list of luxury features included with each plan.

Prices range from $48,000. Exteriors, accented by Bermuda shutters, have wood shingle roofs and trim. Townhomes are arranged along private streets displaying heavy landscaping.

No friend next door

When the wind is right Frank Riggs' new $80,000 home on the St. John's River in Jacksonville, Fla., is sprayed with a fine mist from a newly constructed sewage treatment plant next door! Riggs said it smelled like "being inside a toilet." The plant and home construction started within days of each other and there's no plan for relocating either. "Somebody's house has to be next to the sewage plant," said Jim Arnold, the city's Consumer Board director.

Huntington Landmark offers $1,000 credit

A customizing allowance credit of from $750 to $1000 is now being offered buyers at Huntington Landmark, adult condominium community in Huntington Beach.

This special program, offered for a limited time only, will allow buyers in the recently opened second phase to do a number of things with their credits. Options for the credit allowance could include: An upgrading of carpet selections; adding of wall coverings; adding appliances; adding draperies or similar customizing new home touches.

It is also possible to apply the allowance toward the buyers closing cost requirement sales counselors advised. Complete information regarding this special program is available at the sales and information center.

BILL MARKAS, sales manager at the Huntington Landmark condominium community reports that carefree living, active adults continue to be attracted to the beach-close homes.

"One of the reasons for the popularity enjoyed by this active adult group is our fabulous million dollar recreational center," Markas added.

The complex may be reached from the San Diego Freeway by taking either Magnolia Street or Beach Blvd. south to Atlanta. From the Pacific Coast Highway, take Beach Blvd. north to Atlanta.

Builder Levitt ponders on 'quarter-billion-dollar mistake'

By STANLEY JOHNSON

NEW YORK (AP) — Shirtsleeved in his walnut-paneled office at Lake Success, his advice unasked and his presence ignored, multimillionaire William J. Levitt threw up his hands over the collapse of his building empire since its takeover by the ITT conglomerate.

"Levitt and Sons should not have been bought by ITT," he told an interviewer. "It was an error."

The business world calls it the "quarter-billion-dollar mistake" — although the loss is so far over $400 million — and the inevitable postmortems are on as to what caused it.

"ITT STARTED trying to call the shots," wrote the April issue of McGraw-Hill's House and Home. "Levitt's building captains walked out. Ventures into modulars and apartments went bad. Unsold land accumulated like a creeping desert. Suddenly the world's greatest building company became a shambles ..."

Chairman Harold Genen acquired Levitt and Sons builders of Long Island's and other "Levitt towns," for ITT in 1968, primarily because of its "almost unlimited worldwide and domestic growth potential," at a cost in stock of $92 million.

By September, 1971 ITT was happy to sign a consent decree under which it would divest itself of Levitt and Sons and some other companies in return for the right to keep the Hartford Fire Insurance Co.

This was despite the fact that in 1971 the Levitt and Sons Division of ITT had record earnings of $11.9 million on $300 million in sales.

THINGS GOT worse — with ITT still unable to find a buyer. In 1973 Levitt and Sons lost $14.3 million. In 1974 the loss was $20.3 million.

Victor Palmieri & Co. were named trustees of the building corporation by a U.S. court. Their men entered headquarters this January and House and Home reported they found a post-earthquake situation with no survivors to question.

"The building was there. And it was inhabited. But not by builders," the magazine reported.

ITT, meanwhile, had assumed $163 million of Levitt's debt and, accountants said, the venture into the building field cost the conglomerate more than $428 million.

"The system Genen so successfully built up does not apply to Levitt and Sons," Levitt said, summing up.

"In an entrepreneurial enterprise such as this, the rigid system of controls necessary to a conglomerate like Genen's just won't work."

"It work beautifully with routine, repetitious business; you can run hotels with it, you can rent cars with it, you can make refrigerators with it."

"BUT YOU CAN'T build homes with it.

"I think Genen had good intentions. Levitt and Sons was to become a billion-dollar company — that was his ambition, and mine, in the beginning."

"We were going to build all over the world."

Levitt said he became more and more disillusioned as time went on:

"All the ITT people who are here now are very able people," he said, "but they're not experienced people. And there's no manual they can refer to. We wrote the book on high-volume building." Levitt became so disillusioned, in fact, that he backed out of an agreement to buy back the company once he had a look at the ITT-kept books.

"We found we were buying something planned and produced mostly by amateurs," he said.

Another buyer has not been found and the trustees reported to the U.S. District Court in April that Levitt and Sons will be "an unprofitable and capital-absorbing operation for the indefinite future."

At the moment, the trustees said, the company is spending $10.8 million more than it is currently taking in. Under terms of the decree, ITT is underwriting losses which may well become half a billion dollars.

Five days left on Chateau's 7.9% interest deal

This is the final week-end to take advantage of low 7.9 per cent interest rate at Rossmore Chateau, adult condominiums in Seal Beach, developers aides reported.

This favorable rate will be in effect until Thursday. Counselors advised area homebuyers to visit the models while a good selection is available.

Prices range from $45,450 to $59,950. Viewers are reminded that the $45,450 price purchased a spacious, full size two bedroom, two bath luxury unit.

The Chateau is a new all adult condominium home project of National Mills Associates. Furnished models are open from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. and are on display at 12400 Montecito Road, adjacent to the Rossmore Business and Shopping Plaza.

THE 70-UNIT development is valued at $3.5 million. Five different floor plan arrangements are offered in one bedroom with convertible den, two or three bedrooms and two bath plans. Units are available on the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th floors of the Regency styled building.

Recreational amenities include a heated swimming pool, sauna, therapeutic whirlpool and fully equipped gymnasium.

Bernie Solomon, owner of Mills Construction Co. and joint venture partner with National Life Insurance Co. of Vermont called particular attention to the security features.

"We have installed a unique building, security system," Solomon said. "It provides a combination of closed circuit television of both paneled and furnished lobby areas and special monitor screens that are tied into a built-in intercom system," he added. Parking is underground, accessible through electrically controlled security gates.

The condominium concept of leisure living is available via the residents homeowners association.

INTERIORS INCLUDE a selection of nylon carpeting throughout, except kitchens and baths, central air conditioning with individual thermostats, fireplaces, luminous kitchen ceilings and custom hardware and lighting fixtures. Kitchens are all-electric and feature range, oven, disposal, dishwasher, cast iron terraced sinks and copper plumbing. All units feature acoustically planned sound proofing and "Quiet Control" insulation.

Common balconies and courtyard areas are carpeted with "astro turf" type carpeting. Garden-view patios, or view balconies are offered. Fireplaces are included in all plans as are convenient kitchen pantries.

To reach the Chateau from the San Diego Freeway, take the Los Alamitos Blvd., exit north to Saint Cloud Drive. Then left to the furnished models at Saint Cloud and Montecito Road.

ROOMS ARRANGED FOR LUXURY

Westport Cerritos offers move-in now

Immediate occupancy and excellent financing terms are available at Westport Cerritos Villas, a residential development of one and two story villa homes in Cerritos.

Prices for the villa homes start at $25,650, and buyers are invited to take advantage of conventional, FHA or no down VA financing, as well as low cost Cal-Vet terms.

"Low financing terms and immediate occupancy are only a part of the package homebuyers will find at Westport Cerritos Villas," according to Merrill Pugmire, director of marketing for Westport Home Builders, Inc., builder-developer of the $13.5 million project.

"The two and three bedroom homes have a long list of price-included features such as wall-to-wall carpeting in major areas, vinyl tile flooring in secondary areas, all built-in kitchen appliances including dishwasher, and much more.

"THE LOCATION of the project is convenient, in the heart of the triangle formed by the Artesia, Garden Grove and Santa Ana Freeways. Schools, shopping, entertainment and business are all within easy reach," Pugmire added.

"There are two recreation centers with heated swimming pools, shaded cabanas, poolside seating and children's play area. A homeowners association provides maintenance of the communities common areas giving residents more time to enjoy all that the community has to offer," he concluded.

To see the residential development, ideally situated in the close-in city of Cerritos, exit the Artesia Freeway at Norwalk or Bloomfield Boulevard and drive north to 166th Street. Westport Cerritos Villas is on 166th, between Norwalk and Bloomfield. Sales representatives are on the premises daily.

Offers 'turn-key' homes

Fully decorated units are offered for sale at Desert Village in Rancho Mirage. "All you have to do is turn the key and walk-in to comfortable living," stated B. J. Mahan, project manager. "Everything is ready for you except dishes, silverware and cooking utensils," Mahan continued.

Desert Village Townhomes, starting at $33,450, have three floor plans available in one and two-story models featuring one bedroom and den with one-and-one-half baths, and two bedrooms with two baths.

ALL HOMES have a secluded walled patio and covered parking.

The homeowners association maintains a clubhouse recreation center.

Desert Village is located at 41-925 Bob Hope Drive in Rancho Mirage. It can be reached by taking Highway 111 to Bob Hope Drive, then north for half mile.

Shopping Center to open near Deane Homes

Announcement that a large neighborhood shopping center will open before the middle of the year within walking distance of Deane Homes in University Park has been well received by visitors to the residential community in Irvine.

The shopping center will join such existing amenities as a five-acre private park, with two tennis courts and a large swimming pool, a series of greenbelts interlaced throughout the community, a 345-acre regional park across the street from the Deane Home series, along with a full range of school facilities, from grammar through university level.

The new grammar school is located adjacent to the development, while the junior high is across the street.

A MAJOR chain market, restaurant, bank and cleaners will be located in the shopping center, along with other highly desirable service and supply shops.

Deane Homes in University Park are located a short distance from Fashion Island, one of southern California's largest and most attractive regional shopping centers.

Newport Harbor is also just a short drive from the Deane Home development.

Four floorplans, ranging in size from 1,430 to 2,146 square feet, with prices starting at $60,000, are offered in the Deane University Park series.

THE SINGLE story "Walden" offers two bedrooms and two baths, designed around a dramatic entry promenade. The kitchen is bracketed by the formal dining area on one side, and a roomy breakfast area on the other.

The three bedroom, two bath "Bendemeer," also a one story plan, contains an atrium and a truly distinctive planter inside the entry. Two of the plan's bedrooms have walk-in closets.

THIRD OF the Deane University Park plans is the two-story "Candlewood" with three bedrooms and two and one-half baths — available with an optional fourth bedroom, third full bath and service room. This model's two-story living room and vaulted, open-beam ceiling above the master suite, draws constant praise from visitors.

Largest of the plans offered by Deane Homes in University Park is the two-story "Kensington," with its four bedrooms and three baths — with a five-bedroom option available.

A spectacular gallery connects the two wings of the second level, crossing through the two-story-high living room entryway combination. An atrium adjacent to the living and dining rooms is just one distinctive feature of the Kensington.

Deane University Park models are open daily from 10 a.m. until dusk. The models may be reached by taking the Culver Drive offramp from either the Santa Ana or the San Diego freeways and traveling southwest, toward Newport Beach. Turn left on University Drive and travel about a mile to the entrance.

Riviera Huntington

$2,000 saving seen on new tax credit

Buyers of Riviera Huntington Condominiums in Huntington Beach can save up to $2000 since RH qualifies for the just enacted federal income tax credit.

"The credit was provided by the Tax Reduction Act of 1975 and now is included as Section 44 of the Internal Revenue Code," said Virg Foland, RH sales manager.

"The IRS has also released regulations explaining the details," Foland said. "It should be stressed that this is a direct dollar-for-dollar tax credit, not a deduction."

OTHER DETAILS: The credit is 5 per cent of the purchase price of a new residence, up to a maximum of $2,000; construction of the home must have been started before March 26, 1975; the home must be purchased and occupied after March 12, 1975 and before Jan. 1, 1977; a binding contract for the purchase must be entered before Jan. 1, 1976.

To utilize the tax credit, a buyer must attach to his return a certificate from the builder that the home was sold at the lowest price at which it was ever offered.

"Our homes are fully qualified," Foland concluded, "which means that buyers can effectively recover the 5 per cent down payment."

Prices range from $32,500, with excellent conventional financing terms, including 5 per cent down and 8 1/2 per cent interest.

THE SALES office is located now in the community's clubhouse at the center of the project.

The site is easily reached by taking the Bolsa Chica exit off the San Diego Freeway and driving south to the homesite. Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily.

S&L inflows taper down in April

Net savings inflows into California, Arizona and Nevada savings and loan associations appear to have tapered off from the record-breaking levels of 1975's first quarter, but still are likely to have topped $400 million in April, according to the Federal Home Loan Bank of San Francisco, Business Wire reported.

The bank's estimate is based on a survey of S&Ls holding more than two-thirds of total savings capital in the three-state 11th District.

What's Your Problem?

Variable rate mortgages likely fall possibility

By DON CAMPBELL.
"Pity the Poor Mortgage-Lender Month?" Is this the state of affairs in which we find ourselves as the housing market struggles in a weak economy to make ends meet? So it would seem.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: I've been alarmed recently because I am in the market for a new home and have been hearing a lot about a new gimmick that would let the mortgage lender raise the rates on my mortgage any time he puts his mind to it. What kind of a racket is this? And how come the consumer groups aren't raising the roof about it? — Mr. L. G.F. (Allentown, Pa.)

ANSWER: What you hear is quite true: after periodically surfacing for years with the regularity of spring crocuses, the mortgage lending industry is finally about to get its way on the matter of variable rate home mortgages. At least, it's a near-certainty by about September unless Congress specifically prohibits it. That's when the Federal Home Loan Board (FHLB) is currently planning to authorize savings and loan associations to write home mortgages in which the interest rate will fluctuate, up or down, in accordance with current money rates. Naturally, it's a major break-through of an historic money-lending principle — that when you agree to X per cent interest on the money you've borrowed, and have agreed to repay over X number of years, then that's it. You'll never pay any less, and you'll never pay any more. Why lenders have long wanted variable rates is pretty obvious: lending money out for 20 years at 6 per cent is a losing proposition if, after three or four years, they're having to pay depositors that much simply to leave their money with the S and L. But, in all fairness, it's not quite the rip-off, from the home buyer's standpoint, that it seems to be. When interest rates do skyrocket, mortgages become an unprofitable operation and so the supply of money simply dries up and the would-be home buyer is left out in the cold. Under a variable rate mortgage (VRM), the home buyer isn't quite as much at the mercy of the mortgage lender as you picture him as being. It's true, of course, that if you take out a mortgage at the current rate (about 8½ to 9 per cent), and if interest rates were to go even higher (based on some FHLB-approved yardstick — possibly tied to the prime rate), then twice a year your lender could adjust your interest rate upward. As it now stands, this would be limited to one-half of 1 per cent at a time with a ceiling over the life of the mortgage of 2½ per cent. Conceivably you might shoulder a mortgage today calling for 8½ per cent interest and, before the house is paid off, you might see this go to 11 per cent. All is not lost! Since the rate is rigidly tied to the FHLB's yardstick, your mortgage interest would also have to come down when as general money rates decline. In the case of an increase in your rate, the lender would have to give you notice, 45 days in advance, of any such increase and you would then have the option of deciding how you wish to pay it: either by accepting higher monthly principal and interest payments, or by keeping your monthly payments at their present level and having the life of the mortgage extended. Sure, the lender is the bigger winner in all this, but the home buyer isn't being ripped-off as badly as it seems on the surface. DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: The selling price of my home at the present market may sell at $30,000. The actual cost to build it in 1946 was much less. My question is, if I transfer the property to my daughter in a survivorship clause, do I have to pay a conveyance tax? What is a conveyance tax? What is an inheritance tax? Is there a certain amount allowed to be given as a gift? — Mrs. J.V.C. (Long Beach)

putting the house in your, and your daughter's, name as "joint tenants," which is the best way for you to go. Under this arrangement the entire property, immediately on your death, becomes your daughter's. From a tax standpoint, the government takes the position that this is a gift and that you have given your daughter the equivalent of one-half of the property. There shouldn't be any inheritance (estate), gift or conveyance taxes involved because nothing is really being "conveyed" (your daughter automatically owns the house), and because of other exclusions permitted by law. You'd better check with a local attorney, though, because you may not have given me all of the facts that might arise in the event of your death. There are also variances between state laws in a situation like this. DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: I have just purchased a 24-unit apartment building and am unclear as to whether or not I should have written leases for the tenants. The previous owner didn't have, but friends have told me that this can be dangerous. — Mrs. W. O.Y. (Buffalo, N.Y.)

ANSWER: Most state laws require that leases running longer than a year must be in writing; leases up to a year may be oral. From a practical standpoint, month-to-month tenants are easier to attract than tenants who are willing to sign a written one-year lease. But on the other hand, you as the landlord have a lot more protection with a written lease where the conditions and the responsibility of both parties are carefully spelled out.

Paciorek ready, willing, able

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

PITTSBURGH—Naturally, Tom Paciorek thought it was a joke Saturday when 10 minutes before the game coach Monty Bangall told him to get ready, that he was playing right field.

"I had an ice cream in one hand and a Pepsi in the other," Paciorek said later.

"I'd already run about three miles before coming to the ballpark and I ate everything I could get my hands on. Just the right thing to do on a day when you're playing."

Dodger of day
TOM PACIOREK homered and singled twice in 6-2 victory over Pirates.

Wimpy's training program may not be for everyone, but it suits him fine.

He drilled his first homer of the season, a three-run shot his first up, and added two singles to lift the Dodgers to a 6-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Doug Rau benefited from Paciorek's big day as he posted his fifth victory in six decisions—and his fourth in a row—despite giving up 10 Pittsburgh hits.

It was only because of a back ailment suffered by Steve Yeager, later diagnosed as pleurisy, that got Paciorek only his second start of the season and first in three weeks.

"I'd have to say I was well-rested," he said in his customary good-natured manner after leading the Dodgers' 10-hit attack.

"I probably would have fouled up everything if I'd known last night I was playing today. But finding out 10 minutes before the game, well, I was pretty loose out there."

He banged a 2-2 pitch against the concrete facade high above the left-field fence for his first homer of the year—as well as his first runs batted in—to give Rau a 3-0 advantage in the second inning, a lead he never surrendered although at times it was precarious.

In the third inning, after the Bucs had scored once and had a runner at third with two out, Rau got Wilver Stargell on a called third strike.

"I said to myself, 'it's now or never,'" Rau said.

But his biggest strikeout was in the seventh, when the Dodgers led, 5-2. There were two out, but the Pirates had a runner at second, dangerous Al Oliver was the hitter and Stargell, representing the tying run, was next.

Rau wiffed Oliver on a fast ball.

"It was the best one I threw all day," said the confident lefthander, who has now pitched three successive complete games.

"That," he said of the string, "gives me more personal satisfaction than anything else. I'd been dubbed a weak pitcher, a guy who couldn't go nine. I really don't know why, either. My first year (1970 at Bakersfield) I started 15 games and completed 11. It's no different now."

Yes and no. In Bakersfield the batters weren't Stargell and Oliver and Zisk. Simply, Rau has become an outstanding pitcher and the Dodgers' one-two is now a one-two-three.

"It's really something," he said when asked about the Dodger streak. "I used to dream about this...pitching with three $100,000 pitchers—Sutton, Messersmith and Marshall

College football's crisis

Can you imagine an autumn Saturday with no college football?

Impossible, you think. Not really. The nation's colleges and universities, buffeted by the recession and battered by economic hard times, are in a financial crisis, and so are their athletic programs.

Inflation has bent budgets to the breaking point; colleges are searching frantically for ways to the proposals into workable legislation. It is significant that of the 53 invited delegates to the conference, 11 were college or university presidents.

"If we don't do something about costs," said one athletic director, "the presidents of the schools most certainly will."

Robert B. Kamm, president of Oklahoma State University, was one of the delegates at last month's NCAA economy meeting.

"The boom of the '60s is over," he told school athletic officials, "not only for athletics, but for the entire university community. Tough times are ahead for all of higher education. We must establish priorities in every area."

At Oklahoma State, Kamm said, a self-study program is underway to locate areas that can offer economies. "We may be eliminating some academic programs, some doctoral programs, maybe even some major fields of study."

He did not mention athletic cuts, but the message was clear.

Only three sports earn money at the collegiate level. They are football, basketball and hockey. The remaining programs—tennis, golf, track, baseball, wrestling, fencing, etc.—are in the area of non-revenue sports, meaning they are paid for by the moneymakers.

But the income from revenue sports has been dwindling because of the expenses they incur, and that poses a major part of the cost-cutting dilemma. The schools have been reluctant to tamper in revenue-producing areas, yet the simple fact is that the income sports are the same ones that cost the most to support.

"Three years ago, our football team took a plane trip to play a game at Illinois," said Fuzak, an associate dean at Michigan State's College of Education. "That trip cost $7,600. Two years later, that same trip cost $13,000. That is an example of what we are up against."

The American Football Coaches Association surveyed its membership on the problem of economics. A large number of the members were agreeable to placing limits on recruiting practices, reducing the number of scholarships, limiting the number of coaches on their staffs and cutting traveling squads.

Darrell Royal, head coach at the University of Texas and president of the coaches' organization, endorsed his group's opinions.

Buckle down, Winsocki, or die

cut costs. That search often begins in the athletic department, where the slicing usually cuts deepest.

Some schools already have dropped football; others have sharply curtailed their involvement. For those still playing, cutbacks are almost certain.

The major changes may eventually include a return to one-platoon football in which players must compete on both offense and defense. Other economies include sharply reduced recruiting and slashes in the number of scholarships granted.

"We believe intercollegiate athletics are at the turning point," said John Fuzak of Michigan State University, president of the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

"Our collegiate athletic programs are the envy of the world," he said. "It is incumbent upon us to come up with positive and appropriate ways to cut costs while still maintaining the high level of our programs."

The NCAA has recognized the

problem for some time. There have been formal proposals for cost cutting presented to the group's annual convention every year since 1970. But until now the proposals never have been acted upon.

A special select meeting on the economy last month offered specific approaches to the problem, and a special convention of the NCAA will be convened in August to turn

Tanana buttons up Red Sox, 2-0

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

On Jacket Night at Anaheim Stadium, Frank Tanana threw a blanket around the Boston Red Sox and suffocated their six-game winning streak.

With an appreciative audience of 43,113 looking on—second-largest in Anaheim Stadium history—Tanana smartly dispatched the Sox on four hits while attaining a career-high 13 strikeouts as the Angels prevailed, 2-0.

"That's about numero uno," Tanana said of his effort, which was as fast as it was masterful. It took the 21-year-old sophomore only 114 pitches—an amazing 88 of which were strikes—and one hour and 41 minutes to roll up the Sox.

"It all came together tonight," Tanana said after his second win in as many verdicts.

Restrained earlier this year by a groin injury and a hamstring pull, Tanana reported no twinges or aches and remarked, "I had everything a pitcher could hope for—rhythm, speed and velocity."

Manager Dick Williams was equally impressed. "I've never seen him throw better," he said.

Angel of day
FRANK TANANA pitched four-hitter and fanned 13 as Angels blanked Boston, 2-0.

"He took complete charge. He started to do that at the end of last season, but not in this fashion."

Tanana, who had never struck out more than 10 in a game, finished with a flourish, striking out the side in the ninth to give the Angels their fifth shut-out of the season, a statistic that leads the American League.

The Red Sox are still looking for their first run off Tanana. In his only start against them in his rookie season of 1974, Tanana blanked Boston 5-0 on a seven-hitter.

The Angels were still looking for their first hit and first baserunner against Luis Tiant in the sixth inning when it all came together nicely for the offense.

After Tiant had set down the first 15 Angels batters in rapid and crafty succession and had extended his string of scoreless innings against them to 23, the Angels managed to push across the only two runs of the night.

A.J. Foyt still the fastest at Indy — 193.976 mph

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A.J. Foyt, who waved off an early attempt as too slow, found an extra 6 mph on a sizzling track Saturday and locked up his fourth Indianapolis 500 pole position.

The three-time Indianapolis winner's four-lap, 10-mile average of 193.976 mph knocked Gordon Johncock, the shy, almost forgotten winner of the ill-fated 1973 race, out of the top spot he had held for more than two hours.

Foyt pulled off his early run after being clocked at a relatively slow 189.125. His top lap four hours later was an eye-popping 195.313—the fastest circuit in two years at the speedway.

Between the two runs, Foyt worked feverishly on his gleaming new Coyote to bring it up to desirable speed. His older car, which he drove to victories at Ontario and Trenton, had been faster in practice.

ing without a pass. However, the hare proved as tough to catch as A.J. Foyt. Nobody was able to catch either of them.

A.D. SIGNS WITH SUN

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

USC all-America Anthony Davis, sought by professional football teams in three leagues but ignored by his hometown Rams, has cast his lot with the Southern California Sun, the Independent, Press-Telegram learned Saturday night.

Terms were not made known, but sources said that Davis signed with the resurrected World Football League team last week and the announcement will come this week.

The New York Jets had selected Davis on the second round of the National Football League draft in January, and the Rams drew criticism for bypassing him four times.

Through his agent, Michael Trope, he also had been negotiating with the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League.

The WFL conducted no draft of college players this year and won't even assign "priority lists" until May 15 in Birmingham so, technically, any other WFL club might have signed Davis.

Last week this possibility was proposed to Sun president Larry Hatfield, who responded, "Not unless they want us to withdraw from the league!"

It is likely that Davis already was agreed to terms, if not signed. Davis' contract is believed to be for a three-year term and Trope indicated earlier that he was negotiating "in the same (financial) area" of the six-year, $1.5 million pact he recently renegotiated for Montreal Johnny Rodgers.

OLDFIELD PUTS 'UNRECORD' 75-0

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI) — Brian Oldfield threw the shot farther than any man in history Saturday—uncorking a heave of 75 feet at an International Track Association meet.

The toss will not be recognized by the International Amateur Federation, which sanctions world records, but Oldfield's throw was more than three feet past the current world record of 71-7 owned by Al Feurbach.

The IAF does not consider performances by professional track athletes to be eligible for international recognition as world records.

Oldfield, on his fifth throw, cracked the mark with a toss of 73-0½ and then unleashed the 75-foot effort on his sixth and final throw of the competition.

"I told my mother I wanted to do it for her as a Mother's Day present," Oldfield said. "After I beat the record the first time I decided to try to boost it higher."

The long throw was first measured with a plastic tape and was thought to be 74-11½. But when the heave was measured with a steel tape it was found to be an even 75 feet.

In another spectacular performance, Rod Milburn ran the 120-yard high hurdles in 13.0, the fourth time in his career he has turned in such a time. Milburn set the world record at 13.0 as an amateur.

Lance Babb finished second to Milburn in 13.1, becoming only the second man in track history to run the race that fast.

Paula Murphy does her thing

Motherhood can be a drag

"The more feminine wiles you can assert on a man, the more they'll do for you. The you go right out there and blow their doors off!"

The most unusual race driver you'll ever meet is the one who admits to fear, has no ambition to drive at Indianapolis and loves to cook and crochet.

Appropriate with Mother's Day, she is Paula Murphy, and this isn't to say that she has little in common with A.J. Foyt.

Male or female, vanity survives in Gasoline Alley. Ever notice how when Foyt climbs out of a race car he swaps his helmet for a Goodyear cap in a quick, single motion so as not to display the bald spots?

"I tell everyone," says Paula, "please take all your pictures before I get into the car. Oh, I've got some classics...falling out of cars with my hair just plastered to my head. It looks horrible."

PAULA IS STARTING her 13th season as Miss STP, a role that involves considerably more than standing around the pits looking pretty, which she does quite well even as her 47th birthday approaches.

But she also has driven a fuel funny car faster than 200 mph and a rocket-propelled vehicle 258 mph and this year will campaign a production Honda Civic and a turbocharged Datsun at major drag meets around the country.

Indianapolis? She's done that. Sort of.

When she joined STP in 1963, the man himself, Andy Granatelli, thought it would be a good publicity gimmick to have her drive one of his Novi cars, the noisy old lemons that became Indy legends although their accomplishments never came near their promise.

"It was during tire testing," Paula recalls, "and Don Branson and Eddie Sachs and quite a few of the drivers were there. Of course, they all stood around and watched."

"I had never sat in the thing before, but they sat me in it, fired me up and pushed me off. Even Andy's brother Vince said, 'No way is she going to be able to drive this car. Her leg isn't strong enough to handle the clutch.' All the drivers were betting that I would never make it out of the pits."

"But I drove off just like I knew what I was doing. Then when I got around in the back straight I couldn't shift the thing. Finally, I took both hands off the steering wheel and grabbed the shifter with both hands and said, 'Either I'm gonna do it or I'm gonna rip this transmission right out of here. I made it around okay.'"

PAULA WAS clocked at a cool 120 mph, not bad for those days, but without what she calls "a proper learning period," she realized that Indy was a bit more than she was ready to handle—Bite your tongue! Gloria Steinem would say.

Paula, no crusader, just says, "I've been doing my own thing since long before they put the two words—Women's Liberation—together. But why shouldn't a woman do what she wants to do?"

RICH ROBERTS

She was married with a young son and working as a secretary in Los Angeles when she saw her first racing program, which happened to include an event for women.

"I thought you must have to be a pretty strong gal to do that," says Paula, who is 5-8 and 135. "Later, I found out that wasn't so and I got hooked."

"The field was really untapped, as far as women competing with men, but it's been carried off quite well by those of us who persevered. It took some talking along the way, but being a woman definitely was an advantage, too. When I ran the funny car for nine years we were paid appearance money to race. People would say, 'Oh, a woman driving a funny car—that would be great.'"

"I've been very well accepted, mainly because I've always tried to conduct myself as a very feminine lady."

Paula smiles sweetly. "I felt that the more feminine wiles you can assert on a man, the more they'll do for you. Then you go right out there and blow their doors off!"

PAULA IS NOW divorced and the son, Danny, 24, is her chief mechanic. Paula can hardly tell clunk-clunk from clank-clank.

"I don't do a thing to the car," she says, "except polish it a little."

There are plans to produce a movie of Paula's career.

"I'll be the technical advisor and have the final say," she says, "and I'm going to reproduce the driving scenes—except for the rocket car crash."

Late in 1973 she sustained a broken neck vertebra at Sears Point near San Francisco when the throttle on the wheeled projectile stuck wide-open and her braking chute tore away, sending her off the course at 250 mph before flipping end over end. Paula was commended for "calmly" steering through a 14-foot hole in the fence and onto bumpy grassland that slowed her down.

"Shoot," she says, "I didn't know where I was going. I probably screamed. I saw some of the safety crew going down at the end of the strip and said wow, I'm going to hit those guys. So I turned the wheel a little and that aimed me down a path and through the gate."

PAULA WENT HOME to Granada Hills to recuperate, trying to fill the time looking after Danny and her father, a retired mechanical engineer.

She crocheted. "Potholders, jackets that were too big...other things that were too small."

She cooked. "I have about 40 cookbooks and sort of fancy myself as a gourmet cook, when I have the time to do it."

She brooded. "I thought it was all over with, and I was very depressed."

"I rebuilt the rocket car and kept saying to everyone that I was going to drive it again, but I knew really deep down that it had scared me so bad I couldn't possibly think about getting in a car like that again."

Paula admits to her age but doesn't need to. She is one race driver that could be correctly described as vivacious and reveals that Raquel Welch has been mentioned for the lead in her movie. With proper makeup, there could be a resemblance.

"Oh," says Paula, her dark eyes brightening, "where?"

Allen: Heist or a big headache?

By TOM WILT
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Is the Dick Allen trade the biggest heist since the Brinks armored car robbery, or is it the start of a gigantic migraine for the Philadelphia Phillies?

On paper it looks like the Phillies, who got Allen from the Atlanta Braves Wednesday, pulled off one of the biggest trading coups in recent years.

Philadelphia gave up minor leaguers Jim Essian and Barry Bonnell, a minor league prospect to be named later and an unspecified amount of money for Allen and catcher Johnny Oates.

Allen, who began his professional career in the Philadelphia organization in ed that the Phillies eventually gave up on Dick Allen, trading him to the St. Louis Cardinals in 1969 for Curt Flood.

That trade was the beginning of Allen's hop-scotch from one team to another. He went to the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1970, was traded to the Chicago White Sox the next year, and, after saying he was retiring last year, traded to Atlanta.

No one ever questioned Allen's playing ability. He almost carried the Phillies to a pennant in 1964, hitting .318 with 29 homers and 91 RBI. In 12 seasons, he has a lifetime average of .300, has hit 319 home runs and drive in 977 runs.

BUT ALMOST everywhere Dick Allen has stopped to put on a baseball uniform, his attitude has been questioned. It began in Philadelphia where Allen had a tempestuous love-hate relationship with the fans, the news media and management.

Allen had his own set of rules with the Phillies the first time around. He enjoyed a privileged status in Philadelphia and many of his coaches and managers, both here and on other teams, said they didn't care what he did off the field as long as he produced on the field.

The records show that Allen did produce. They also show he left ruffled feelings at almost every stop along his career by failing to come to practices and by showing up late for games.

Often the feelings were expressed subtly by players who had to follow the rules. But management usually passed off the Allen antics. The man with the big bat was too important a player to worry about his rules' violations.

But the 1975 Phillies are a young team, a team with pennant aspirations, a team that is apparently very close knit.

The question of Allen's past performance is critical. Many Philly players say Allen's bat is all that matters. But can and will they say that the day after Allen boycotts his first practice or is late for his first game?

PHILLIES manager Danny Ozark and director of player personnel Paul Owens have said Allen has agreed to follow whatever rules Philadelphia dictates. And Allen has said he wants to play in Philadelphia now, something he didn't want to do last winter.

If Allen does play, if he follows the rules, he may prove to be just what the Phillies need to win the National League East pennant.

But if he reverts back to the Allen of the past, it will take more than aspirin to cure the headaches he causes.

Sports a gambling lure for Vegas

It was in the year of our landlord 1962 that the most pitiful act in the history of show biz was thrust upon the dinner clients at a major Las Vegas hotel.

The line-up for this debacle included Willie and Tommy Davis, Frank Howard, Duke Snider, Sandy Koufax, Don Drysdale and Maury Wills. You will recognize this as also part of the cast of the Dodgers who blew the National League pennant playoff to the Giants in 1961.

Anyway, the billing said something about songs, dances and witty sayings. You will get the total picture if you envision poker face Koufax reciting a monologue or 6-8, 260 pound Howard doing a soft shoe.

Maury Wills' banjo rendition of Bye Bye Blackbird failed to save the show and considerable fruit was thrown. Mercifully, some one got the hook and the Dodgers survived to win the championship of the world in 1963.

But the most memorable aspect of the entire thing was a phone call received by Buzzie Bavasi, then Dodger general manager, on the eve of opening night. On the line was the commissioner of baseball.

"It's bad for baseball," the commissioner said. "Stop them."

"They're each getting $5,000 a week," Buzzie replied. "You stop them."

YOU SEE, Las Vegas means games of chance and the mention of the word "gambling" to baseball people will send them whimpering into the underbrush. This would apply to most professional team sports whose officials squander great energy to cleanse and polish the images of their pastimes.

So it is, then, interesting when Las Vegas from time to time puts forth serious effort to become a sporting community. Las Vegas has been the site of world championship boxing matches, major PGA golf tournaments, off-road racing events and college basketball tournaments.

The suspicion that Las Vegas is once again entertaining notions of returning to sports on a large scale are prompted by such events as the recent tennis matches, under the auspices of a large hotel and on national television. Jimmy Connors disposed of a couple of Australians named Rod Laver and John Newcombe and before the conclusion of hostilities, all parties concerned were talking in terms of millions of dollars.

HAVING BUILT casinos, swimming pools, golf courses and tennis facilities, the major hotels are now seriously discussing the construction of sports arenas. They utter such sounds as the possibility of playing hockey, basketball, indoor soccer and volleyball right on the hotel premises. Jai Alai is already an established pastime in Las Vegas.

Without any question, the hotel operators of Las Vegas regard sports as a lure for the right kind of clientele. High rollers seem strangely attracted to squirrely former athletes and punch drunk ex-fighters.

There is also the element of added action. If hockey is played at a hotel in Las Vegas, for instance, you may rest assured that betting windows will be located directly adjacent to the penalty box.

The officials of most sports will deplore all of this. Some, notably tennis and boxing, will welcome the association.

OTHERS ARE on the fence. Recently Jack Nicklaus and Johnny Miller were extended an invitation to appear in Las Vegas for a head-to-head golf match with prize money starting—for the purposes of discussion—at $1 million.

Nicklaus and Miller both threw up their hands in disgust at the suggestion of such gimmickry but later said they would think it over. Presumably this was to leave an opening in the event if the promoter would care to raise the ante to $2 million.

Brundage: Savior of the Olympics

By MIKE HUGHES
UPI Executive Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—Few men in the history of sports gave of themselves as selflessly as did Avery Brundage.

His reward: To be called a dictator and to be ridiculed virtually the world over by people who did not know him.

But those who worked closely with him will tell you the Olympic Games could not have survived in the postwar period without his drive and leadership. He led from the front and brooked no argument. You did things his way or got out.

Brundage got out when he was good and ready. He had to be persuaded to serve a fourth term, which began with his election at Mexico City in 1968, but by the time Munich came around four years later, he was ready to go.

He committed many blunders during his 20-year stewardship, but the Olympic movement has much to thank Avery Brundage for.

LORD KILLANIN, who succeeded to the IOC presidency, summed up Brundage perfectly when he said of him, "He was an idealist to whom Olympism was a religion."

I was privileged to spend many hours with Brundage at the IOC headquarters in Lausanne, Switzerland, and at Congress sessions around the world, in Europe, Asia and Latin America. He was a tough man to pin down and was an absolute master in the art of sidestepping questions.

I once asked him why he was so stubborn and why he would not let the Olympics move into the last quarter of the 20th century.

His answer reflected the man. "I have served the Olympic movement for three-quarters of my life. I have fought to keep politics and professionalism out of the Games, yet I see it happening before my eyes. Do you expect me to change my beliefs now?

COMMENTARY

"It can happen when I'm gone, but I shall not be a party to it."

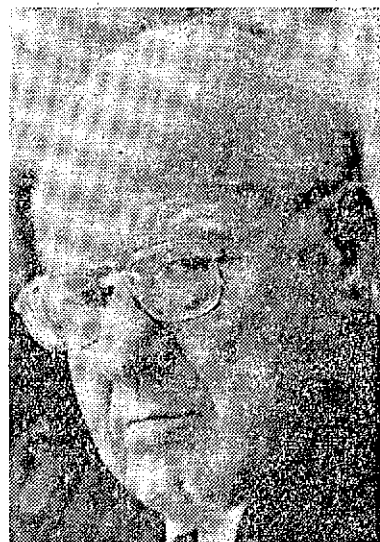

BRUNDAGE enjoyed his verbal battles with the Russians and East Bloc nations, but he was unable to cope with the Third World nations.

Brundage's biggest defeat was when South Africa was tossed out of the Olympic movement in 1968.

He fought as only he knew how to keep South Africa in the movement. In the spring of '68 he traveled extensively within the Republic, seeking assurance from South African government leaders that multi-racial sport would be permitted and that black athletes would be sent to Mexico City.

With these assurances in hand, he thought he could sway the full membership of the IOC. He failed.

But his performance that spring was nothing short of extraordinary for a man already turned 80. Men less than half his age would have wilted. I know I was tired out when the session at Lausanne was concluded.

Brundage traveled all night from Johannesburg, changed planes in London and arrived at Geneva at the crack of dawn. He looked as if he had just stepped from the shower when he held an airport news conference.

HE THEN drove to Lausanne and immediately went into session with his executive. He did not allow any meal breaks, ordering sandwiches and coffee to be brought to the meeting, and did not allow his colleagues to retire for 18 hours. Brundage had not been between clean sheets for nearly 36 hours, yet he ordered everyone back within six hours.

Four years later in Munich his world crashed with the Arab terrorist invasion of the Olympic village.

Brundage suspended the Games for 24 hours, saying, "We cannot allow a handful of terrorists to destroy this nucleus of international cooperation and goodwill that we have in the Olympic movement. The Games must go on."

BRUNDAGE explained his decision by saying, "If we stopped the Games, no large gathering would ever again be safe...no political forum, no trade fair no whatever."

The Games went on. But Avery Brundage committed his most serious blunder at the brief memorial service held in the Olympic stadium in tribute to the fallen Israeli athletes before the Games resumed.

He introduced politics into his address by denouncing the African nations for threatening to walk out if the Rhodesian team, already installed in the village, were permitted to compete.

The stadium was hushed. His friends were embarrassed.

Avery Brundage did not speak on Olympic matters again.

A champion is dead.

Super Bowl replay in pro grid netfest

SILVER LAKES, Calif. (AP) — Franco Harris and Andy Russell of the Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers tied for the lead in the American Football Conference Division, while Fran Tarkenton and Mick Tingelhoff of the losing Minnesota Vikings topped the National Football Conference division in first round play Saturday of the Pro Football Tennis Championships.

Harris, the most valuable player in Super Bowl IX and linebacker Russell tied with the New England Patriots' passing-catching combination of Jim Plunkett and Randy Vataha.

Each team has won 32 games in this doubles competition.

Veteran quarterback Tarkenton and center Tingelhoff also won 32 games, two more than another Viking, tight end Stu Voigt and his partner, Ron Johnson, New York Giants' running back.

The winners of each division after this morning's competition will play for the over-all championship.

FOYT ON INDY 500 POLE AGAIN—

After a few practice runs, Foyt said, "I went back and made some more changes on the engine...and said 'we're just gonna go try and qualify.'"

"We were going out cold turkey and, to be truthful with you, I didn't feel at that point that I was going to be able to beat Gordy. "I just couldn't believe I ran that fast on the first lap."

After his run, Foyt gave a hearty wave to his daughter Terry Lynn, who was watching from the second turn. She is recovering from a serious asthma attack that kept Foyt in Texas until after practice started last week.

JOHNCOCK, who dueled with the cagy

Texan in practice runs, averaged 191.652 in his newly designed Wildcat. Bobby Unser completed the front row with a run of 191.073.

Former junior high school principal Tom Sneva had the only other average over 180 with 180.094.

Wally Dallenbach, with a Wildcat identical to Johncock's, burned two engines in warmups and was forced to wait until at least today to make the 33-car field.

Johncock, Phoenix, said hot weather and gusty winds cost him 1 or 2 mph on his average speed.

"I thought we would be close to 193," Johncock said. "If we had a cloudy day and the track was cooler, we might have done that. It would have been easier to go faster about 11 o'clock or 11:30 in the morning, too."

Johncock's run came about 2 p.m., EST, on a hot, clear day that attracted a probable record crowd estimated at more than 150,000.

Sneva, only 26 years old compared to Johncock's 38 and Foyt and Unser's 40, caught the imagination of the crowd with his surprising run.

"We had run only one lap in practice that was as fast as we qualified," Sneva said. "We started out the week having a hard getting staying above 180."

Sneva, the fastest rookie in last year's starting field, held on to the top spot with his McLaren-Olff for almost two hours

Only 11 spots remained to be filled today and next weekend when the time trials conclude to fill the 33-car lineup for the million-dollar classic May 25.

Other qualifiers, in order of their speeds:

Johncock, Phoenix, 191.652; Bobby Unser, Albuquerque, 191.073; Tom Sneva, Spokane,

College football's cri$is: Buckle down or die

"We are headed for one-platoon football anyway," said Royal, "and that's fine with me. As for recruiting trips, we've found that kids have a pretty good idea between two schools or so where they want to go. If they are interested in one or two schools, we don't want them making paid trips to half a dozen others just to have a good time." Royal said the Southwest Conference at one time had a rule limiting coaches' visits to prospective athletes. "But we had to abandon it because coaches from outside the conference kept coming in, and they left us at a disadvantage. It was a great rule, but it was needed nationally."

Also under the proposals, football staffs would be trimmed to eight coaches and basketball to two. The allowable number of football scholarships would be reduced from the current 105 to 90, with maximums of 35 awards for any one year and 60 for two years.

Basketball would be cut from 18 to 16 scholarships with a maximum of seven in any single year and 10 in any two years. Grants in all other sports would be cut from the current limit of 209 to 80.

That means, if the proposals are adopted, the total number of scholarships any school could give would shrink from 340 to 186.

Many schools have not waited for the NCAA to turn the costcutting suggestions into costcutting rules.

At Duke, there is a projected sports budget deficit of $80,000 for next year. That sounds bad, but it is an improvement from the 1974-75 deficit of $140,000.

To reduce costs, Duke has cut one assistant football coach and has ordered an across-the-board drop of 10 per cent in athletic spending. There is an attempt to grant scholarships in non-revenue sports on the basis of need only, and Duke would like to see the football scholarship allowances dropped even more than the NCAA recommends.

Loyola of New Orleans dropped all sports three years ago as part of a general belt-tightening. Doug Dougherty, superintendent of accounts, explained the move as being purely economic.

"Sports were running quite a deficit," said Dougherty. "Since then, we have built up intramural sports but, of course, that doesn't cost anything near what it costs to be in intercollegiate competition, what with recruiting and all."

When the University of Vermont faced a $200,000 deficit, football was dropped. The decision was announced last November.

"Had we kept football, everything else would have become third-rate, mediocre," said Edward Andrews, university president.

After the initial string of complaints over the decision, Andrews' phone started ringing. The callers were other college presidents, congratulating him on the move.

"I get the impression that we might be the first of many," the Vermont president said.

The University of Wisconsin offers a study in contrasts.

The school's branch at Madison plays big time college football and projects a profit of between $40,000 and $60,000 this year for the athletic department, which has a budget between $2.7 million and $2.8 million. Six years ago, the department had a $200,000 deficit. But there are fears that inflation again will cause costs to surpass revenue in two or three years.

Meanwhile, at Wisconsin's Milwaukee branch, there is a deficit of between $20,000 and $25,000, compared to a profit five years ago.

The school has played an independent, less ambitious football schedule than the Madison branch, but the Athletic Board recently voted to drop the sport.

The picture isn't all bleak. There are about 50 schools with profitable sports programs, some of them making money despite overall deficits for their colleges or universities.

At the University of Minnesota, the deficit for the current academic year will run about $1.6 million. But the athletic department will show about a $75,000 profit, up from the $38,000 profit of last year.

Bob Geary, assistant to Minnesota athletic director Paul Giel, said the school's sports program had its problems sooner than other athletic departments and is pulling out of them sooner.

Donations have gone up in the last five years from $120,000 to about $300,000 and membership in the Golden Gopher Club of 1,000 contributors has increased substantially.

Ohio State University's $5.7 million athletic budget will show a surplus of about $350,000 this year. That money is earmarked for capital improvements and maintenance, and Hugh D. Hindman, the school's associate athletic director, said the figure is down from five years ago because of increased operational expenditures.

The University of Arkansas will have a minimal profit of about $12,000.

"Included in our projections are some substantial gift monies relating to our seat option programs," said Fred Vorsanger, the school's vice president for fiscal affairs. "Without that income for preferential seating, we would have a deficit."

"Booster clubs have been our salvation."

The seat option arrangement allows a donor of $1,600 or more to purchase 10 football tickets between the 40- and 50-yard lines. A $1,000 contributor may buy up to 10 tickets between the 30- and 40-yard lines, etc. The program raised about $500,000 last year.

At Wichita State, the athletic department expects to maintain a balanced budget for the first time in a decade. A year ago, sports lost $220,000 at the school. The difference, according to athletic director Ted Bredshott, is an ambitious booster club program.

"We've gone from three booster clubs to 14 in the past two years," he said. "Revenue from the clubs was $85,000 in 1973, and this year it was over $231,000. It's really been our salvation."

Elsewhere, however, the picture is not so bright.

John Powers, a sports writer for the Boston Globe, spent four months studying the collegiate sports economic situation.

He came away convinced that the crisis is deep and deadly.

"Many of the problems troubling big-time programs today could have been prevented years ago if university administrators had recognized the value of intercollegiate athletics as a legitimate undergraduate activity and had arranged to fund them out of the general treasury," said Powers.

"That seems impossible now, when many private institutions are fighting for survival. So get used to reading about Vermonts dropping football. It's a tale of the times."

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Anchovy seiners given more tons

Anybody who fishes in the ocean should be interested—yes, even irritated—about the latest development regarding the commercial fishermen and the anchovies. It's not a very pretty story, and the end result will be detrimental to the sportfishermen and the commercials.

It began this way: On April 4, the Fish and Game Commission met in Los Angeles to make a number of decisions, one of which was to determine if the commercials should be granted an increase in their quota of 100,000 tons of anchovies per year. The commercials, who had sat idle for weeks when their season started because of a low price and then had been baffled by inclement weather, were far from that 100,000 figure, so they decided not to ask for any increase as they had done in the previous season.

In the 1973-74 season, they had been granted 20,000 additional tons, but with the provision that they take the tiny little fish outside the 12-mile limit.

After the April 4 meeting sportfishermen breathed easier and forgot about the anchovies. I don't like to tell you that I wrote at that time, "Don't let your guard down," but I did.

So, now it has happened. The commissioners—just two of the five—met in Redding May 2. The weather was improving and the anchovies were thick in Long Beach Harbor and elsewhere, so Tony Pisano, manager of the Fishermen's Cooperative Association, asked for 15,000 additional tons—AND GOT THEM!

NOW JUST TWO COMMISSIONERS can't make a decision like that. The two who were present, Peter T. Fletcher, Rancho Santa Fe, and Berger C. Benson, San Mateo, recommended approval. They then got in touch by telephone with Sherman Chickering, San Francisco, and Joseph Russ III, Ferndale, and those two, when briefed on the request, also gave their support.

The one great friend of the sportfishermen, commissioner Timothy Doherty, Los Angeles, was out of the country.

The four voting commissioners didn't set any 12-mile limit, so the commercials went to work just outside the three-mile limit. They put all their suitable boats into the area off Long Beach-Los Angeles Harbor and in Santa Monica Bay.

The result became apparent within a day or so. Anchovies disappeared from Long Beach Harbor and the bait haulers who provide bait for sportfishing boats in this area now are having a rough time trying to get any bait for Seal Beach Pier, Belmont Pier, Long Beach Sportfishing and several half-day and all-day boats that run out of those landings.

I'm sorry to say this, but the Department of Fish and Game reported at that Redding meeting that bait haulers were having no difficulty in obtaining anchovies for the sportfishing boats and piers. Naturally, the commercials had to make their usual pitch that there were three million tons of anchovies off Southern California.

THIS BATTLE OVER ANCHOVIES goes back into the last decade when the commercials were wanting far greater quantities than 100,000 tons so that the anchovies could be sold to the processors to go into chicken feed, pet food and even fertilizer. The commercial interests at that time found scientists who would agree that there were millions of tons of anchovies off California and that they could be taken without harming the resource.

Yet, the commission at that time, set up the 100,000-ton quota for established zones south of Pt. Buchon and 15,000 tons north of there toward Monterey, where sardine canneries are now rotting away because the sardines were virtually eliminated many years ago by over-fishing. Incidentally, the commercials have never caught much more than one-half of that 15,000 tons in the north.

It is the opinion of many that the anchovies can be thinned out to such an extent that there will be few for forage by all game fish.

It certainly is a lousy trick to take the anchovy matter to the Redding meeting. Most of the Northern Californians don't even know what an anchovy looks like.

The commercials have from now through next Thursday, May 15, to complete their hauls of 115,000 tons in the southern zones. At this writing, there is every indication that they will make the quota. Then they must wait until next fall to start their 1975-76 anchovy seining.

IT WILL BE INTERESTING to see what kind of fishing we have through the rest of this spring and the approaching summer and fall. In any event, this writer feels, as do others, that the sportfishermen deserve some honest answers and a more thorough study of the anchovy fishery.

If the commercials are to be granted a certain quota, it should be done at the earlier meetings of the Fish and Game Commission. If it has to be 100,000 tons, keep it at that figure and stop this idiotic business of taking such Southern California problems to Northern California meetings.

The sportfishermen of this state carry the heaviest burden financially for the Department of Fish and Game, and the DFG scientists can say all they please about three million tons or three hundred million tons of anchovies, but the anglers who pay the most deserve full information, not guesses.

It also appears that the Fish and Game Commission, five men appointed by the governor to make decisions upon recommendations from the Department of Fish and Game, is leaning more than a little to the commercial side.

In closing, I might add that both Seal Beach Pier and Belmont Pier had bait problems last Sunday and Monday. There wasn't even enough for people who fish from the piers.

June's Love scores speedily upset win at Hollywood

Ve Jay Sterling's June's Love, improving with every start, Saturday proved he is a good as any handicap horse in the West when he sped a mile in 1:33 4/5 to take the $55,800 Caballero Handicap at Hollywood Park.

With Jerry Lambert in the saddle, June's Love led favored Ancient Title under the wire by 3/4 lengths. Big Band finished third in the field of nine.

A crowd of 41,902 sent Ancient Title postward as the 6-5 choice and let June's Love, a rapid winner at the Caballero route a week ago, get away at nearly 11-1. The winner returned $23.80, $6.80 and $3.80 across the board. Ancient Title paid $3.20 and $2.40 and Big Band paid $3.20 to show.

June's Love, purchased privately for $40,000 last fall, earned $33,300 of that back Saturday for James Johnson of Bradbury, who races the Vee-Jay stable.

The 1:33 4/5 clocking by June's Love not only matched the Caballero record, set three years ago by Finalista, but it also equalled the second fastest mile in Hollywood history. Only Swaps, who set what was then a world's record of 1:33 1/5, has turned in a speedier mile.

"I'll tell you this, the trainer (Larry Sterling) had this horse absolutely ready," reported Lambert, who was gaining his 48th stakes win at Hollywood Park but his first added-money score here in more than a year. A foot injury forced Lambert to miss the entire 1974 Hollywood season.

For Sterling, a 34-year-old Coloradan, the Caballero was just the second stakes win of his career, the other coming the final day of 1974 at Santa Anita, also with June's Love.

"I'm certain this horse can go on — up to a mile and one-quarter — and I guess the Californian will be next for him," Sterling said. The $100,000 Californian, May 26, is at a mile and one-sixteenth.

Laffit Pincay, who rode Ancient Title, was not disappointed with the 128-pound highweight's effort. "Considering this was his first race in quite a while, I thought he ran big," offered Pincay.

Pincay, Hollywood's record holder for most wins (148 in 1974) in one season was blanked Saturday and with Sandy Hawley doubling, Pincay now trails the Canadian 17-55 in the local jockey race.

Neither Hawley nor Pincay is likely to be aboard the favorite today, when the $30,000 Railroad Stakes highlights the Hollywood Park program. That honor should go to Raise Your Skirts, winner of seven of eight lifetime starts.

Today also will be the day Hollywood gives away $26,000 in Sunday sweep prize money.

Just a romp Ruffian, with Jacinto Vasquez in the saddle, breezes to 3/4-length victory in $50,000-added Acorn Stakes at Aqueduct Saturday. It was undefeated filly's eighth win.

Third coastal-plan hearing set Wednesday

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
Urban Affairs Editor

Landowners concerned about their property rights. Hardhats worried about their jobs. Environmentalists struggling to save our coastline. City officials striving to maintain local control.

All are geared to vent their opinions in another battle of words Wednesday during a public hearing in Long Beach on the preliminary comprehensive plan for the California coastline by the South Coast Region Coastal Zone Conservation Commission.

Twelfth in a series of 19 state-regional hearings being held throughout the state, it is scheduled for 1:30 to 6 and 8 to 10:30 p.m. at the Harbor Department Administration Building, 925 Harbor Plaza Drive.

The hearing is the third of four such meetings in the South Coast Commission's jurisdiction, which covers the coastline of Los Angeles and Orange counties, two of the most urbanized counties in the state.

"In fact, this is the region which caused the people of California to pass Prop. 20 in the first place," Ellen Stern Harris, vice-chairwoman of the California Coastal Conservation Commission, told more than 200 Southern Californians who attended last week's public hearing in Torrance.

She described the proposed state coastal plan as "probably the most ambitious and cohesive planning ever attempted anywhere on earth."

As testimony at public hearings the past week in both Torrance and Huntington Beach has revealed, many Southern Californians—caught somewhere between the price squeeze and government red tape—believe it is too ambitious.

The parent Coastal Act, passed by a public initiative in 1972, has no explicit reference to the economic well-being of the citizens of California, an omission that has led many a critic over the past two years to grumble: "The people really didn't know what they were voting for."

Those same critics complain today that the proposed preliminary coastal plan—the product of untold hours of refinement by regional and state planning staffs, technical and governmental reviewers and commissioners—does not deal with the costs of implementation and land acquisition or the human issue of property rights vs. public rights.

Blue-collar workers, expected to stage another hard-hat rally at Wednesday's hearing in Long Beach, contend the coastal commissions and the proposed plan have an "antigrowth" bias that is primarily responsible for the construction-industry slump.

Testifying at the Torrance hearing, Richard Lusk of the Steamfitters and Refrigeration Union said members of the building trades are "as concerned as anybody about the environment," but pointed out that "a person can starve to death as well as choke to death."

He noted that 38 per cent of the building and trades union members are out of work.

Eunice Hargrove of Redondo Beach countered that maybe she made a bad investment 20 years ago when she trained to become a teacher.

"But I'm not down here demanding people have more children just so I'll have a job," she said. "It makes as much sense... continue your marvelous work."

Whether a landholder should be denied the right to develop his own property, the economic impact of such an ambitious program and the question of who should administer the plan, if it is made law by the 1976 Legislature, also are major issues that must be resolved.

In general, individuals calling themselves concerned citizens and environmental groups of one type or other want the coastal commissions continued.

But representatives of local governments, real estate interests, labor, developers and landowners generally want the authority returned to local governments.

Examples of these opposing views were expressed by two who testified at the Torrance hearing.

Sierra Club member Arthur Brown of Redondo Beach said: "A strong state hand is necessary to carry out the plan. City councils will sell you down the river when they have a chance."

But Palos Verdes Estates Mayor Joe Barnet said implementation of the plan should be the responsibility of local governments.

"There are too many extra layers of government. All it does is add cost to all the taxpayers."

Never before has a state planning process had more public exposure or greater opportunity for public participation.

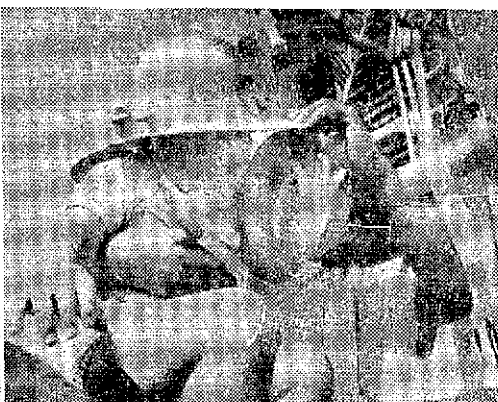

The 367-page preliminary plan, referred to as a "constitution for the coastline," will be critical to the future of the coastal zone and may serve as the model for land-use planning for the rest of the state.

The Wednesday hearing will be the last opportunity for significant regional citizen input before the statewide coastal plan goes to the Legislature in 1976.

Vallerga won't leave job during misconduct trial

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

Orange County Assessor Jack P. Vallerga, indicted on charges of grand theft, misappropriation of public funds and conspiracy, won't take leave of absence from his office as county supervisors will ask.

Chairman Ralph A. Diedrich of the Board of Supervisors said he would open the assessor case Tuesday at the board meeting, chiefly because he thinks Vallerga's troubles may delay preparation of the 1975-76 fiscal-year assessment roll.

The valuations prepared by the assessor's office are the basis for levies of taxes by all the county governmental agencies, the cities, special districts and schools.

Diedrich asked County Counsel Adrian Kuyper for an opinion as to what the county can do about Vallerga. He will be told it can do nothing.

Vallerga, as assessor, is an elected official and cannot be removed by the supervisors, nor can he be forced to take a leave of absence.

But Diedrich said that, if Vallerga would agree to a leave until the charges against him are resolved in court, the assessor could continue to draw his salary.

The assessor said the supervisors need not worry about the assessment roll, which he said will be delivered on time.

He said he would not put himself on leave of absence.

Vallerga's chief deputy, George Upton, 54, who was indicted earlier, was suspended from his post by Vallerga, but only after the grand jury accused Upton of bribery.

Upton had been indicted first with six other officials of the office, and two retired officials on assorted charges of drawing county pay while working in the political campaign of U.S. Rep. Andrew J. Hinshaw's successful bid for Congress. Hinshaw was the county assessor at the time, and Vallerga was his assistant; that was 1972 when Hinshaw made his first run for the congressional seat.

L.A.-L.B. harbor leading Cal. in terms of pollution

Maritime Editor

The Los Angeles-Long Beach harbor area led the way in 1974 with approximately 514 separate pollution incidents, according to admittedly "rough figures" released by the Coast Guard covering the area from Santa Barbara to San Diego.

As a result, it was estimated that approximately 27,091 gallons of pollutants, mainly petroleum products, entered Southland waters.

Human error was credited as the major cause of spillages in most of the incidents investigated by the Marine Environmental Protection Branch of the 11th Coast Guard District, headquartered in Long Beach. Improper handling of hoses and valves, tank overflows and equipment failures were also predominant factors in the number of pollution incidents.

Los Angeles Harbor had 241 pollution incidents resulting in spillages of about 14,917 gallons. Long Beach Harbor had 174 incidents with a total spillage of approximately 7,909 gallons, according to the Coast Guard. There were 59 incidents with a spillage of 4,010 gallons in offshore waters.

While there was no major pollution spillage in the waters from the Santa Barbara-Ventura area south to San Diego area, Coast Guard investigators handled an estimated 850 incidents in which oil or other pollutants entered ocean waters. During 1974 the cost to remove pollutants totaled $70,297. Penalties assessed against those found responsible for polluting ocean waters amounted to $117,460. When no responsibility can be assessed or determined, the Coast Guard picks up the tab for the cleanup.

Slide program reaches kids 'Live tree' cuts vandalism

By BOB ANDREW

The line of newly planted jacaranda trees stretched westward down Del Amo Boulevard—each split in half by some of the vandals who cost Carson more than $7,000 last year in replacement trees.

"Of course, that figure is comparatively low," said Mayor Clarence Bridgers, "because most of our trees are pretty young."

At an average of $20 for a 15-gallon parkway tree, that means more than 350 trees were uprooted or injured sufficiently to require replacement last year. In other words, a problem serious enough for the Carson City Council to call in an expert: Tommy Tree.

Tommy is rooted in the fertile brain of William L. Gray Jr., president of a public-relations firm, who is now better known as "Uncle Bill" to the 6,500 elementary students in Carson who have met him in the past month.

GRAY invented Tommy Tree about two years ago when the city of Bell hired him to develop a program that would reduce tree vandalism there. With Tommy's help, tree vandalism was cut 65 per cent in the first six months and has stayed down.

"You should see this guy (Gray) operate," Carson Councilman Gilbert Smith exclaimed. "By the time he's through he has those kids standing up and shouting that they'll never hurt a tree again and they won't let anyone else do it either."

All it takes is a little applied adolescent psychology.

"I figured there was no point in talking to junior high kids," Gray explained, "all you would do is give them some new ideas. So I decided to take the message to the younger grades."

HE STARTS his "A Tree Is Like You and Me" program in the kindergarten and continues through third grade.

Each class is brought to the school auditorium where a charming young lady introduces "Uncle Bill" as someone who loves children.

He starts off by asking for volunteers to help him by drawing on a blackboard. The first child draws a straight line that Gray quickly converts into a tree. Another draws a circle that becomes a bird and so on.

Within minutes, the kids are shouting answers as Gray questions them about similarities between trees and children. When one guesses the magic question that "even big people often can't tell me" (that trees are alive and can be hurt) the reward is a slide presentation narrated by Tommy Tree.

ASIDE from talking (via a tape recorder) and being photogenic, Tommy is a relatively ordinary parkway tree.

He has a girlfriend who lives in a park, an "uncle" fir who has survived despite the annual Christmas-tree cutting season and a buddy named "piney," a palm with a topknot trimmed to look like a pineapple.

Together these trees explain to the youngsters that they need food and air just like children. . . that it hurts to be kicked. . . or have a branch broken.

(The slide making that point shows a boy with his arm in a sling saying "ouch" along with another boy breaking a tree's limb. The tree shouts, "Ouch! Don't break my branch. That really hurts!")

AT THE end of the assembly, the children pledge not to damage trees and to stop others they see damaging trees. Then, as they leave, each child shakes hands with "Uncle Bill" and is given a coloring book retelling the story of Tommy Tree.

"When we developed the program," Gray explained, "we were looking for long-term results. We wanted to get the young kids on our side and hoped that when they grew up they wouldn't vandalize trees."

The immediate results were an unexpected bonus that, Gray believes, demonstrates the younger children also have a positive effect on their older brothers and sisters.

"There is no way that these kids were doing 65 per cent of the damage," Gray declared, "but they must be having an effect on those who were."

THE results in Bell have been proved by similar results in Glendale, Anaheim and Simi Valley after the "A Tree Is Like Me" programs there.

"It's too soon for positive results here," Bridgers admitted, "but the council figured $1,700 for the program was a good gamble against $7,000 for replacement trees."

Most horseplayers would be happy to plunk their money down on a 4-to-1 shot that paid off 85 per cent of the time.

Later this month, Gray will rent the Long Beach Arena and bus more than 7,000 Carson school children and their parents there for a new slide presentation.

GRAY says he hopes the capper will be a telephone call from President Ford.

"Arrangements are still being made," Gray said, "but the key is getting the parents to come with their children in the evening. We are on a tight time schedule to be ready by May 27, but we have to get it done before school lets out and that was the only time the arena was available."

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

IT'S TWILIGHT in Long Beach, and a darkening sky nudges the sun away from the patio just off the small room at Centralia Convalescent Center where Mae and George Wiest live.

The sun doesn't want to leave. It, like the visitors at Mae Wiest's bedside, would rather stay and listen to Mae Wiest tell stories.

And what stories she can tell:

—Teaching school at 18 in rural Wisconsin. The year was 1899. William McKinley, soon to die at the hands of an assassin, was president of the United States. Prices were as low as wages, which may be why Mae Wiest didn't feel shortchanged by a teaching salary of $35 a month. Teaching eight grades in one room presented a challenge, but Mae was young and eager.

"I think the teachers of today have more problems," she says, remembering all those young faces, farm-fresh and forever locked in a time frame of youth.

—There was a move to North Dakota in 1906. There the girl from Cooperstown, Wis., met and married August J. Wiest on Aug. 10, 1908. They homesteaded at Florence Lake, Burleigh County.

Cold winds whipped across the prairies, and the snows came early. The days were hard; the nights were long, illuminated by a flickering kerosene lamp which played across the faces of a mother, father and five children, all of whom had chores.

Cows were milked, crops were reaped, eggs were gathered. The Wiests did their own butchering. They made head cheese, pickled pigs' feet, rendered fat and made soap. The old homestead smoke house comes alive in the telling of those years.

Most of their bread was made at home, because at the store in town a loaf cost 5 cents. Sugar was 11 cents a pound; Arbuckle Coffee sold for 12 cents a pound. The children's arms grew weary churning butter. Mae did the laundry in a washing machine made by Gus, who knew that homesteading was synonymous with "do-it-yourself."

The Wiest family moved to Rhame, N.D., then to Sykeston, where Gus had a grain elevator, which towered above the flat prairie.

The move to Long Beach came in 1936, and home first was in what was then known as Tent City, the residency a year. A chicken ranch in Willowbrook was next, and then Compton, where Gus operated a service station until his death in 1949.

Thirty-two years of marriage had ended, and Mae Wiest was a family person. She missed the companionship of a husband, and in 1944 she remarried, becoming the wife of Gus' brother, George, in a ceremony in Compton's Our Lady of Victory Catholic Church.

Mae and George have been together 31 years, most of that time in Compton, where George worked for a heating company. Two years ago the infirmities of age caught up with them, and now others provide the care they cannot give themselves.

Their wants are few. They have each other, good memories and the shelter of a tightly knit family. They have a room which looks out on a patio and the sun.

Four of the eight children of Mae and Gus Wiest survive. Mary Black, Clete Wiest, Dolores Diamond and LaVerne Beauchair are dutiful in their visitations to their mother and George, whom they rate as "really extra special." The children bring news of 19 grandchildren, 18 great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild.

Mae's sister, Annie, also a resident at Centralia Convalescent Center, visits the little room off the patio every day. The sisters talk about the old days, the horse and buggy in North Dakota, the two Fords Gus bought—"one for us, the other for the children."

They may reminisce about the Altar Society at Mae's Compton parish, leaf through the 34 years Mae spent with the Court Compton Catholic Daughters.

George will spin yarns about his days in the Navy, the ports of China and Japan. He'll relish again the times of nickel beer and free lunch. He'll josh about the pretty nurses "always wanting to kiss me." He'll admit to a fondness for the Los Angeles Rams and an avid dislike of the Minnesota Vikings.

Football isn't Mae's game. Her heart is with the Dodgers, and there's a sparkle in her eyes when she talks about them. And her face beams at the mention of Mother's Day, of flowers and cake and the warm blanket of her beloved family.

On nice days, when the weather is kind, George will push Mae's wheelchair as far as Bellflower Boulevard, and they'll return to their room with stories of the sights they saw, the sounds they heard.

"Youth is a gift of nature, but age is a work of art," Mae Wiest, 94 on May 20, and George, soon to be 90, testify to that. And to love, too, this Mother's Day.

Choosing L.B. City Council

On Tuesday, Long Beach voters will elect nine persons to the City Council.

They will have the opportunity to retain some good council members, and to add some good council members.

The result can be strong, dynamic, responsive city government of the highest quality Long Beach has ever enjoyed.

The result can be a reawakening of confidence in Long Beach and in its government. That confidence has been shaken by a six-month-old federal grand jury investigation.

In all but one district, incumbents seek re-election. In two council district races, this newspaper finds it impossible to endorse the incumbents' candidacies.

All voters will vote on all nine council races. Our recommendations:

District 1:

Don Phillips

Councilman Don Phillips has our endorsement for re-election.

For two decades, Phillips has made important contributions to our civic life as a businessman, a planning commissioner, a city councilman and a member of the California Coastal Commission appointed by Governor Reagan.

A resident of Long Beach since 1950, Phillips is the owner of Phillips Chicken Pie Shops. He has been president of the Independent Businessmen's Association, president of Downtown Long Beach Associates, president of the Long Beach Touchdown Club, and president of the Long Beach Convention Bureau.

He served also as chairman of the city planning commission, vice president of the Boys Club of Long Beach, and as government affairs chairman of the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce.

He is an alumnus of Wabash College and the University of Michigan.

Phillips promised when he first ran for the council in 1972 to provide "vigorous and responsive representation." He has provided it.

On the council, he has been a leader in the movement to revitalize the residential and business communities of downtown Long Beach — a revitalization that is important to the economic and social health of the entire city.

On the coastal commission, his was a strong voice for reasonable development that could both create new jobs and improve the quality of life in Southern California.

Don Phillips represents the kind of strong, sensible, economical and far-sighted business approach a healthy City Council needs. It is the kind of approach the council needs more than ever in today's troubled economic times.

His opponent, E. John Hanna, has views on most issues that are not far from Phillips'. He does, however, oppose the present city-wide council elections, which seems to us a mistake; ending these elections could lead to ward politics.

Hanna might well develop into a good council member, but in Don Phillips the First District already has an outstanding council member. We believe Phillips should be retained.

District 2:

Wallace Edgerton

Wallace Edgerton has our endorsement.

Councilman Bert Bond's service has often been worthy of praise. He has been an effective member of county commissions, and has diligently served Long Beach interests there. Bond, however, has also led battles to expand gambling in Long Beach, and some of Bond's council votes have raised grave questions about whether he was responding more to special interest groups than to the needs of the city.

Beyond these considerations, Bond's health made it impossible for him to attend City Council meetings regularly. He is now on the mend. We hope he recovers speedily and completely, but his health record suggests at least the possibility that his ability to serve as a vigorous council member might be impaired.

Wallace Edgerton was the only candidate to receive more votes than an incumbent in the primary election. A businessman and teacher of government at Long Beach State University, Edgerton has taught also at the University of Maryland and has been an investment counselor.

His program includes efforts for improved public transportation, safer streets and easily accessible medical facilities. He favors both tougher law enforcement and a redirection of enforcement efforts "away from victimless crimes."

Edgerton holds strong and progressive views about city government, and he has the background to bring those views to bear to make him an effective council member.

District 3:

Renee Simon

We recommend the re-election of Renee Simon.

Mrs. Simon's intelligence, dedication and concern for her community have made her an effective council member. She has met regularly with constituents in her district, has worked hard at the job and has published newsletters to keep district residents informed of government activities.

We haven't always agreed with her rigid positions on city planning and development, but we have always respected her sincerity and her determination. Fellow council members have respected those qualities, too. So have the voters. In the primary, 80 per cent of the district's votes went to her.

Her opponent, Charles A. Calix, is a retired police sergeant who has failed to take stands on issues, and whose "statement of qualifications" in the voters' pamphlet confines itself to a listing of his previous jobs and the information that he has "owned income property in many parts of the city," is a "member of various clubs" and is "completely retired and in perfect health."

District 4:

Thomas Clark

Our choice is the incumbent, Dr. Thomas Clark.

Councilman Clark has been a councilman of broad vision and keen intelligence since he was first elected in 1966. He is chairman of the council's legislative committee and is a member and past president of the Independent Cities of Los Angeles County. A native Californian and a 41-year resident of Long Beach, Dr. Clark understands the city's problems and has worked effectively with other city and state officials to solve them.

His opponent, Phillip B. Greer, is a 21-year-old political science student who attended the University of California at Berkeley for two years and plans to complete his college work at UCLA. He says he is a "spokesperson for progressive alternatives," but he has not told the voters what those alternatives are. His answer to a League of Women Voters questionnaire suggest that in the main his positions are similar to those of Dr. Clark.

Dr. Clark offers experience and proven capability in addition to sound views. He is the obvious choice.

District 5:

Ernie Kell

In this race, where with the retirement of Mayor Edwin Wade there is no incumbent running, our endorsement goes to Ernie Kell.

Kell has conducted a strong campaign that made him the first choice of Fifth District voters in the primary. His candidacy is endorsed by retiring Mayor Wade. Kell's views and his abilities make him the best choice for all the city's voters on Tuesday.

His personal history is one of hard work on merchant ships and as a draftsman, of attending college in spare hours while building a successful business, and of an interest in the community that has been his home for 20 years.

As an owner-builder specializing in industrial parks, he will bring to the council a talent and knowledge that can help our city develop thousands of new jobs and a stronger economy.

His concerns are not confined to industrial development. He is an enthusiastic supporter of the city's excellent Consumer Affairs Department. He has special concerns that the talents of Long Beach's senior citizens have full use, that law enforcement be vigorous and fair, and that the city's economy be strong so property taxes can be reduced.

Above all, Kell listens. He will listen to his constituents, and he will listen to his colleagues in city government. In consequence, we can expect that he will be a responsive, knowledgeable and effective council member.

The other fifth District candidate, Jo Ann Richards, has developed only a limited program. Her interest in city government dates to an unsuccessful council recall attempt that she led in 1970. She has not broadened that interest significantly.

District 6:

James Wilson

We urge the re-election of Councilman James Wilson.

In his five years on the council, Jim Wilson has accomplished much for his district and his city.

The Neighborhood Facility Center has been completed, the Poly High School area redevelopment program has progressed, a district lighting program has been developed, and a beautification project for the Wrigley District has been started.

Wilson can be expected to provide continued leadership of the quality that has made him a valued council member since the day he entered city government.

In his next term on the council, Wilson says he has three major goals: "to see that the health and welfare of our residents is maintained; to insure that high employment is attained through the development of the Westside Industrial Complex; and to make sure that the people's respect for their government is renewed."

Wilson's opponent, James P.

District 7:

Eunice N. Sato

We recommend the re-election of the incumbent, Mrs. Eunice N. Sato.

Mrs. Sato has been an enthusiastic community worker for years in school and church groups, in the Westside Neighborhood Center, in United Way and in many other citywide agencies.

She holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Northern Colorado, and the master of arts degree from Teachers College at Columbia University. She has been president of a long list of organizations including the Long Beach PTA Council, the Long Beach Area Council of Churches and the Long Beach Area Planning Council. She is an imaginative planner and a tireless worker.

In her brief service on the City Council, she has demonstrated a grasp of the issues, a willingness to study, and an ability to work harmoniously with fellow council members and with citizens.

Her opponent, Ronald A. Morgan, has a good record of community service, but he has presented no good reasons why he should be chosen to replace Mrs. Sato, who defeated him in a special City Council election.

District 8:

Wesley Carroll Jr.

We recommend the election of Wesley D. Carroll Jr.

Councilman E. F. Cruchley, besides following Bond's lead in promoting gambling and favoring special interests in awarding city contracts, also has ignored an obvious conflict of interest in helping to award a disputed sporting goods contract to his son. We have been disappointed with his leadership, imagination and diligence during his service on the council.

Wesley Carroll is an executive with Coast Drywall Construction Co. He has lived in Long Beach since the age of 3. Carroll attended Long Beach schools and is a graduate of Long Beach City College. He is an active church member, and has been active also in the North Long Beach Lions Club and the Long Beach Junior Chamber of Commerce.

He promises to work for planning to meet the housing and recreational needs of senior citizens and to work for economy in city government.

Like other promising new candidates for the council, Carroll emphasizes the need for communication with constituents and promises to hold monthly community meetings.

District 9:

Russell Rubley

In this race, we endorse incumbent Russell Rubley.

As in the case of Bond and Cruchley, we disagreed with Rubley's votes on gambling and on one or two other issues.

It seems, however, that in Rubley's case these votes resulted from a feeling of loyalty to council friendships rather than from any desire to aid special interests at the expense of the city. On other matters he has been a diligent councilman. Further, Rubley has devoted many hours each week to becoming a determined and effective spokesman for Long Beach interests on the Coastal Conservation Commission. He presently is acting chairman and likely will become permanent chairman of the commission in the near future and his influence on that body will be of great value to our community. Were he to lose his council seat, he also would automatically lose his position on the coastal commission.

His opponent, elementary school teacher Larry N. Jones, is a dedicated young candidate, but his experience is narrow and he has little background in community work.

Weighing the advantages — and the disadvantages — of each of the Ninth District candidates, we conclude that, on balance, Councilman Rubley would do the best job for the district and the city. We endorse his re-election.

Letters to the editor

Worse than gangs

EDITOR:

I always try to read "Will Rogers Says." I wish some of our esteemed elected representatives would also.

By God, Mr. Editor, our politicians are worse than the whole of American gangs — past, present and future. The only difference seems to be that politicians have a constitutional right to rob hard-working Americans of their earnings.

I would like to see the news media go after such characters as Lon Nol, former Cambodian president, and bring the truth of his wealth to the surface.

I imagine in one sense America will get a few of the billions spent in Southeast Asia back by bringing the unwelcome leaders to America.

Protect teachers

EDITOR:

Recently our community has been led to believe that job protection for teachers is a distasteful concept. As a parent I want my children protected against incompetence at all levels. To me that means security for the qualified. If teachers are not being effective, there is an orderly process by which they can be dismissed. This is a rightful guarantee that should be afforded every citizen.

Objective evaluation should be the key to raising teaching standards. I hope you will gear your attacks to strengthening the evaluative procedures rather than encouraging dismissal of teachers at the expense of students.

Council candidates answer questions on issues

The table below presents the answers of Long Beach City Council candidates to questions posed by the League of Women Voters of Long Beach.

The summary of questions at the left of the table is only an approximation of the statements with which the candidates were asked to express agreement or disagreement. For each statement the candidate was asked to indicate any of five positions: strong agreement, agreement, undecided, disagreement or strong disagreement.

The league noted that "an individual candidate may hold specific views not precisely reflected" in any of these responses.

The summary to the left of the candidates' responses is intended only as a reminder of the statements on which the candidates offered opinions. To understand the responses — and to evaluate the candidates fairly — readers will need to read the full statements, which follow:

1. City council members should hold scheduled meetings with their constituents.
2. Long Beach should elect a mayor at large.
3. Councilmen should be elected by district only.
4. A charter revision commission should be appointed to streamline the charter.
5. Terms of appointed members on city boards and commissions should be limited.
6. All vacancies on the Board of Education should be filled by an election.

7. The city's present civil service system should be retained without Proposition 1 - charter amendment.

8. Designated parks and recreational areas should be maintained for that use only.

9. Long-range budget planning is essential for fiscal responsibility.

10. The city should pursue a strong program of affirmative action in employment and promotions.

11. Public employees should have the same collective bargaining rights as private employees.

12. The city should continue to support state and federal poverty programs such as Headstart, learning centers, drug abuse clinic, job training and low income senior citizens' programs.

13. A larger portion of the general revenue sharing should be allocated for social services for the poor and aged.

14. Federal, state and local funds should be utilized for job-creating projects such as the Westside Redevelopment, Downtown Redevelopment and the Poly High Commercial Project.

15. Plans to encourage business development in the downtown area should be implemented.

16. High rise with planned open space should be allowed along the south side of Ocean Boulevard between Alamitos and Cherry.

17. Emphasis should be given to a convention center, related facilities and tourism.

18. There should be future land fill at Pier J for a recreation complex.

19. Environmental consideration should be given a priority in future development planning.

20. Priority should be given to improving and developing new transit systems within the city.

21. Development of a regional rapid transit system should be a priority item.

22. Emphasis should be given to solid waste recycling and system management.

23. There should be expansion of facilities and services at the Long Beach Airport.

Candidates' statements

The following statements were prepared by candidates at the request of the League of Women Voters of Long Beach. Candidates were asked to limit statements to 50 words.

First District

E. John Hanna: "My record of community leadership, training and experience, personal attributes and civic commendations supports my candidacy for the position of city councilman. If elected I intend to be a full-time councilmanic servant dedicated to making Long Beach a better place in which to live, to work, and to play."

Don Phillips: "I hope that we will do everything possible to continue the redevelopment and revitalization of our downtown area. This will create new jobs, better living conditions, attract new business and encourage tourism, which will benefit the entire city. Remember — without a healthy heart, Long Beach cannot be a strong city."

Second District

Bert Bond: "As a native son and businessman, my concern is to improve our city's socio-economic picture. By personally spearheading the water reclamation project, taxpayers were saved $7 million. My numerous county and city chairmanships result from making your representation a full-time effort. Thank you for this privilege."

Wallace W. Edgerton: "A good background in government and business — as teacher and practitioner — integrity — willingness to get out and speak with people at their door — I would like to think these were some of the reasons I was the only candidate in Long Beach to surpass an incumbent in the council primary."

Third District

Charles A. Calix: No statement submitted. No response to questionnaire printed above.

Renee B. Simon: "In the primary, 80 per cent of Third District voters approved my efforts to provide full-time, responsive, responsible representation. I will continue to study all issues fairly, initiate new programs such as our Consumer Affairs Department, inform voters through my newsletters and newspaper column, and listen to citizens' views."

Fourth District

Thomas J. Clark: "See ballot candidate statement."

Phillip B. Greer: "Aware of the people, problems and potential of Long Beach, I can bring to the City Council an infusion of new energy and ideas, reinvigorating a stagnant council, reopening local government to the community, and offering rational alternative approaches to existing problems."

Fifth District

Ernie Kell: "During the 20 years that I have lived in Long Beach, there has never been a time when the people's faith in their government was so low. I want to change this attitude and, with your help, we can bring a new era of public confidence to our city."

Jo Ann Richards: "The council is elected to represent — not to rule. A person seeking public office should have a background of involvement in local government. I have worked with the people in my district and other areas of the city for seven years. I promise to listen objectively and represent honestly."

Sixth District

James P. McGuinness Sr.: No statement submitted. No response to questionnaire printed above.

James Wilson: "During the next three years I would set three major goals: to see that the health and welfare of our residents is maintained; insure that high employment is attained through the development of the Westside Industrial Complex; make sure that the people's respect for their government is renewed."

Seventh District

Ronald Morgan: "My qualifications as listed in the sample ballot demonstrate my concern about the area of the city I wish to represent. The Westside has many problems and only someone deeply involved in the area will be able to bring the badly needed representation."

Eunice N. Sato: "'Undecided' indicates issues with pros and cons; facts and alternatives must be weighed at the time of decision-making. In 'agreeing' or 'disagreeing,' an accompanying explanatory statement is essential (but not permitted). Depending upon which word in a statement is emphasized, the response can differ. Words and terminology need definition."

Eighth District

Wesley Carroll Jr.: "The time has come to change the 'do nothing' 8th District council seat. If elected, I will bring responsible representation to the Eighth District by holding community meetings, work to improve our park and recreational facilities and strive to rejuvenate our North Long Beach business community."

E. F. Cruchley: No statement submitted.

Ninth District

Larry N. Jones: "Openness, accountability and citizen involvement are essential for effective city government. Availability and responsiveness to the citizen are the critical issues. In seeking office in 1972, I received 46 per cent of the vote against the incumbent. My concerns remain undiminished. My phone will be listed so constituents can reach me."

Russ Rubley: "Ninth District improvements: Neighborhood Facility Center (senior citizens, child and health care); new home for North YMCA; working with Community Pool for Handicapped; strong support of NLB Athletic Association. During my six years as your councilman I feel that we have accomplished much for our fine city."

Caucus

Distressing choice in 1976

SACRAMENTO — There was an unpleasant reminder last week that Long Beach voters in 1976 are going to have to make a difficult, distressing political decision.

Because of reapportionment, the city's boundaries will coincide with a single senatorial district.

SEN. RALPH DILLS will lose the small portion of the city he has represented. Senators Joseph M. Kennick and George Deukmejian will challenge each other for the right to represent the new, citywide 31st District.

One must lose, and that means, no matter who wins, that the city will lose, too.

The fact of the coming confrontation was unpleasantly recalled last week when, so to speak, the first campaign shot was fired.

Because of the multitude of political reform statutes enacted in recent years, politicians are required to disclose many details of their personal financial standing and just about every detail of their political financial standing.

The secretary of state's office in Sacramento is the repository for all the required documents, and many are also on file in the 58 offices of county registrars of voters.

QUITE NATURALLY, the documents, which are available to the public, are studied thoroughly by Republicans and Democrats to see if any ammunition can be found for coming election campaigns.

Evidently, some Republican researchers thought they had found something valuable while going through Kennick's records.

Either because of shoddy research by the Republicans or faulty filing by the secretary of state and Los Angeles County registrar, two documents which should have been filed by Kennick were believed to be missing.

There followed a letter, signed simply "A Friend," sent to the Independent, Press-Telegram and the Los Angeles Times, advising of the alleged omissions.

AN INVESTIGATION showed both documents to have been filed, with time stamps and registration numbers indicating they had been filed before their respective deadlines.

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

Kennick, shown the letter, was distressed.

Not so much with the charge that the disclosure statutes had not been complied with, he said, "because I have hired a competent person to do what the law says has to be done and he has assured me that there has been compliance."

But, rather, because the letter invited the reasonable question of whether its writing and delivery had been approved by Deukmejian, the Senate Republican leader.

"I CAN'T believe George would allow this to be done," the obviously anguished

Kennick said. "But if he did, if he wants this job bad enough to allow something like this to be done, he can have it."

Kennick's initial instincts were correct. Deukmejian had nothing to do with the letter. He said so, the person who delivered it said so, and when informed of the two statements, Kennick said simply "I believe it."

Deukmejian was very nearly as angry as Kennick when he was shown the letter. He said he had been informed of the failure to find the two documents, but said he had said at the time he was certain there was simply a clerical error and, "knowing Joe," had attached no significance to it.

Nevertheless, the deed had been done, and an effort made to besmirch Joe Kennick's record. The hoped-for result, of course, was that a reason could be found for the failure to disclose which would be brought to the attention of Long Beach voters, and which would not be to Kennick's benefit in the eyes of those voters.

IT HAS BEEN established that there was no failure to disclose, no omission.

But the ugly incident was a reminder that there will be a campaign, and Long Beach will have to lose the services of either Joe Kennick, who has given 52 years of his life to the city, or George Deukmejian, fewer in years than Kennick but no less in integrity, industry or competence.

Whoever wins in 1976, Long Beach will continue to be represented in the Senate by a legislator respected, trusted and influential. But right now there are two such legislators.

It is painful even to contemplate the need to choose between them.

Excursion to Anacapa Isle Family runs 'fun business'

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Staff Writer

You think you've "done" Southern California, eh? You've been many times to Catalina, the Queen Mary, Disneyland, Knott's Berry Farm, all our other attractions so appealing to tourists and Southerlanders alike.

Great! But have you been to Anacapa Island yet?

Santa Catalina it's not, although like that resort on the far side of San Pedro Channel, Anacapa is one of eight Channel Islands peering from our offshore waters.

YOU CAN get there — as my wife and I did recently — from Ventura, or Oxnard, via a 65-foot former Navy crashboat named Paisano. Every member of your crew, whether manning her helm, tending lines or staffing a shoreside office is named Connally. And their Island Packer Co. has to be one of the most distinctive all-family firms since Baron von Trapp organized his near and dear into a chorus.

There's time to learn something of the family, the island and the firm during a 105-minute run seaward from Ventura.

"Ours is a fun business, sharing experiences with people from all over," says Bill Connally, the Long Beach-San Pedro reared father-founder of Island Packers. "Lill (his wife) and I started the company in 1968 as a hobby and as a way to keep our children out of trouble."

THE IDEA clearly has paid off. At the Paisano's wheel is her regular skipper, Mark Connally, 23. Working at other tasks are Kirk, 22, putting in a working vacation from his job as second mate on a research vessel, Brad, 21, mechanic and parttime helmsman, and Cherry, coffee server, office assistant, soon-to-be-licensed skipper and scuba diver.

Off to starboard, to the west, Anacapa's misty gray firms up as the boat approaches under a bright morning sun. Easternmost of the Channel group, it actually is a chain of three small islets with a total land area of 1 square mile.

THE PAISANO ARRIVES AT ANACAPA ISLAND

Although Coastal Indians came out in their canoes to Anacapa during the 1800s, lack of drinking water — then as now — discouraged permanent settlement, says Bill Connally. Until Frenchy arrived during the 1920s, that is.

Connally clearly is in a yarn-spinning mood. The sea is running high, the Paisano smoothly and all's well for the moment. As he talks, a fast Park Service patrol boat resembling those Coast Guard boats seen locally in Alamitos Bay, the Cougar, speeds by. The two will rendezvous at the island.

"Frenchy came in 1928 to a cove that's named for him, where we're goin' this mornin, and squatted in a rickety old abandoned shack. Some promoters who once thought the island could be turned into a great place for fishermen built it... Frenchy had a real thirst — and not for water. He lived on lobsters, fish, abalone — and booze he, er, got from fishermen and the military during the war."

After nearly 30 years in which this semi-hermit became something of a legendary figure along the Coast, he — christened Raymond LeDreau — injured himself in a fall. After treatment at Port Hueneme, Frenchy turned "dry," swore off the sauce. "But it didn't last," says Connally. "He just disappeared one day and hasn't been seen since..."

Rising from the sea to the left now is our destination. Paisano's throbbing diesels slow to idle, and she gently rolls and pitches in moderate seas. Since docks or piers are missing from Anacapa's craggy shore, Frenchy's Cove, with the only beach not covered by water at high tide, is the favored landing spot.

Even there Paisano must stand 100 yards or so offshore to debark passengers on two small boats she towed across the Channel. The last — and to some, longest — leg of the cruise then is in an outboard motor-powered skiff across mild-to-moderately rough surf and onto a rocky strand.

A romantic might even feel akin to Richard Henry Dana going ashore on a hide gathering expedition in the almost-legendary California wilderness of a century past. And the true romantic will share this emotion even while furiously bailing the briny lapping around his ankles. On that bleak shore there are no shops, restaurants, plumbing, drinking water or other usually accepted requisites of living in the late 20th century's urbanized society. But there are rewards.

HERE IS a place off the beaten track, surviving today almost unchanged from the time when Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo laid claim to these islands and mainland in the name of Spain. You hike up and down narrow paths... hop, nimbly or otherwise, across ancient lava beds that since time immemorial have been tidal pools, places where sea creatures large and small live and die... breathe clean, unpolluted salt air... live.

Possibly it isn't true, but, somehow, food tastes better there... And if a scuba diver is on hand, you may get a chance to see specimens of deep-sea fish spread out on Paisano's decks. On really calm days, which this wasn't, there are sea caves to explore, and a "natural bridge" formed by erosion at the easternmost end... and spouting blowholes in lava beds, faulted granite fields.

Camping is permitted not too far from the bridge, but those who pitch their tents on Anacapa must carry out all their necessities, including drinking water.

Island Packers, which operates a limited winter service, returns June 16 to a full summer schedule which continues through Labor Day. Paisano leaves Ventura Marina daily for Anacapa except for Mondays and Fridays at 8 a.m., and Cisco's Sportfishing Landing, Oxnard, and 9, returning to Oxnard at 5, Ventura by 5. Fares: $15 adult, $4.50 children, double rate for campers.

Bound for Santa Barbara Island on Mondays and Fridays, the boat leaves Oxnard at 7 a.m., returning at 6 p.m. Fares are $15, $7 and double for campers. The Connally family firm is based in Ventura.

Better training for registrars proposed

Deputy registrars and election board members should be better trained for their jobs—even beyond the point required by law, the Orange County grand jury said.

More particularly, the jury said, deputy registrars should be trained fully on the "legal completion of voter-registration affidavits."

It is not required by law, the jury continued, but registrars should be fully conversant with the State Penal Code's sections dealing with elections and voter registrations.

Finally, the deputy registrars should be responsible for informing registrants of the code sections providing penalties for falsifications at the time of registration, and for voting falsely, the grand jury said.

Election boards also need better training, it was contended. The jury said it has found that "not all members of the boards thoroughly understand their duties or responsibilities."

Any election board inspector who has not completed the required training prior to each election should be removed, the jury said. The job, members said, is that important.

In addition, the jury said, election board members in the county's hundreds of precincts should have adequate training for their specific duties.

Carson leads list in new construction

From Our L.A. Bureau

Carson led the list of 31 cities served by the county engineer, posting a $5 million valuation figure for new construction during April.

According to figures released Friday, total value of new construction permits in the 31 cities and unincorporated areas reached $52.4 million for the month, compared with $36.3 million in March.

Officials said there were 67 building permits issued during the month for projects exceeding $100,000.

The largest project, valued at $3.8 million, was for a parking structure at the Compton Court Complex.

Typographical Auxiliary officers

Typographical Auxiliary No. 124 of the Long Beach International Typographical Union will install officers for 1975-76 May 18. Juanita Greene will be installed president, Elsie Baird first vice president, Joane Davies second vice president, Frances Byers secretary, Ann Austin treasurer, Rose Zimmerman chaplain and Pat Alberg guide, during ceremonies at the Green residence, 2908 Bomberry St., Lakewood. The meeting will start at 1 p.m.

Joyce Coulter will officiate.

Distaff softball exhibition slated

"The Queen and Her Maids," an internationally known group of women softball players, will play a game with Team No. 1 of the Bellflower Girls Softball Association at Bellflower's Caruthers Park, Sunday, May 18, at 2 p.m.

Proceeds from the game, to be played at 10500 Flora Vista St., will help finance a trip to Hawaii for the Bellflower team to play there. Tickets are $1.50 for adults and $1 for children 6 to 12 years of age.

The group of four women players has traveled around the world and challenged nine men softball and baseball squads, regardless of caliber.

Its star is Rosie Baird Black who has been billed as the world's greatest female pitching artist.

In the past 10 years she has won 1,140 games and lost only 45, struck out 20,063 batters.

Of these strike-outs, she has pitched 2,775 times from second base position, 3,197 while blindfolded, and 1,383 while pitching in a kneeling position.

Her sister, Eileen Baird, an attractive 20-year old charmer, handles the catching chores.

Debby Bevers, a 23-year old, plays first base and, fellow team members say, impresses people all over the world with her explosive running speed and skill in base stealing. She leads the team in home runs with 34 in one season.

Lotta Chatter, the comic highlight of the troupe, covers the shortstop position while keeping the audience laughing, and at the same time, say team members, astounding on-lookers with her unusual ball handling feats.

Bicentennial label contest under way

A label-designing contest noting Cerritos' participation in the nation's Bicentennial observance is under way in all Cerritos high schools.

The deadline for entries is Friday at 5 p.m. The designs should be sent to Mary Marshall, community participation coordinator at Cerritos City Hall, 19400 S. Pioneer Blvd.

Designs must be drawn in a six-inch diameter circle suitable for reduction onto a two-inch diameter button. The theme of the U.S. Bicentennial and the word "Cerritos" must be incorporated in the design.

Students from Artesia, Cerritos, El Dorado, Gahr and Valley Christian High Schools are participating in the contest.

The judges are members of the Cerritos Bicentennial Committee.

POLICE BEAT

Three slain at drive-in

Three persons were found shot to death and another seriously wounded Saturday at the Edgewood Drive-In, a theater at which they worked at 13159 Bess Ave. in Baldwin Park.

Police identified the victims as Florine Anderson, in her 40s, of Covina, the manager; Ronald R. Gaudette, 17, of Baldwin Park, a clean-up worker; and another clean-up worker, a 16-year-old boy whose name was not released pending notification of relatives.

A driver and a guard for the Armored Transport Co. found the manager's body at 10:58 a.m. in the theater's office when they arrived to pick up Friday-night's receipts.

Officers were called and they found the bodies of Gaudette and the 16-year-old boy.

Officers also found William Joseph Gaudette, 57, father of Ronald, with numerous bullet wounds in his face and neck. The older Gaudette was in charge of the clean-up crew.

He was rushed to Baldwin Park Community Hospital and then transferred to County USC Medical Center where he was listed in serious condition, authorities said.

Police, when they arrived, believed the suspects might still be inside the theater waiting to rob the armored car. They surrounded the drive-in while a special weapons team made a search of the premises, but they turned up nothing.

Officers said they believe the three were killed between 10 and 11 a.m.

Police said they found no signs of a robbery or loss.

The deaths recalled the "execution" of four employees of the Rolling Hills Theatre in Torrance in February 1973.

Those victims were found in a blood-spattered upstairs office near an open safe from which $2,000 had been taken.

Their throats had been slashed and their hands tied behind their backs.

L.A. chase ends in death

Two persons whose car crashed into a traffic signal in South Central Los Angeles as they were allegedly trying to elude police were among four persons killed in weekend traffic accidents, Southland police officers reported Saturday.

Authorities said it took county firemen 2½ hours to cut the auto apart at the accident scene at 83rd Street and Hooper Avenue and remove the bodies of Leroy Thomas, 22, and Chevaughn Hall, 26, both of Los Angeles.

Police said 77th Street Division patrol officers spotted a car travel through a red light at Central Avenue and 94th Street at 3:46 a.m. Saturday.

Officers gave chase as the car sped north on Central at speeds up to 80 miles an hour, police said. They said the driver failed to round a curve on Hooper and smashed into a traffic signal, which cut the car in half.

A .22-caliber handgun was found in the car, police said.

County fire Capt. Walt Meagher said the firemen "literally took the car apart piece by piece in order to free the bodies."

In another accident, a Lennox man was killed when the motorcycle on which he was a passenger went out of control on the San Diego Freeway in Sepulveda, authorities said Saturday.

Highway Patrol officers said Manuel Robledo, 35, of 10329 Inglewood Ave., died at 5:30 p.m. Friday at County-USC Medical Center. The motorcycle was driven by Ronald L. Mills, 35, of Los Angeles, officers said.

Investigators said the motorcycle passed several cars on the Sherman Way onramp to the southbound freeway and hit a curb, throwing Robledo to the ground.

Mills was booked on suspicion of felony manslaughter and drunken driving, officers said.

Early Saturday morning, a 45-year-old Monterey Park man was killed when he drove his motorcycle down the driveway of his home and was struck by a passing car, police said.

Officers said Frank Curtis Goodpaster, 354 E. Newmark Ave., was hit at 2:29 a.m. by a car traveling west on Newmark. The driver of the car was not cited or held, officers said.

Red Cross expands blood-donation times

The Greater Long Beach Red Cross has increased the hours for donating blood at its center at 3150 E. 29th St. The center is now open Mondays from noon to 6:30 p.m. and Tuesday through Fridays from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The organization has also placed new donor sites at Long Beach Community Hospital on Wednesdays from 1 to 5:30 p.m. and at Pacific Hospital from noon to 5 p.m. on the second and fourth Mondays of each month.

Red Cross bloodmobiles will be May 12 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the county courthouse building, 415 W. Ocean Blvd.; May 13 from 3 to 8 p.m. at Lake-wood Elks Club, 12507 E. Carson St., Hawaiian Gardens; and May 14 from 3 to 7:30 p.m. at Bellflower Oddfellows House, 15720

Clark Ave.

The Red Cross is holding weekly standard first-aid and safety classes at the following locations: Mondays from 7 to 10 p.m. at Bellflower High School, 15301 S. McNab St.; Tuesdays from 7 to 10 p.m. at Rogers Junior High School, 365 Monrovia Ave.; Wednesdays at Stanford Junior High School, 5871 Los Arcos, also from 7 to 10 p.m.; and Saturdays beginning May 24 from noon to 3 p.m. at Jefferson Junior High School, Seventh Street and Euclid Avenue.

Summer classes set at college

California State College, Dominguez Hills, will offer classes ranging from elementary education to electronic music during two summer sessions June 23 to Aug. 1 and July 18 to Aug. 29.

Information and free schedules of classes are available from the office of summer sessions.

The courses include the Image of Man for high school seniors, education, electronic music, the business aspects of the music industry and a five-day field course in ecology at Tuolumne Meadows in Yosemite for hikers and backpackers.

A noncredit seminar on "How to Start, Finance and Manage a New Business" will also be offered.

Formal enrollment in the college is not required for summer classes.

to suddenly come up with a turkey, these are the things that give the movie industry about the same kind of predictability and stability that goes with a roll of the dice. And this year, Wall Street loves it.

Movie stocks as a group have been the top performers in the market recovery since last winter's lows. Despite the chronic skepticism of many investors toward Hollywood, given the boom-or-bust cycles of most motion picture companies, virtually all the concerns are trading well up toward their 1975 highs, often at double or better the year's low.

The startling gains for movie stocks come despite indications that this may not be a splendid year for the companies involved.

Profits so far are up, but, following a record-breaking 1974 performance, movie attendance on a national basis is softening.

Thousands of actors and technicians are out of work because of curtailed production, attributed partially to the general recession and partially to a continuing industry trend to make fewer but hopefully more profitable pictures.

It now appears that output of feature films is likely to drop by as much as 50 per cent this year.

Precise, industry-wide financial statistics are notoriously elusive in the movie business.

The Department of Commerce estimated that domestic gross box office revenues in 1974 rose more than 15 per cent to $1.7 billion. It predicted that the total would grow another 15 per cent this year and swell by 10.2 per cent a year through 1980. Many analysts find that expectation rather optimistic.

'Thousands of actors jobless'

Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, which represents most major movie makers and distributors, put the 1974 revenue total at $1.9 billion. Total attendance in the first quarter of the year, he said, "was about even with last year," while film rental revenues were up "something less than 10 per cent."

Variety, the entertainment industry's Bible, painted a grimmer picture. It analyzed box office receipts in more than 20 major markets during the first four months of the year and found attendance off by almost 12 per cent from year-earlier levels.

Whatever the truth of levels of activity, the profit motive behind Wall Street's fascination with Hollywood is clear.

MCA, Inc., the entertainment conglomerate that owns Universal Pictures, reported a 45 per cent jump in first-quarter net earnings, to $15 million.

Firms report high earnings

The Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation quadrupled net to $4.5 million, including extraordinary items. Walt Disney Productions showed a 53 per cent gain to $14.2 million. The United Artists Corporation earned $4.8 million, its best first quarter since 1969, although up only marginally from last year's.

Movies now filming version for European audiences

Associated Press

A different kind of double standard is producing two versions of a new movie, one for the American market, the other for Europe.

In the years when American film makers were still hampered by the self-censorship code, movies were sometimes shot in two versions — with nudity and sex for overseas and tamer footage for Americans. Star

Charles Bronson discloses something new:

"Death Wish" was a big hit in Europe, so the distributors wanted another Charlie Bronson film with action. They took my new picture, 'Breakout,' and cut a special version with emphasis on the action.

"It's not what the American audience will see, and I don't like the practice at all."

Warner Communications, Inc. (Warner Brothers), which set an industry record last year with $275 million in theatrical film rental revenues, has also reported a strong net first quarter, with earnings of $14.2 million.

Columbia Pictures Industries, Inc., has not reported its quarterly results yet, but after executing a major turnaround last year, it is said to have a trio of profitable pictures showing this spring — "Funny Lady," "Shampoo" and "Tommy."

All this despite the generally depressing state of corporate earnings in America. In fact, the boom-and-bust movie industry is often considered countercyclical to the general economy.

Phillip Geiger, a vice president of the Bank of America and specialist in entertainment industry financing, said that recent indications of a downturn in movie attendance could be a signal that the national economy is on the mend. Historically, during an economic recession, movie attendance remains fairly strong, he said. "When attendance at movies levels off, you're about six months before a turnaround," he said.

'Quality of films still paramount'

The reasons for this pattern aren't entirely clear, but one analyst speculated that people chose movies as cheap entertainment during the bottom of a recession. In that view, they may now be beginning to shift to more expensive forms of entertainment, or toward spending their money on more durable goods.

Theater managers and movie goers at scattered points around the country say the recession and increased prices have been factors in the leveling off of theater going, where it has occurred. But they say the major thing has been quality of movies issued so far this year.

Earl Wilson
Newmans feted, smiling

NEW YORK — Paul Newman, wearing a light beard and with a can of beer always near, had more fun than anybody with the Film Society saluted him and Joanne Woodward as great actors and artists — especially since Tennessee Williams introduced him in a ringing speech at Avery Fisher Hall as "Paul Goodman."

"I knew Paul Goodman the poet so well and got confused," the famous playwright, as red as his dinner jacket, confessed. When he pronounced Newman's name correctly seconds later, he drew applause.

Newman said that he'd been interviewed so often about their honor that he told his wife, "I'm so sick of hearing my own voice!" She replied, "Why were you listening?"

One of their films excerpted was "Winning" which showed Joanne in a near-naked love scene. "I would like you," Blue Eyes Newman said, "to announce the engagement of my wife to R.J. Wagner."

As scores and scores of fans crushed around them later at a party at Lincoln Center State Theater, Newman said to the autograph seekers, "Sorry, that's one thing I don't do." The Newmans gave up autographing years ago and you can see how it hurt them.

"What's the beard for ... your next picture?" I asked Paul.

"Yeah ... it's 'The Joy of Sex,' I think I ought to have a beard for a porno picture," he said. About this time Newman's daughter Susan shoved through the crowd. "Come over here to your old man," he said, "I wish to announce our engagement."

Sylvia Sidney, Myrna Loy, Jo Van Fleet, Shelley Winters, Otto Preminger, and others swarmed around the hero and heroine. Paul didn't seem to want to go. He smiled at everybody who pushed forward a pencil but he steadfastly declined and said, "I have a different philosophy about those things." I noticed that nobody got mad.

THE MIDNIGHT EARL
Rock star Alice Cooper's girl friend Cindy Lang shrugged off rumors they'll marry: "We've been together six years — I don't think we want a change" ... David Cassidy stopped into Pier 52 for a Coke, and had to leave by a back entrance to duck jostling fans outside ... Vivienne Della Chiesa, starring at the Persian Rm., has a tuneful, entertaining act that shows off her big voice. (She tossed her feather boa aside, explaining, "It keeps getting in my mouth. Besides, everybody's already seen it.")

Today's Best Laugh: John Markus mentions a friend who's a slow reader, "Who else leaves placemarks in newspapers?"

Wish I'd Said That: With tolls being raised everywhere, one driver insisted that when he comes to that bridge, he won't cross it.

Remembered Quote: "You never realize how patient you can be until the fellow who is arguing with you happens to be your boss." Bobby Vinton.

Earl's Pearls: Veteran bandleader Vincent Lopez once explained why he didn't have female musicians: "If they're pretty, they distract the men in my band. If they're not pretty, they distract me."

There are so many medical shows scheduled for TV next season that you probably won't be able to get a set fixed without a prescription. That's earl, brother.

A's, but only for effort

By DAVID LEVINSON

The Lakewood Philharmonia, which usually has interesting programs and plays them well, did only half the job in a concert at the First Baptist Church in Lakewood Friday evening.

Conductor Bruce Polay put together one of his more novel programs: an early Haydn symphony (No. 7), the "Poem" for flute and orchestra by Charles Tomlinson Griffes, Darius Milhaud's "The Creation of the World," and the Cherubini "Requiem." But the performance of everything but the "Requiem" was badly marred by wrong notes, out-of-tune playing and ragged attacks. The violins in particular had painful disagreements about intonation.

THERE were good points, however, of which the brightest and most consistent were the singing of the Long Beach State University 49er Choir and the flute playing of Valorie Emilio, the orchestra's first chair flutist.

Dr. Edgar Thompson conducted the choir and orchestra in the Cherubini, and his clear, straightforward approach kept things in good order. The orchestra's playing was more precise than in the rest of the program, its brass was handsome, and the choral work had both spirit and nuance.

Miss Emilio is a first-rate flutist with a warm, rich tone, a sure technique and an uncanny ability to play confidently in the midst of orchestral chaos. It would be good to hear her in a more interesting and more demanding work.

The orchestra's woodwinds were generally good, and the extraordinary oboe, bright clarinet and smoky saxophone in the Milhaud deserve special praise. Polay conducted the Milhaud from the piano, which was not in much better shape than the orchestra.

THE orchestra's troubles may be traceable in part to the fact that it was playing in a hall that was new to the musicians. The length and difficulty of the program was probably a handicap, too. My hunch is that there just wasn't enough rehearsal time to master so much music in such widely varying styles.

At the intermission, five young musicians from Poly High, aided by a sixth from the orchestra substituting for an ill Poly High cellist, delivered a generally strong and intelligent reading of Brahms' String Sextet No. 2.

DOWNTOWN
Toronto forms a towering backdrop for sailboats on Lake Ontario. View from top stories of the man-made waterfront pinnacles extends across the lake to New York State on the southern shore and Niagara Falls, shared by the U.S. and Canada. Ethnic population influx has made Toronto the second most populous city in Canada.

GAL-IVANTING

Toronto is worthy of exploration

Toronto is a vast, sprawling citadel with a personal touch. Jane Jacobs, author of "Life and Death of America", refers to it as the last surviving city of North America.

Most Torontonians, as they call themselves, moved here from somewhere else, so it is not yet ingrown with the "old family" syndrome. The Canadian cosmopolis supports 25 newspapers in different languages, and one publisher who produces literature in Swazi.

This constant influx of newcomers inspires all kinds of culture. A few years back a powerful contingent of city fathers with an English background decided that the prestige of the city would be en-

Overlooking Toronto's architecturally controversial City Hall, its contemporary Ontario Place exhibition grounds, its island parks, lake shores and historic sites, the view extends all the way to Niagara Falls and the south shore of Lake Ontario in New York State.

It is unfortunate that a splendid collection of Eskimo sculptures and drawings exhibited along the inner walls of the gallery have to compete with the view, as they are equally impressive.

Not far from the Center is Ed's Warehouse at 270 King St. This restaurant, opened for both lunch and dinner, is filled with a priceless collection of Victorian. It also has good food. After saving the Royal Alexander theatre next door from demolition squads, Ed Mirnish, the owner turned the neighboring warehouse into a restaurant so theater-goers would have a convenient place to eat.

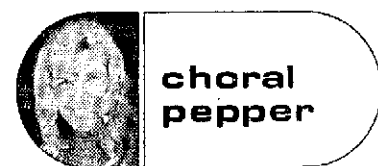

Autographed portraits of stars he has brought to Toronto dating back to Al Jolson and Myrna Loy contribute to nostalgia, while others of Jane Fonda vintage represent today. While I was there, Ingrid Bergman was making one of her rare stage appearances in the theatre.

Similarly intriguing is a block-long street owned and restored by this same Ed Mirnish and located near his Honest Ed's Discount House on Yonge Street. Here, 19th century brownstone dwellings have been refurbished in whimsical colors and period fripperies to house antique shops, art galleries and boutiques.

ANYTHING FROM a four-legged bathtub to a Victorian hat rack is likely to be displayed in the brief front walks fronting these charming Victorian houses. It is an amusing place to wander with a camera.

Along with its restaurants, Toronto is equally endowed with atmospheric hotels. I stayed at the luxurious Westbury, noted for its fine restaurants, and later spent a weekend at a sensational new hotel called Inn on the Park. With indoor and outdoor swimming pools, saunas, park-like surroundings and four dining rooms, it provides a resort within the city, even including covered tennis courts.

hanced with a grand opera house, anticipating that the area's 325,000 Italian population would pay for it.

The way things worked out, though, the Italians had become so integrated that their traditional addiction to opera was lost and the sponsoring group had to support it themselves.

ALTHOUGH THE Japanese rate 14th in population among Toronto's ethnic groups, the Tanaka family recently opened the finest Japanese restaurant this side of Tokyo.

Artfully designed so that you can eat on the second floor in private rooms on cushions with pretty girls preparing chawan-mushi on handsome hibachis, or else on the ground level at community tables with heating units built into their centers, Tanaka of Tokyo (on Bay Street south of Bloor) presents an unusual gourmet experience.

Mrs. Tanaka, a vivacious second generation Canadian who divides her time between Toronto and Tokyo, introduced me to a sake martini. This wine, brewed from rice, is usually served hot, but that was not so in Japan until after the 8th century, when drinkers started to heat it for warmth during winter months.

It may take another 11 centuries to reconvert the Japanese, but for North Americans accustomed to chilled drinks, a saketini has merit.

TO GET YOUR bearings in this expansive city, the usual city-wide sightseeing tour is somewhat inadequate. Almost as effective, and far less costly, is a 50-cent guided tour from the 55th floor of the Toronto Dominion Center's Observation Gallery.

Museums hold Canada's past

The Ottawa building housing two of Canada's newest, and yet oldest museums is as interesting as the displays inside.

It looks like a baronial castle, it's sinking into the ground, and it once housed Canada's Parliament after the main Parliament Building was destroyed by fire at the height of World War I.

Up until a few years ago the experts were almost ready to write off the old castle sprawling over a city block because it was built on a swamp. But tests revealed it was sinking at only one eighty-fourth of an inch a year.

Canadian travel cavalcade

Now the halls that once echoed with the rhetoric of the wartime cabinet of Sir Robert Borden whisper the secrets of the evolution of man in what has become — after five years and $6 million worth of renovations — the National Museums of Man and Natural Sciences.

In the Museum of Natural Sciences a dinosaur display — one of the finest in North America — is accentuated by soft silhouetted lighting. Petrified ribs which were once bone arch gauntly, triggering the imagination back to when these mighty monarchs trashed about in the sub tropical vegetation of Canada 75 million years ago.

THE NATIONAL Museum of Man, which occupies the eastern half of the building, is the new home of the Speyer Collection — internationally recognized as the world's finest collection of Canadian Indian art.

Each hall in both museums has a distinct theme. There is continuity from one to another. These are labyrinths of discovery.

EDMONTON SKYLINE FORMS A GLITTERING PANORAMA OF PROGRESS AT TWILIGHT

Alberta capital a boom town

By HERB SHANNON
I.P.-T TRAVEL EDITOR

EDMONTON, Alberta - Everything is up to date in Canada's fastest-growing frontier city. Skyscrapers raise concrete cliffs in splendid surprise from the prairie flatlands 350 miles north of the Montana border, unobstructed underground pedestrian malls interlock with an embryo elevated walkway system to link downtown hotels, civic structures and cultural centers, and rapid transit is on the way to extend this freedom of mobility to the surrounding suburbs.

There isn't anything to compare with this city of 500,000 bustling citizens between here and the North Pole. Once a fur-trading post and jumping-off point for Yukon gold prospectors, Edmonton has become Canada's fourth largest city.

Black gold is the primary reason for this phenomenal growth, most of it since the discovery of oil in 1947. Edmonton now is the petroleum capital of Canada as well as the capital of the Province of Alberta, with some 7,000 producing wells in the surrounding area and a network of 10,000 miles of pipeline to refineries.

BUT THIS IS only the beginning of Edmonton's energy boom. The 21 billion barrels of oil discovered when the first gusher erupted 25 miles southwest of the city is only a splash in the bucket compared to the estimated 300 billion barrels of recoverable crude trapped in the Athabasca sands, a goosy wasteland of 40,000 square miles about 250 miles to the northeast.

Until recently there has been a catch to development of this reserve, larger than that of all the Arab countries combined. The technology for getting the grit out of the goo didn't exist. But next year a consortium of oil firms and government agencies will have a billion-dollar plant operating in the tar sands. If the investment proves out, there will be as many as 25 similar plants extracting up to 3.5 million barrels of oil a day by the end of this century.

The method of recovery will be strip mining, two very dirty words to conservationists. In this case the operation will be more on the order of land reclamation. The byproduct of the oil extraction process will be clean sand, which can be dumped back into the mine pits or piled into dunes to relieve the monotony of the landscape. With replanting, these improvements on nature would transform the vast area into a recreational park where campers won't track tar into their tents.

THIS ENLIGHTENED approach to industrial development is a hallmark of Edmonton's planning for the future. By the time the Athabasca project is in full swing, the city expects to double its population to become one of five Canadian communities to top the million mark.

Plans for the metropolis of 2001 are already formulated. Edmonton has taken every precaution in the book against urban blight caused elsewhere by haphazard or expedient development. The Civic Center is one of very few in North America to benefit from formal planning before the foundations were laid. Industry is rigidly zoned and located mostly downwind and downstream from residential areas. Riverfront parkland has been set aside at the present proportion of 13.5 acres per 1,000 population. The city's innovative decentralization of residential sections into "community leagues" clustered around recreational and school facilities has been widely copied throughout Canada.

Ready for tomorrow, Edmonton today has virtually none of the visitor disadvantages of North America's older big cities and most of the advantages. Gasoline is plentiful and cheap, there is no sales tax in Alberta, streets are safe for strolling any time of day or night, most of the hotel-motel accommodations are less than 10 years old and restaurants enjoy an ample supply of the produce of farm and cattle land extending to the horizon from any point on the city limits.

TOURIST HOSPITALITY is incredible. For arrivals by auto during July and August, the Visitor's Bureau provides free motorcycle escorts to hotels or any other location in the city. Motorists from outside the province also can obtain passes good for a free ride on any parking meter in town.

Constantly expanding transportation services are needed to keep pace with Edmonton's growing economic and vacation attractions. The city has outgrown its original airport, now relegated to industrial cargo service, and is rapidly developing additional facilities at the new International Airport on the outskirts. The most direct airline link to northern Alberta for Californians is Air Canada's new San Francisco-Edmonton route.

While preparing for the future, Edmonton has not forgotten its present role as northern gateway to the Canadian Rockies and Jasper National Park, nor its part in the past. During Klondike Days, a 10-day civic celebration in July, the city explodes in Gay Nineties costume, thronging the streets with up to half its citizenry at a time. Special events include sidewalk honkytonk entertainment, parades, and river raft races reminiscent of the Sourdough days. The dates this year are July 16-26.

The vision of 2001 does not preclude a lighthearted look at present-day fun and frolic. Edmonton's official visitor's handbook lists two local customs to be observed at all times. Cracking hazelnuts in theaters is prohibited and playing laggies in hotel corridors is not condoned after midnight.

Quebec giving Royale facelift

Place Royale is where Quebec City began.

On a rocky point jutting out into the St. Lawrence River, Samuel de Champlain constructed his fortified Habitation in 1608. Since then Place Royale has been razed by fires, bombarded by cannon balls, lined with lavish Norman houses of successful merchants, and abandoned for the city's fashionable Upper Town. It has been a thriving marketplace and the setting for the execution of criminals.

Today Lower Town is in a state of transition. Some buildings have been faithfully reconstructed; others lie untouched, awaiting their return to splendor thanks to a multi-million-dollar restoration project directed by the Quebec Ministry of Cultural Affairs and largely funded by the federal Canadian government.

On one street the paint is peeling off dilapidated wooden doors and 20th century Coca Cola signs. On another, Norman houses of stone outwardly look like they did when prosperous French settlers were at the helm of an empire that stretched from Quebec City to the Gulf of Mexico. Close by, a block of buildings is being stripped of incongruous additions of the 1900s and rebuilt using techniques up to 300 years old.

DESPITE DESTRUCTION of many historic buildings, Lower Town still represents the greatest concentration of 17th and 18th century stone structures in travel

North America. When renovations and reconstruction of Place Royale and surrounding streets are completed, more than 80 buildings will regain their original exteriors. Unsightly afterthoughts will be removed.

When finished, possibly by 1980, the area will be a place to live with accommodations for about 200 families, and service stores including the neighborhood barber shop.

Airline prices continue to change . . . much to the confusion of clients and travel agents alike.

Perhaps one of the best values we've run across in all of this price "juggling" is a brand new TGC (Travel Group Charter) via Continental Air Lines established by the Club Universe operators from Los Angeles to Honolulu and return and priced at $189 round trip.

It's a Saturday to Saturday experience, and good for a 1 or 2 week stay at Waikiki with complimentary meals and cocktail service and is effective through December 20th.

Advance booking with a deposit is required but for real economy it's hard to beat. We've got lots of good hotel and tour packages to go with it so call any of our three offices below for complete information. See you on the beach at Waikiki.

Visitors to Victoria, B.C. find pleasant surprises

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Staff Writer

VICTORIA, B.C. — Staring blindly today across her namesake city's busy inner harbor is a handsome statue of the British Queen-Empress whose name symbolizes an age remembered perhaps as smug, pompous, hypercritical — and somehow, infinitely desirable in these uncertain closing years of the 20th century.

Look twice at this Lady standing high on a marble pedestal fronting the British Columbia Parliament building. Indeed there is something different about her, but what?

Ah! That's it! This is a young Victoria, her thin, vivacious face unwrinkled, a long, flowing dress suggesting vigorous youth. Definitely this is not the plump, frumpy matron in rusty black weeds whose prematurely saddened face peers out from 19th century coins, pictures and statues — including one at a nearby wax museum:

VICTORIA, B.C. WELCOMES VISITORS

There is a message for tourists in a statue which at second glance, reflects a young and vital woman in full bloom rather than the aging stereotype we automatically expect to find. If we — and I was one who did — think of Victoria, the city, as an aging anachronism "more like England than England," there is a surprise awaiting on Vancouver Island.

IT IS a city now changing, modernizing, updating. Numerous traces of the mother country abound, even now, but an American lifestyle or idiom is increasingly apparent. One perceptive Canadian observer put it thusly: "We are displaying an 'alternative Americanism,' showing the world there is more than one way to lead the good life, American style."

As different alloys are formed by blending various metals, so a new culture seemingly is emerging north of the 49th parallel. Fused by the distinctive Canadian character, the best of Europe, the Americas and elsewhere may be formed into a new and better amalgam.

Victoria, with an estimated population of 199,000 in the metropolitan area, now is undergoing such a transformation.

Across from the Queen's statue, for instance, is a sprawling red brick structure in which Rudyard Kipling, that poet laureate of imperialism, Victorian style, could feel at home. He did, in fact, enjoy it on one of his tours of the New World.

This is the Empress Hotel, built in 1908, expanded in 1929 and both owned and managed today with efficiency and warmth by the Canadian Pacific Railroad through its subsidiary, CP Hotels.

Another subsidiary, CP Air, recently inaugurated twice-daily, non-stop round-trip service linking Los Angeles International with Vancouver's even newer airport. Flight time north or south is two hours and 15 minutes.

IN VICTORIA, at least one old custom survives. At 3 every afternoon the Empress serves an old fashioned English High Tea. Muffins, crumpets, thin-cut sandwiches, pound cake, fruit, all the goodies served up by a people who didn't intend to dine until 9 but needed to keep up the old strength in the meantime.

And in a basement room, only a short time later, a local combo will blast out the loudest rock north of Seattle. Guest rooms generally are large and modern, managing to retain the best of the old ways while offering instant hot water, among other contemporary benefits. More could be said, but this thumbnail sketch.

Downtown Victoria presents other amalgams. Stores and shops that could take their places, architecturally speaking, on the main street of a provincial English town rub cornices with Urban Renewal Modern.

Shops specializing in English bone china and woolens adjoin curio establishments selling allegedly genuine Indian and/or Eskimo handcrafts.

There is an absolutely super provincial museum that ranks favorably with all but the world's greater displays. And a maritime museum that unfortunately was closed when I called.

Government, followed closely by tourism, is Victoria's ranking industry. Behind the legislative chambers there are row on row of lesser structures where the work of administering the province is done. Strong traces of bureaucracy abound in a city that in many ways strongly resembles Sacramento.

Several gasoline stations I checked listed prices between 59.9 and 62.2 cents per Canada's imperial gallon, about one-fourth larger than the U.S. standard.

To the visitor from south of the border, a special pleasure is the fresh, robust aroma of unpolluted air, which does indeed possess a delightfully sweet aroma.

Instead of cruising the Freeways bumper-to-bumper, cruise the Caribbean island-to-island.

7 & 14-Day Air/Sea Cruises

Last year, we took more Californians off the hectic California freeways to the calm Caribbean seaways, than anybody else around. And for good reasons.

Song of Norway, Nordic Prince, and Sun Viking cruise at 16 knots, over beautiful blue water, under clear Caribbean skies. And there's never any traffic jamming their way.

They're the most popular floating islands in the Caribbean. And you can take them to most of the other popular Caribbean islands, too.

And what makes us even more popular is the fact that our Air/Sea Cruises include your round-trip charter jet fare to Miami via United Airlines, ground transportation to and from the ship, baggage transfers, transportation and port taxes, and the most popular islands in the Caribbean. All for little more than the price of the cruise alone.

We have two two-week cruises. From $845 to $1,365, Nordic Prince will take you to San Juan, St. Thomas, Martinique, Port-au-Prince, Aruba, Port Antonio, Curaçao, and Caracas, Venezuela.

Or, you can cruise with Sun Viking to Grenada, Barbados, Port-au-Prince, Guadeloupe, St. Thomas, Curaçao, San Juan, and Caracas.

If you've only got a week, take Song of Norway to Nassau, San Juan, and St. Thomas. From as little as $495 to $755.

We guarantee our departures every Friday evening year-round, from Los Angeles International. So see your travel agent today.

And get your Caribbean cruise off to a flying start.

HALIFAX WATERFRONT AS SEEN FROM BLUENOSE II

TWO FACES OF HALIFAX

Propriety versus privateers

By SHEILA MCCOOK

Halifax is a two-faced town. Some think the Nova Scotia city is a prim place, to which proper Britishers long ago carted their afternoon teas, favorite servants and strict code of etiquette, in an effort to recreate the way of life they'd enjoyed at home.

Halifax was founded in 1749 as a British stronghold to offset the might of Louisbourg, France's great fortress situated uncomfortably nearby on Cape Breton Island. Being a military base (and still Canada's naval training centre) brought with it all the attendant rules of behavior and attention to rank. Being the capital of Nova Scotia only added to Halifax's well-developed sense of propriety.

Some remember the other Halifax, the one with the shady past.

It goes back a long time to the 18th and 19th centuries when privateers set off from Halifax to bedevil giant ships sailing on the Atlantic. Booth was lavish Chateau Halifax. Other new hotels have gone up, while the stately old ones have been spruced up. New museums, and restaurants serving top-rank cuisine, dot the city.

But one of the most welcome "new" elements of Halifax is a revived interest in preserving the city's past. An outstanding example of Halifax's fascination with its old self is the waterfront area which holds considerable sentimental value for sea-loving Haligonians.

The three-acre area is being restored in what is one of the most extensive projects of its kind on the continent. Fronting the waters of The Narrows (an inlet of the Atlantic forming one of the finest inland harbors in the world, and the largest inland ice-free harbor in North America) is a section that has survived from about 1800. Buildings are of wood, and stone, even ballast from the ships that docked at Halifax.

This old waterfront area is considered to be the last of its type on the continent. Long neglected and hidden by the grime of years, its buildings are now re-emerging, not to become museums but functioning parts of city life.

Oldest is Capt. Collins' warehouse where silks, spices, rum, wines, sugar and booty from ships during the 1812 War were stashed. Its rebirth will see it become a pub, restaurant and lounge.

So much money did the privateer make that he was obliged to build a bank to contain it all. Around the corner from the warehouse, Collins' bank will again become a bank.

Another section being restored is immediately adjacent and about half a century younger. Five and six story buildings with elaborate Victorian facades in front, backing on to grubby alleys at the rear, were built the year after the Halifax fire of 1850.

Restoration primarily consists of cleaning street-front exteriors and knocking down interior walls to allow for more room to contain, among others, the Nova Scotia School of Design.

Docked at the old wharf will be a vessel that must never be overlooked on a Halifax visit — the Bluenose. This is an exact replica as to hull, sailplan and rigging of the original Bluenose, undefeated champion of the international fishermen's series of races from 1921 to 1938. During the warm months Bluenose II keeps a busy schedule transporting tourists on three-and-a-half hour daily excursions.

brought back to town and openly auctioned off to the highest bidders, a practice that made Halifax's most accomplished privateer, Capt. Enos Collins, a millionaire.

Records tell of Knock 'Em Down Street and a brothel called Seven Steps to Hell, testifying to rowdy stages in Halifax's story. Slums, seedy bars and violence were unfortunate realities up through the Second World War.

Haligonians wouldn't for the world pretend the past didn't exist, but they do insist that the city has changed. It has flung off its primness to enjoy life more. And nowadays when people refer to Halifax's shadiness, they are talking about magnificent rows of trees.

New construction has cleaned up much of Halifax. Downtown is Scotia Square, largest commercial complex in the Atlantic Provinces. It includes the

Hawaii legends abound

Kauai, Hawaii

Pele doesn't live here anymore. Pele is the goddess of fire.

She now lives down on the island of Hawaii. The Big Island with the active volcano. In Hawaii's legends, she came to Kauai first.

That's correct geologically, too. Kauai was the first island in the Hawaii chain to rise from the smoking seas. Tour buses go to see Pele's place where the road ends beyond Hanalei.

A beach boy I knew saw her outside the Chinese papamama store.

"I see old lady standing there. I say, 'Wassamat-ta lady? You miss de bus?' I turn aroun' and when I look back, she's gone! Dat was Pele!"

WE'RE AT COCO PALMS on a blue sky day. The surf piles up boom-crash-hiss on the golden sands of Waialua Bay. The palm fronds clap-clap like a loose shutter in the warm trade wind.

The low rise hotel is set in a great grove of coconut trees and the cottages are grass thatched.

Once kings and queens of Kauai lived here. At night luau torches lay golden reflections on the lagoon that was the royal fish ponds. It's sacred ground.

The first outriggers from the South Pacific landed here. There are a half dozen or more heiaus — the Hawaiian temple platforms.

Up the road are the royal birthstones where Kauai queens insured that the child would be blessed and carry royal blood.

THE PLACE IS stiff with akua — spirits. (A resident akua used to haunt the house where I lived.)

It's wonderful swimming water, 70 degrees. The food is generous and there are four open air restaurants to choose from.

If you get the idea this is my favorite place in all Hawaii, you're right on, brudda. About $50 a day for two. You can get a brochure by writing Coco Palms, Kauai, Hawaii.

A lot of other hotels on Kauai and Club Med-rance has a magnificent place at Hanalei bay. The movie "South Pacific" was made here.

The Club is on the high ground where the French planter sang "Some Enchanted Evening" to Nurse Nellie Forbush. And you can't get more romantic than that.

"Can we camp in the Hawaiian Islands?"

You can and the State Park Department will tell you how. In the summer season they limit how long you can stay in one place.

Great place with no one around is at the end of Kauai. (Where Pele lived.) Near a fresh water stream where you can wash off the salt.

You do need a car to go to the papa-mama store in Hanalei. If you're going to be anywhere on Kauai more than a couple of days you want a car to run around in.

If you catch an overcast day at Waialua bay, you can get over on the sunny, dry side at Poipu beach in a half hour. Three hotels for lunch. Prices are moderate — unless you get on those $3 a pop rum maitais which disarrange my budget. Auwe!

"What do you suggest for clothing? Will we need raincoats?"

Dress on these Outer Islands is informal. About the only thing they want you to do is wear sandals in the dining room.

Waikiki at Honolulu likes a jacket at dinner. But aloha shirts only are OK out here.

All hotels have some kind of beach service where you don't have to change for lunch.

No raincoats. It's too warm. Go inside. Rain only lasts a half hour.

"Is it better to learn Hawaiian? And how do you do it?"

Nobody speaks total Hawaiian except on Ni'ihau, a privately owned island with some 135 Hawaiians living there.

Tourist stores sell a book "How To Speak Hawaiian." All you pick up from it are a few words that have inserted themselves into daily conversation. "Pau" for finished is one.

"We had problems with eating in Mexico. Do they have it in Hawaii?"

Only complaints I ever heard were from people who put on pounds stuffing in all that coconut cake. That and the morning eat-all-you-want breakfast.

It's a temptation. But you didn't come here to cruise the monuments. So eat.

Pioneer past is recreated

Fort La Reine Museum and Pioneer Village at Portage La Prairie, Manitoba, is named after the first fort in this area built in 1738 on the banks of the Assiniboine River by famed Canadian explorer LaVerendrye.

The Village complex includes the fort stockade and military display, the main museum building with artifacts of native and pioneer people who lived in the region, a log homestead which once housed a family of 12, a country church, schoolhouse, and store.

Each building has a place in the history of the Portage/West Prospect area, and was brought to the site as a permanent historic attraction. All are furnished with authentic items from a century ago.

Also on display are a Red River cart, a two-wheeled ox-driven vehicle commonly used by early Manitoba settlers; and a York Boat, a large wooden boat holding up to 20 people, used to transport trade goods and furs between the Red River settlement and Hudson Bay.

The complex is located two miles east of Portage La Prairie on the Trans-Canada Highway. Picnic grounds are nearby.

Child's eye view of Mothers Day

MOTHER'S DAY

Mother's day is a happy day for your mother, of course. She gets presents that day. I like mother's day, my sister likes mother's day to. And my father likes mother's day the best, of course.

THE END

Andre Alves, 9

Children, here as well as in other countries, are called upon to honor their mothers on a certain day of the year. To find out just what children think of this practice, these newspapers solicited essays from third graders at Elliott Elementary School in Cerritos.

Taught by Mrs. Marli Surjopolos, these children are bilingual, Portuguese and most have been in this country for only one year.

The essays are presented here exactly as written with titles, punctuation and misspellings intact. Several of the children chose to type their work on the two typewriters this third-and-fourth-grade classroom purchased with proceeds from their own successful car wash.

Mothers day

I like mothers day it is a good. because we give gifts to mothers mothers like the gifts we give them on mothers day I always give my mother a gift and my mother likes the gifts

I give her and sometimes she smiles at me because she likes my gift that I give her when she smiles I know that she likes it.

Maria Fernandes, 9

About our mothers.

We need our mothers because they give food to us AND they take care of us. They give us beds to sleep in AND they give us clothes to put on us. They help us and they put us in school to learn to read AND do other things. We have our mothers because we love them and they love us too. Our mothers buy us candy and others candy AND that's why we love them. AND Also because they give us food and dress and they give us a home to live in and they give us a lot of things They give us Some Sisters and they give us a fathers too.

Thats all thank you very much

Mothers Day

Mothers Day is a happy day because my sister and I give my Mother some flowers. And Mothers day is for your Mother to rest so don't bug your Mother.

Arnold Eugene Morgado Jr., 9

What mother's day means to me

Mother's day is a day for your mother to rest.

It's a day to give your love to your mother.

And it's a day to give roses.

Mother's day is a very happy day for your mother.

I hope your mother has a very a very nice mother's day too.

So think about it. and you will think so too.

I Love Mothers Day

I love mothers day because it is nice.

I go and get some flowers.

My mother likes to smell flowers.

I love my mother because she loves me.

Thank you.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY COMIC

Humoring all the ethnics

By LINDA ZINK
Staff Writer

A rolly-polly New Yorker who is Jewish by birth, Irish by upbringing and "all mixed up" by his own definition is spreading the word on behalf of the survival of ethnic humor.

Joey Adams, comedian, writer and ambassador of good will for four presidents, has put together a type of do-it-yourself handbook for ethnic joke tellers.

In Adams' words "Ethnic Humor" (Manor Books: $1.25) is a workbook in which "I supply the humor, you supply the ethnic." The East Coast comic and radio show host contends there's nothing wrong with ethnic humor "just so long as you spread it around."

Adams explains his stand this way:

"Nobody has a corner on the market when it comes to being dumb or cheap or a bad driver. Two Jewish astronauts can be as stupid as two Polish astronauts. Men can drive as poorly as women. A German can drink as much as an Irishman.

"What I've tried to do with this book is put the fun back into ethnic humor by showing people that most of these jokes can apply to any group. Let's face it, in American humor somebody has to be the butt of the joke. But it doesn't have to be the same group all the time."

ADAMS BELIEVES that people have become too sensitive today about being the subject of humorous stories. At the same time, however, he agrees with the claims of women, blacks and other "picked on" groups that using them to the exclusion of other segments of society only perpetuates misleading stereotypes that these groups are trying to eradicate.

"I use a lot of ethnic humor, but I pick on everybody. By the time I'm through, the crowd knows I'm not trying to be bigoted or vicious.

"To be funny, ethnic humor is a matter of good taste. An ethnic joke in the hands of a bigot is not funny. Nor is it funny to use words like 'polack' and 'nigger' and 'kyke.'"

In addition to his work as a nightclub entertainer and television and radio show host, Adams has authored 25 humor books ("and a couple of mysteries") and has served as a gag writer and ambassador of good will for U.S. presidents since John Kennedy.

He explained that his latest book, "Ethnic Humor," was written at the suggestion of Vice President Rockefeller. Of his experiences working with past and present heads of state, Adams said, "LBJ was the greatest. He had his own style — a way of telling jokes that made them come off well.

"JFK was good, too. He had a wit and brightness about him that made him a natural."

Of Richard Nixon, Adams said, "There was no way he could do jokes. He had no sense of humor."

Of President Ford, Adams only remark was "he's trying."

ADAMS SAID he encourages public figures to poke fun at themselves. "I say to them, 'If you don't do it, your critics will.' Besides, a little self-deprecation makes a public figure one of the people. It makes them seem a little more human to their audiences."

He added that he insists that Rockefeller tell jokes about his money. "A gag can make you or destroy you. I believe — and I tell Rocky this — that if somebody's going to use humor as a tool, you might as well be the one using it."

As goodwill ambassador for Presidents Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon and Ford, Adams, who speaks 18 languages, has spent most of his time in Southeast Asia.

He marveled at how "gently and helpfully" Asians react to American faux pas. "When we don't know their customs and we do something dumb, they don't make fun of us. They're more inclined to correct us quietly."

He added that over the years he has learned what kind of humor goes over well with an Asian audience. "In Asia, you can't do jokes that hurt somebody even slightly. The humor must be gentle.

"The comic also has to remember that this is a culture where family and tradition are held in high regard. So you can't fall back on the standard mother-in-law and brother-in-law humor."

Q: I just saw and enjoyed Cornel Wilde in his newest film, "Sharks' Treasure," and have a few questions to ask about him. Did he fight the sharks himself in this movie or was the fighting done by stuntmen? And was he able to buy any insurance for the dangerous mission? — Morton R., New Bedford, Mass.

A: The veteran movie star tells us: "I fought the sharks and speared one for the first time in my life. And there was an entire pack of them swimming around during the scene. Shooting in Australia, we caught full force of thundering 10-foot breakers and waves 15 feet high outside the stone cliffs embracing the beach.

"Unlike another current film about sharks, we used no mechanical or rubber sharks in 'Sharks' Treasure.' Ours were all man-eaters."

Q: Where and in what year was Irving Berlin born? Also, please tell me in what year did he write "Remember"? — Mrs. Alice Ekberg, Creston, Iowa.

A: Irving Berlin, born May 11, 1888, in Temum, Russia, wrote "Remember" in 1925. That same year, the New Yorker magazine was founded; the memorable "Big Parade" and Chaplin's "Gold Rush" shared honors as the most-talked about silent films; and Red Grange (No. 77) created a furor when, after being recognized as the outstanding college football star (at the University of Illinois), he went pro with the Chicago Bears.

A: Yes. It happened at the Las Vegas Alladin Hotel in broad daylight. A bandit, after playing baccarat, snatched $10,000 in cash, then made a spectacular get-away by diving through a construction chute to a waiting car. There was one minor drawback. In his haste, he dropped a stack of $100 bills totalling $5,000.

The sordid side of '30s Hollywood

"The Day of the Locust" is at last on the screen, and Hollywood has an authentic masterpiece on its hands. The question that now remains is: Does the public really want art, or do they just want to talk about it?

It took 25 years to get Nathanael West's classic novel about Hollywood to the screen. It took British director John Schlesinger seven years to complete his masterwork. It opens this week in New York, and it is a fantastic motion picture. For once, a Hollywood studio has invested millions of dollars in a film that deserves it.

The money has been well spent. There are 30 speaking parts, scenes with 2,000 extras in vintage costumes, an Aimee Semple McPherson gospel meeting in a convention hall assembled to look like the old Hollywood Palladium with two full singing choirs and 1,700 extras from old people's homes in the Hollywood hills. There's a cock fight that is one of the most brutal yet beautifully photographed sequences I've ever seen in a film.

There are lavish parties, scenes in brothels and a catastrophe on a movie set during the filming of the Battle of Waterloo in which the set collapses and scores of actors and technicians fall to their deaths in an earthquake of crumbling plaster.

There's a world premier at Grauman's Chinese Theater of Cecil B. DeMille's "The Buccaneer" with a violent and horrifying riot. People are trampled to death in the mob frenzy, a child is stomped, the marquee caves in and the entire set burns down.

And through it all there is genius in every frame — from the poetic cinematography of Conrad Hall to the magnificent performances by a handpicked cast to the painstaking details with which every shot has been organized.

It is a film about illusion, about the dreams and disillusionments of the fringe people in the movie world of the 1930s, a black valentine to a sequestered graveyard where the freaks came to die. It's a tone poem about make-believe, filled with splendors and bleak, tap-dancing depressions, an obituary staged by Busby Berkeley against a painted backdrop of palm trees and death.

It's not "Singin' in the Rain," but it's a great, great film — one of the greatest motion pictures America has produced in my experience as a critic — and it remains to be seen just how many people are willing to see it for what it really is instead of what they want it to be.

"THE DAY OF the Locust" takes the ordinary ornaments and images of Tinseltown, and cleverly and mischievously spins them into Halloween goblins woven from the finest linen. The opening sequence (a movie studio coming to life at dawn) takes the breath away. It takes a beat or several to realize it is only the beginning of a series of sequences that will find their way into a broader canvas resembling the horrors of Goya or Francis Bacon.

There's the tacky Hollywood sign that poets and songwriters are still making use of in their satirical put-downs of Hollywood as a plastic paradise, with the viewfinders through which on a clear day you can see all the way to — yuch! — Catalina.

There's poor Faye, the dress extra and part-time call girl who pastes herself into a living pastiche of Clara Bow but who never quite makes it as anything more than a dreamer living in a filthy, pink stucco bungalow, searching for herself in the films of Eddie Cantor and Douglas Fairbanks. There's her father, Harry, the dying vaudeville clown fighting to stay out of Forest Lawn, doing one last soft shoe before the squalor sets in and mauls his heart, pickled already with cheap muscatel. There's Homer Simpson, the Iowa hotel clerk so simple-minded he suffers the sadism of others like an act of contrition for his awkwardness.

And there's Todd Hackett, the studio screenwriter who watches the whole crummy world of low-life flotsam pass across the retina of his eye like an old Vitaphone two-reeler. And there are the others — the stage mothers and child brats and broken little dwarfs and religious zealots and kewpie-doll harlots and ethnic technicians and broken has-beens still waiting for one chance to hit the target while they water their parched plants in their pajamas.

IT IS THIS VAST canvas of screen-magazine art, flooded with artificial California light, as though even the greasy water glasses are silhouetted with a lemony halo, that John Schlesinger has brought to the screen. It is not a pretty canvas. At times, it looks like Picasso's "Guernica." But it is art.

The finely honed performances help immensely: Burgess Meredith — who once promised great things, but never fulfilled his own dreams or the expectations of others and who instead became an undisciplined ham — gives the greatest performance of his career as Harry, the medicine salesman who has come to Hollywood to die.

Karen Black, who has never been a favorite of mine, brings to the role of Faye a mixture of sluttishness and coy, Mack Sennett voluptuousness that grows on you as the film progresses. Faye is a hard character to like — mean as a snake, destroying everyone who loves her, doing a danse macabre on the littered bodies and getting nowhere — but Waldo Salt has written her scenes with such sensitivity and such sophistication that the actress seems truly inspired for the first time in years.

"The Day of the Locust" is so great that even Karen Black can't wreck it. Walking on her heels while her toenail polish dries, she brings lollipop-licking, vengeful conviction to all that slatternly meanness and selfishness.

Donald Sutherland, as the retarded Homer, does a courageous bit of self-destruction as he molds himself into a grotesque instead of milking the role for sentimentality. He's the hapless victim of baroque circumstance, shipwrecked in a Barnum and Bailey world where nobody has time to see his sensitivity or seal his wounds because they're too busy licking their own.

Watching Faye wash down the drain the ice cream Homer's brought her, the frustration and agony in his eyes while the radio plays "Isn't it sublime, we're dancing on a dime," strikes a blow to the heart. Geraldine Page does the big gospel scene with a voice scorched by lightning from too many visions from her cardboard heaven, and William Atherton, one of the most interesting and complex new actors to emerge on the screen in years, is perfect as Todd, the one person who has the option to see the trap of Hollywood illusion for what it really is but who sticks around, anyway.

BUT EVEN WITH the important contributions of such formidable personnel, it is still John Schlesinger's film. At a time in movie history when most directors turn out whatever junk they are lucky enough to get hired to direct, Schlesinger creates unique, personal statements about a demented world that are highly charged, emotional visions from a wildly imaginative yet artfully controlled mind.

"Darling," "Midnight Cowboy" and "Sunday Bloody Sunday" were three of the finest films ever made, and "The Day of the Locust" is his masterpiece. It is a mind-blowing work of dazzling originality and brilliance that succeeds on many levels of consciousness. It is a black fable that satirizes the greed, apathy and violence of a processed society that tells its underfed, undernourished and underdeveloped to go out and get it all. The riot so many people find distasteful at the end of the film is the culmination of that absurd false hope, the moment when the locusts have their day. Without it, the title would have no meaning.

It's the same premise that led the Blacks to riot in Harlem, Watts and Newark. The TV told them to get some, so they went out and took it. The peripheral people in the overspill of the klieg lights, the deformed has-beens, the retarded autograph hounds, the never-was extras who live off the clabber of a

BURGESS MEREDITH as Harry gives his finest performance as an actor, according to Rex Reed, in John Schlesinger's masterpiece, "The Day of the Locust."

ACTRESS Karen Black even gets raves for her portrayal of Faye in the new film about behind-the-scenes Hollywood of the 30s.

The instant it happened

He stands in the waist of a Flying Fortress, as always larger than life. Theatrical? Yes, Gen. Douglas MacArthur was that. He may have been only pointing at a seagull off-camera, but he was a man who knew how to stage his great moments in history, moments in which he justly played major roles as one of the nation's greatest warriors.

This was the man who went over the top in World War I, armed with only a riding crop, and returned with a prisoner. A man ordered out of the inexorable trap of the Philippines in 1942 who said on landing at Alice Springs in Australia: "I came through and I shall return." And did, dramatically, three years later, with a corn cob pipe clamped in his jaws and his father's old revolver in a back pocket, and wandered along the beach saying, "This is what I dreamed about."

This is a first step back in realizing that dream. In September, 1943, MacArthur is flying over New Guinea where 1,700 men are parachuting into the jungle near Lae in a beginning of Operation Cartwheel, a six-month hop-skip operation to take Rabaul, the big Japanese base on the island of New Britain.

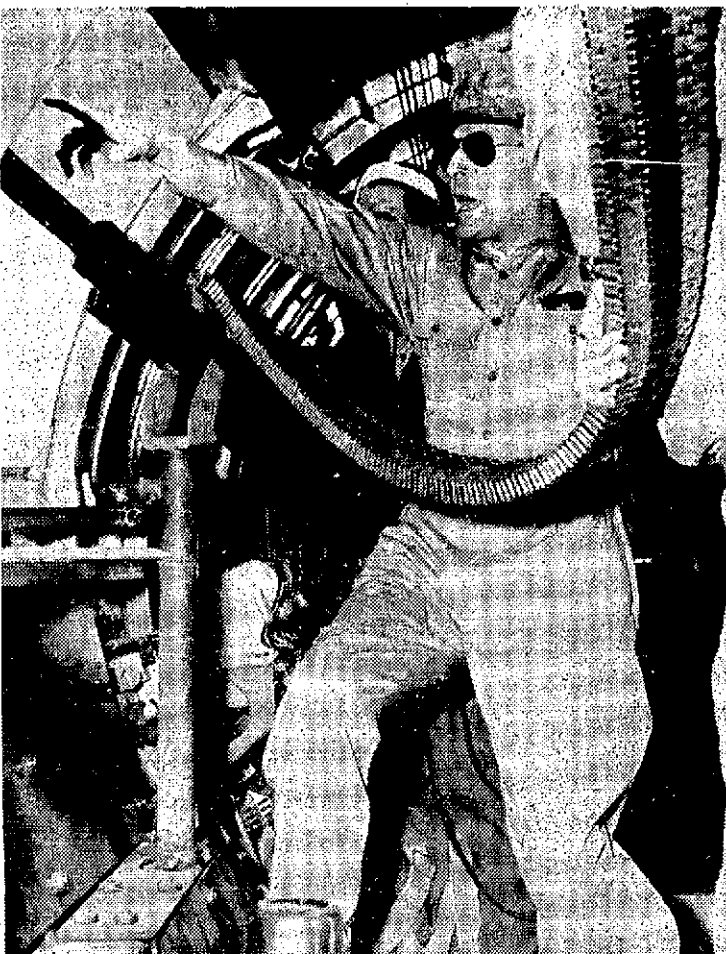

Other steps followed — Hollandia, Sarmi, Biak, Morotai — names now as overgrown as the battles they marked. But to get there, MacArthur had to fight his own people, particularly the U.S. Navy, which favored an amphibious campaign through the Central Pacific instead of MacArthur's advocacy of opening the route to an eventual landing in the Philippines.

EVENTUALLY there was a compromise, for there was a war in Europe, too, where plans were being made for the Normandy landing next year. GIs were already fighting in Italy and a massive air bombardment was leveling Germany.

MacArthur's obduracy left scars and controversy, both in World War II and later in Korea when he was fired from his command. Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall said MacArthur was "oversensitive about everything."

But he was also a man who could tell Lt. Gen. Robert Eichelberger in a prelude to the Lae operation: "Bob, I want you to take Buna or not come back alive."

All mortal... except M.D.s

By SUSAN FOGG
(c) 1975, Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — The prospect of their own death — (although hypothetical) — crumbles the "cool, scientific objectivity" medical students pride themselves on having toward dying, a Canadian Psychiatrist reports.

In a test of 78 students in a course on "dying, death and terminal care," Dr. Michael A. Simpson of McMaster University in Ontario asked each student to fill out a death certificate with his or her name on it.

Less than half the class of medical, nursing and divinity students were able to turn in completed certificates as a result of their uneasiness, Simpson reported in an article in the Journal of Medical Education.

"While a self-perception of calm, cool-headed scientific objectivity is popular among the students they were surprised at the extent to which their reactions reflected uneasy, superstitious thinking," Simpson said.

About twice as many women as men returned the certificates — 21 out of the 44 coeds, as compared with 9 of the 34 men — Simpson said.

ALTHOUGH the class had just completed an examination of death in modern society, "Who dies, when and from what causes," Simpson said the certificates expressed more wishful thinking than hard-headed realism.

A heart attack or other cardiac disease was the most commonly expected cause of death, named by over half the group, although the national mortality rate from heart disease is only 32 per cent, Simpson reported.

Accidents were listed as the cause of death for some 20 per cent of the students, compared with a national accidental death rate of 9 per cent.

"Certain categories were grossly underestimated," Simpson said, particularly suicide (only one envisioned it, at age 74) and cancer (only two, a much lower percentage than the general population's cancer death rate).

"The students largely represented the one age group in which the death rate has increased for both sexes over the last 10 years mainly due to accidents and suicide," he said. "As medical students and physicians their suicide, accident and malignancy rate will be substantially higher than that of the general population."

MOST OF THE students expected death to be quick following within minutes of a heart attack or accident — and only three saw dying as a drawn-out process, Simpson said.

"Even more than the ease of death, most of these statements... probably describe a preference and devout hope for a swift death," he said. "Unable to deny death, they deny dying."

Almost three-quarters of the students expected to die in the winter months from November to February, while no one expected to die in June, July or August, Simpson reported.

MEDICINE AND YOU

Wisdom at mealtime reduces migraines

THERE IS NO QUESTION that certain foods provoke vascular headaches in susceptible persons, a neurologist says.

For example, foods containing soya should be eliminated from the diet of these headache patients, the doctor says in a report in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Donald J. Dalessio of Scripps Clinic and Research Foundation, La Jolla, lists the following dietary suggestions for persons with migraine:

- No alcohol, particularly red wines and champagne.
- No aged or strong cheese, particularly cheddar cheese.

- Avoid chicken livers, pickled herring, canned figs, pods of broad beans and chocolate.
- Use monosodium glutamate sparingly.
- Avoid cured meats such as hot dogs, bacon, ham and salami if these can be demonstrated to evoke vascular headache.

- Eat three well-balanced meals a day. Avoid skipping meals, prolonged fasting or excessive eating of carbohydrates at any single sitting.

Another physician, Dr. Frederic Speer of the University of Kansas school of medicine, Kansas City, says common food offenders in migraine include:

- Milk products, chocolate, cola drinks, corn, onion, garlic, pork, egg, citrus fruits, wheat, coffee, peas, beans, peanuts, lentils, licorice and honey.

The patient should also be alert to the possible role of odors, he says. Migraine patients should be especially cautious about smoke, paint and strong perfumes, Dr. Speer says.

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL report of removing tonsils with a laser beam has been given to a medical meeting.

Dr. Ronald J. French, assistant professor of otolaryngology at Tulane University medical school, tells of using a surgical laser to remove the tonsils of 50 patients.

A laser is a device that projects a powerful beam of light.

The laser, says Dr. French, markedly reduces postoperative bleeding and pain in both adults and children.

In a preliminary report on the first 20 patients, Dr. French says that not a single patient experienced difficulty in swallowing after surgery.

None of the patients required narcotics to curb pain.

If pain did prove a problem, 32 milligrams of Darvon (the weaker dose) was all that was required.

Dr. French says this is remarkable because the postoperative course of the adult after tonsillectomy is usually marked by excruciating pain and difficulty in swallowing.

The entire procedure of tonsil removal has been simplified because the technique results in little or no bleeding, the doctor says.

Dr. French's report appears in Resident and Staff Physician, a medical periodical.

TREATMENT WITH antibiotics may prevent liver failure in obese patients who have undergone an intestinal bypass operation, a doctor says.

When liver damage occurs in these patients, it may be due to a poisonous substance produced by Bacteroides overgrowth within the bypassed intestinal segment. Bacteroides is a micro-organism.

Dr. J. Patrick O'Leary of the University of Florida in Gainesville says that the bypassed segment of small intestine may become a reservoir for bacterial overgrowth.

To test his hypothesis, animal experiments were conducted. Bypass operations were performed on a group of dogs. Four of the animals received the antibiotic oral doxycycline hyclate.

The dogs that didn't get the antibiotic died of liver failure. But those treated with doxycycline lived and showed no evidence of liver impairment. Also no sign of Bacteroides was seen in the treated dogs.

The antibiotic treatment now is being tried on humans undergoing bypass surgery, according to a report in Internal Medicine News, a newspaper for doctors.

LICE CONTINUE to be a major health problem in the United States today.

Dr. Milton Orkin of the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, has reported on the problem to a meeting of the Wisconsin Dermatologic Society.

Pubic lice are relatively easy to control with agents such as Kwell, he says. Every member of the household should be treated.

Treatment begins with hot soap and water bath with a soft brush. Then the agent is applied after the bath from the neck to the tip of the toes.

Kwell should probably not be used for more than four consecutive applications because of possible skin irritation. The treatment can be repeated after four to eight days if it is required. Clothing and sheets should be thoroughly laundered.

Patients with infestations around the eyes should be seen both by a dermatologist and an ophthalmologist, Dr. Orkin says.

Details are reported in Pediatric News.

ONE OF THE BEST books yet published on the topic of hypertension is, in my view, "High Blood Pressure," by Dr. Frank Finnerty and Shirley Motter Linde. Recently published, the book deals with every facet of the disorder.

Dr. Finnerty is professor of medicine at Georgetown University Hospital and one of the medical leaders in the fight against hypertension. Ms. Linde, the co-author, is a well-known medical writer.

Highly readable and highly recommended.

A NEW PROCEDURE — neutron radiography — promises to make possible rapid diagnosis of bone tumors.

If the developing technique proves out, bone tumors could be identified in a matter of minutes — a task that now requires two to three weeks.

For the immediate future, the technique will be available only to those medical centers with a nuclear reactor close by.

Neutron radiography involves production by a reactor of neutrons, subatomic particles. These are sent into a narrow beam which travels through tissue.

A description of the procedure appears in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

WASHINGTON'S CHAMPAGNE CIRCUIT

Alcohol is cheap; alcoholism costly

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The White House tonight. The Iranian Embassy tomorrow. A lobbyist's reception the next day: a fund-raising dinner after that.

Cocktails with... On and on. Week after week. Two drinks here. Three drinks there. It's business as usual on the Washington social circuit, a glamorous, liquor-lubricated merry-go-round that helps this city maintain one of the biggest drinking problems in the country.

Whether the problem extends heavily into official Washington, and whether it damages the political-diplomatic machinery that helps the world run is difficult to pinpoint.

Experts on alcoholism, statistics on drinking and recovered alcoholics within the Washington establishment all indicate that alcohol abuse pervades life along the Potomac.

For example:
• Department of Health, Education and Welfare figures show there are about nine million alcoholics in the country or roughly one out of every 10 people who drink. But a study by American Business Men's Research Foundation of Lansing, Mich., showed that one of every five adults in the District of Columbia is an alcoholic. It said this indicated that Washington has the highest alcoholism rate in the country.

• The Resource Planning Corporation studied drinking habits in all sections of Washington. The area with the most drinking was found in northwest Washington, which includes Georgetown, Embassy Row and the homes of many upper-and middle-income residents — many of the movers and shakers in government.

• The District of Columbia has nearly 50 per cent more heavy drinkers than in 20 states where similar studies by Resource Planning were conducted.

• Washington has a higher death rate from cirrhosis of the liver than any state, according to the National Center for Health Statistics.

There is no known compilation of the number of Washington VIPs, elected officials and members of their families who have alcohol-related problems.

The stigma of alcoholism often keeps the problem hidden.

NOW AND AGAIN the sadness surfaces. It brought down Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., from his position as chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. Mills blamed alcohol for his escapades with stripteaser Fanne Foxe. Questions were raised about Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's decision on a possible presidential bid after his wife was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol.

Associated Press interviews with dozens of alcohol experts, federal and local government officials, congressmen, congressional aides, lobbyists, hostesses, congressional wives and reporters produced the common observation that many of those minding the nation's business drink more in Washington than they might elsewhere.

The lobbyist drinks with the client he hopes to gain; the congressman drinks while discussing legislation; the journalist drinks while trying to scrounge a bit of information; the hostess drinks to be polite. Liquor is the universal lubricant.

Some drink too much.
"There's not an agency of government that doesn't have a problem," said former Sen. Harold E. Hughes, a recovered alcoholic who is now a religious layworker here.

Every business and profession has that problem, Hughes said, "but in Washington, our actions affect the lives of more people than in any other city in the world. The responsibility is greater. As a result, it's different if people in Washington drink too much. It's more important here."

Hughes was asked whether, in his six years in the Senate, he saw some of his colleagues tipsy on the Senate floor. He nodded. "Yes."

Often? He paused, then shook his head. "No." Are there "very important people" in Washington with hidden drinking problems?

"If I could tell you all the stories I know about drinking in Washington, people would believe there's a problem here. But I can't relate anecdotes because people come to me in confidence," Hughes said.

TWO CERTAINTIES of life in Washington — pressure on people in high places and the stand-up cocktail party — appear to contribute to the high rate of alcoholism.

Experts say people who drink standing up under pressure are more likely to develop drinking problems than those who put their feet up after work and have a drink or two while watching the evening news.

In Washington, the social life is an extension of the professional life. "If you have to judge me as a professional, there's more stress than if you're judging me socially," said Dr. Morris E. Chafetz, director of the National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism (NIAAA). "We know that alcohol used in conjunction with stresses of professional activities is more likely to be conducive to creating alcohol problems than in normally responsible usage."

"If you have a tendency to get in trouble with alcohol, it will show up more quickly in Washington than in another setting," he said.

Hughes, chairman of the Senate subcommittee on alcoholism and drug abuse when he retired last year, said people who live here are under intense pressure.

"They're competing in one of the toughest societies in the country," he said. "And the pressures are conducive to drinking."

Congressmen who go home on weekends often run into the same climate there, Hughes said. "These men and women are going home every Friday night to a home that is often 2,000 to 3,000 miles away. They make speeches and meet people and are expected to discuss the problems of the day."

"Sometimes they go to three or four receptions in a night. They're expected to have at least one drink in each place...they come back Sunday night to be with their wife and children, sometimes without having slept."

"All these things are conducive to dependency on something to keep this up, week after week, year after year, it will have an effect. If it's not in overdrinking, it will be on the family structure," Hughes said.

MRS. CARLOS J. Moorhead, wife of the California representative, explained the pressure to drink and her solution this way:

"Everywhere you go, the cocktail party is the thing. We're invited out every night. I'm a one or two drink person, but now I drink tonic water because I don't want to drink that much. A lot of people simply decide not to drink. They drink a lot more here than in other places I've been."

Kenneth L. Eaton, a former NIAAA official who is now president of an alcohol-related consulting firm, explained the lure of the Washington cocktail party this way:

"You go to parties and receptions because of who else is there and for the conversations. When those conversations are mixed with drinking, you may get better results than if you just walked into an office and presented an issue. Without consciously doing so, we use alcohol for the purpose of expediting our business and political affairs."

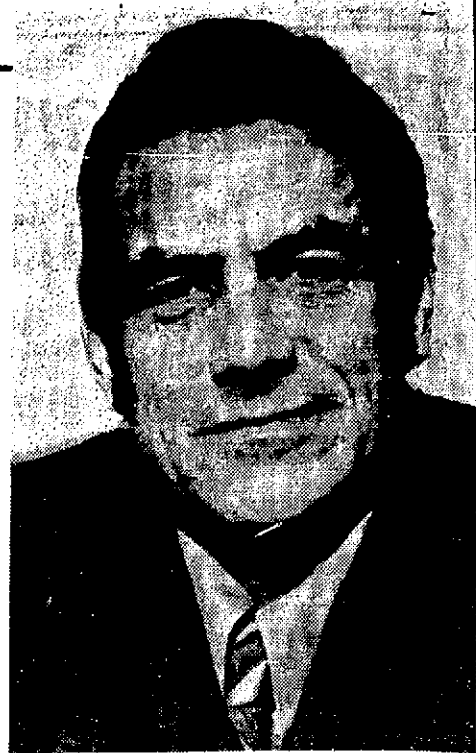

Michael D. Bromberg, a lobbyist, said he offers clients a drink because it extends a lunch for 20 minutes. "And if you're eating with someone important, that can make a difference."

Mixing campaign schedules with alcohol can be political dynamite. Several years ago, House Speaker Carl Albert was involved in a minor traffic accident late on Saturday night. The next day Albert told reporters, "I was not drunk." He said he had spent a tiring day at a congressional rally.

"They were passing drinks all day," he said. "I didn't take any. When it was over, I took something. I don't know what it was."

Today Albert's staffers deny recurring rumors that their boss has a drinking problem. "He has no problem," said Mrs. Vernell English, executive assistant to Albert. "I've never seen him drink."

Many people in Washington pace their drinking.

FORMER Sen. Harold E. Hughes, a recovered alcoholic, now is a religious layworker in the nation's capital.

"In my experience at the State Department and very high level parties, most people don't eat or drink that much," said Nancy Lammerding Ruwe, White House social secretary who, until recently, worked in the State Department protocol office.

"The dynamos of government have to be alert the next morning," she said. "Henry (Kissinger, secretary of state), drinks club soda."

APPARENTLY NOT everyone is so cautious. The study showing Washington with the country's Guilds were represented by Wanda Sewak, Associates; Fern Bailey, Fiorella; Kaye Cruchley, Nightingales and Taperesa Martinez, Emblem Club.

Emma Charrlin, president, and Kay Roggeveen, membership chairgal, welcomed new members: mother and daughter team of Ann and Julia Green, Verna Flannagan, Vera Tutt, Esther Vickers and Marian Vickers.

Also Genevieve Sweet, Josephine Nufe, Mary Ann Hailey, Ruth Vermillion, Angeline O'Donnell and Ethel Gantz.

Arrangements committee was headed by Lucille Lueking with an assist from Idabel Nichols and Ailee Parker.

MORE NEW members...

For Children's Benefit League.

Bixby Knolls home of Gini Galletta was the scene of a coffee hour introducing new provisionals and welcoming graduated provisionals to full membership.

Trionne Hertz and Marie Lorenz, co-membership chairgals introduced 1975-76 provisionals Mary Lou Olson, Sandra Campbell, Marian Littrell, Cecilia Canut, and Virginia Cook.

Graduating provisionals assisting the hostess were Marjorie Birch, Eva Maurine Hastings, Dorothy Roach, Marjorie Rubien, Bonnie Seymour and Annette Tindal.

AND NEW neighbors...

In Park Estates were welcomed by current dwellers with a Cinco de Mayo themed coffee hour at the home of Joyce King.

Newcomers are Lena Salcido and Sandy Darling.

They learned to make Mexican-style coffee with Linda McCullough, Sandee Carter, Sue Cannon, Diane Garrison, Joan Beebe, Pam Spoo and Leslie Alexander.

More Park Estates dwellers were Pat Crawford, Jane Mauw, Genie O'dell, Nanci Brounley, Paula Irwin (also a new resident) Carolyn Hurst, Della Sanford, Jenny Lambert, Mary Saatjian, Meg Giberon and Linda Whitmer.

SOME OLD friends...

From San Pedro High School will get together.

Winter and Summer classes of 1950 are planning a silver anniversary reunion on May 31 at Los Verdes Country Club, Rolling Hills.

Hurry and get your reservation by calling or writing the school.

Address is 1001 W. 15th St., San Pedro 90731.

OFF WITH the old and on with the new officers for Long Beach Power Squadron.

Changing of the watch took place at the annual Commanders Ball at Petroleum Club.

Bill Goodman took over the helm from retiring Commander John Miller with District Commander Lee Tracy as installing officer.

Other new officers are Lt. Cmdr. Jerry Hixon, Lt. Cmdr. Glenn Harris, Lt. Cmdr. Brian Dobson, Lindy Bradley and Jerry Aronson.

The Mossy Kent Award for outstanding service to the Squadron was given to Ted Marvis. Dud Shellnut received a like award for service in the squadron's educational department.

Past Commander Marv Tinscher presented a special award to Mary Ann Over who donated her boat for student cruises.

Certificates for hours spent assisting in the squadron's safe boating classes went to Ruth Blair, Mary Bradley, Nancy Edwards, Jo Goodman, Pat

NEW DEBS...

Eva Miner had an especially exciting evening recently.

As chairlady of the fifth annual Debutante Ball for daughters of members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, she had the pleasure of watching her own daughter, Michele, presented by her father, Dr. Mark.

Among deb parties was a mother-daughter luncheon hosted by Dolly Ward whose husband, Karl, was presenter at the Ball.

Keith and Ruth Brown gave an after-the-ball-was-over supper for debs and dates.

Presentees were Julie Leigh Arnold, Zonda Dee Barnhart, Carolee Bills, Janette Louise Chew, Shawn Laree Christensen, Sandra Lee Creager, Sandra Jill Faulkner, Cynthia Sue Fishbein and Jan Tina Flint.

Also Lynette Richards, Susan Carol Rush, Charlene Ellen Sands, Deborah Jean Shaw, Cynthia Rae Snowball, Karen Lorene Swanson and Geraldine Workman.

THE NEW ETIQUETTE Knowledge explosion makes for better parties

You've planned a nice little dinner party for eight. Everything is perking along. The Jello salad comes out of the mold without sticking. The meat is done right and doesn't bite back. The salad didn't wilt and the sauces didn't separate. But as you soon discover, the food is only half of the party.

Somewhere in your planning you forgot that you invited a "pro-lifer" and a vehement proponent of abortion. Midway through the salad they start going at each other. The discussion heats up until the rest of your guests become silent and start nervously poking at their greens. What now? Apoplexy?

A few years ago it might have been appropriate for a host or a hostess to swoon under such circumstances. Politics, religion and sickening topics used to be taboo "at table" but now anything goes — with the exception of something like a stitch-by-stitch replay of an operation, which is liable to make diners nauseous.

YOU SHOULD enjoy the discussion, and perhaps participate in it. Part of the fun of living in this age is that there has been a knowledge explosion. It's likely that when most people open their mouths one or two interesting things will come out.

If you don't participate in the discussion, the results may be grim. The rest of your guests may go home with a knot in their stomachs and awkward silences ringing in their brains. You could, of course, ask your friends who are conducting the seminar in abortion to cease and desist. But that would be crude.

On the other hand, if the discussion gets personal, you should move in. You might get a discussion on another topic going at the other end of the table. Six people surely ought to be able to drown out two.

Q: What do you do when you're invited to a home where the family says grace before dinner, and you're an agnostic? What should you do if you're asked to say grace?

A: Traditionally guests in a home are asked to say grace. However, this custom can put a guest in a compromising position. It's best if someone from the family is assigned the task.

If you are asked to say grace and don't want to, you can say something like, I haven't said grace in experience. This sculpture, not quite 18 inches in length, evokes a deeply emotional response — which, after all, is the mark of great art. It is widely known as part of the "Exhibition of Archaeological Finds of the People's Republic of China." I was fortunate enough to see the show in London in 1973.

The most exciting West Coast art news today is that this exhibit will be in San Francisco from June 28 through Aug. 28. This is an unexpected, bonus exhibit, for originally the fabulous aggregation was to be shown in the United States only in Washington, D.C.

When thousands of Chinese antiquities were uncovered in diggings from 1949 to 1972 in all the Chinese territories, including the oasis cities of Central Asia, they first were assembled at the Peking Institute of Archaeology for evaluation. Of these, 385 were chosen as the finest.

Almost simultaneously, France and England asked for permission to exhibit them. The People's Republic consented, sending the collection first to Paris, then to London. Later, it was agreed that it could be shown in Toronto and finally in Washington. According to State Department officials, the sending of the exhibition to the United States was worked out during the visit of Henry Kissinger to China in 1973.

THEN, BECAUSE of the reputation Laurence Sickman has as an expert on oriental art, the exhibit went to the Nelson Gallery-Atkins Museum, Kansas City, Mo., where he is director. It will leave there June 8. Meanwhile, the People's Republic decided there should be one West Coast showing before the treasures go back to China. San Francisco was the city chosen.

Packed in specially-constructed cases fitted with shock-absorbing material, the 13-ton exhibit will be airlifted, accompanied by curators from China. The objects include bronzes, pottery, porcelains and textiles ranging from the Palaeolithic period, about 6000-7000 B.C. to the Yuan dynasty, 1271-1368 A.D.

The Flying Horse is just one of the collection's great works. Another is the 2,000-year-old burial suit of Princess Tou Wan, made of 2,156 squares of opalescent jade sewn together with gold wire. It was supposed to keep the princess's body forever, but when it was discovered it contained only dust.

There also are reconstructions and remains of the Lan-t'ien and Peking men who lived approximately 600,000 to 400,000 years ago.

The Asian Art Museum in San Francisco which opened in Golden Gate Park in 1966, built to contain the Avery Brundage collection, will house the Chinese exhibit. It will be on view Tuesdays through-Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. and Sundays and Mondays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Unlike the London exhibition, admission will be free. But like the London show, there certainly will be long queues waiting for admittance.

ALTHOUGH it would be an excellent preliminary to the San Francisco show, it was as response to increasing American interest in Chinese art and culture that Los Angeles County Museum of Art, 5905 Wilshire Blvd., arranged a two-part program of lectures and a symposium, "Art and Archaeology in China Today."

Blacher's "Romeo und Julia," a chamber piece in three parts, to be sung in German, and Christoph Willibald Gluck's "Le Cadi Dupe," a one-act work to be performed in English.

Both will be done by the UCLA Opera Workshop. Dr. Popper is founding director of UCLA's Opera Theater and Workshop.

SINCE he came to the United States in 1939 from his native Czechoslovakia, Dr. Popper has earned a worldwide reputation and has fostered the career of many of today's fine singers and actors. He first founded and directed the Stanford Opera Workshop, then in 1949 came to UCLA. Some of his productions have achieved national acclaim, among them the West Coast premieres of Britten's "Peter Grimes" and Weinberger's "Schwanda, the Bagpiper" at Stanford.

At UCLA, under his direction, the Opera Workshop has offered such works as Monteverdi's "Orfeo," Cesti's "Oron-tea," Handel's "Julius Caesar," all of earlier vintage that contrast with his productions of such romantic opera's as Verdi's "Falstaff" and Meyerbeer's "Les Hugue-nots."

BRONZE FLYING HORSE, cast in the 2nd century A.D., has a marvelous sense of mobility that makes it a public favorite in the Chinese show. Galloping, one foot is on the back of a swallow.

JADE FUNERAL SUIT, sewn together with gold wire, dates from the late 2nd century B.C. Its makers believed it would keep a princess's body eternally. It was uncovered in Manch'eng, Hopei, in 1968. Although the body had turned to dust, the jade and gold retained their opalescent beauty.

Organized by the museum's senior curator of Far Eastern Art, George Kuwayama, it will take place next Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. and May 25 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the museum's Bing Theater. Most of the scholars participating in the program have visited China to see and study recent archaeological discoveries.

Two lectures next Sunday will be "Recent Archaeological Discoveries in China" at 2 p.m. by Dr. Richard C. Rudolph, professor of oriental languages at UCLA; at 3 p.m., Dr. Charles D. Weber, professor of fine arts at USC, will speak on "Art and Culture in China Today."

TWO CONTEMPORARY Southern California artists, Hilda Grayson and Lowell Nickel, are exhibiting through June 30 at Senior Eye: Palmcrest House Art Gallery, 3501 Cedar Ave. Both Grayson, a weaver, and Nickel, a potter, use traditional methods to develop highly individual art forms. This is the first exhibition for each artist. Gallery visitors may view the show Sundays through Wednesdays from 2 to 5 p.m.

IN LONG BEACH Art Association Gallery, 800 E. Ocean Blvd., through May 25, an epic watercolor by Nick Brigante is the featured work. More than 20-feet long, it was completed in 1937. Titled "Implacable Nature and Elemental Imperious Man," it is in nine panels that detail the life cycle of a sun-worshipping people and includes more than 200 figures.

The show is hanging now and may be seen from noon to 4 p.m. daily except Sundays. There will be a reception for the artist May 20 at 7:30 p.m. at which Brigante will discuss his life and work.

LBAA also announces that member Lenore Stribley has been named first prize winner for her acrylic, "Crazy Quilt," in the monthly Round Robin Art Competition at Downey Museum of Art. Members of 22 Southern California Art Associations participated. The paintings will be on view through May 22.

Object d'art

Look around you. There's art everywhere. In every building, landscape or a simple thing like a street light — there's lines and curves and circles. There's art. If you don't notice it, it's because you've probably never given art and culture a chance. When was the last time you went to an art show or visited the art museum in Long Beach? When was the last time you even thought about the art available to you in Long Beach? If you don't support your culture today your children may not have a culture of their own tomorrow. We're asking you for support. Contribute what you want, just remember that the art available to your children is all up to you.

Washington leads U.S. in boozers

highest alcoholism rate was compiled by the American Business Men's Research Foundation, a nonprofit organization concerned with alcohol problems.

One of the four Washington areas studied was a large section of northwest Washington which includes Georgetown, Embassy Row and the homes of many upper- and middle-income Washington residents. The study shows more drinkers in this area, 90 per cent of which is white, than in any of the others.

Of the regular drinkers, almost 19 per cent of those aged 14 and over were classified as heavy drinkers. An aggregate of similar surveys done in 20 states shows that 12 per cent of the population aged 14 and above are classified as heavy drinkers.

Figures from the National Center for Health Statistics show the district has a higher liver cirrhosis death rate than any state. Though not everyone who has cirrhosis is an alcoholic, it is a major cause of premature death in alcoholics.

In a copyright study of the drinking age population, the Rutgers University Center for Alcohol Studies reported last year that enough liquor is sold in the district to average 6.54 gallons per person. That contrasted with between two and three gallons per person in all other states.

However, liquor prices are lower in Washington than in surrounding areas, and people who live elsewhere stock up here. Also, the city is a major tourist area where a higher drinking rate is expected.

But, the Rutgers study was based on liquor taxes which do not apply to the huge amounts of liquor obtained by foreign embassies. And those on the embassy circuit know it's not unusual to be offered whiskey and soda before dinner, wines with the entree, champagne with dessert and brandy afterward.

J. William Terwilliger, director of consulting services at the Washington Hospital Counseling Service where many middle- and upper-income alcoholics in the area go for treatment, said he is convinced there is more drinking in Washington than any place in the country.

"It's a custom in government and diplomatic affairs, and in many cases, it's expected," he said. "You'd have the biggest lead balloon in Washington if you threw a party and didn't serve liquor, wine and champagne."

"Alcohol is a social lubricant. And many of the parties here are among strangers or people who are not well acquainted. Liquor makes social intercourse easier."

PUBLIC FIGURES with drinking problems sometimes shy away from getting help, although the government has a free alcohol prevention treatment and rehabilitation program for any employee who needs it.

"We've made efforts to get members of Congress and the executive branch into Alcoholics Anonymous," said an alcohol lobbyist. "But they're terrified they'll be identified and that it will somehow get back to the home district."

For insurance reasons and because of the political problems attached to alcoholism, doctors say, public figures sometimes are admitted to hospitals under other diagnoses, such as gastritis, liver trouble or exhaustion.

Dr. Chafetz criticized reporters for ignoring instances of overdrinking among leaders of the media and government. "You write that Happy Rockefeller and Mrs. Ford has mastectomies," he said. "That's just as much an invasion of privacy as overdrinking with alcohol. Alcoholism is a very treatable disease, so we're killing people with kindness."

James Deakin, president of the White House Correspondents Association, described some of the problems involved when a reporter writes that a public figure drinks heavily.

"Writing that Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Rockefeller had mastectomies doesn't harm their careers," said Deakin, who is also White House correspondent for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. "To write that someone in public life drinks heavily can injure a career which you don't want to do unless you have it absolutely documented."

"I don't believe in covering up for a politician either. But a reporter has a responsibility to prove anything he writes about a public official."

"Who's to judge at which point a person's consumption of liquor destroys his effectiveness? A hell of a lot of politicians have been able to function very effectively and very constructively despite the fact that they are heavy drinkers."

Accessory business is booming in California

By DIANNE SMITH
Staff Writer

The accessory business is booming. And, nowhere is this more evident than in California where accessory designing takes it impetus from the casual lifestyles.

This was the message from representatives of the industry during a panel discussion on trends at a breakfast gathering in the Hyatt Regency Hotel, Los Angeles. The meeting was sponsored by The Fashion Group and featured four members from the California Accessory Guild, which was formed two years ago with 14 manufacturers and now has 28.

The theme of the meeting, which featured a display of various accessories from California designers but was more a soft sell promotion for the four firms, was "Pile It On, Pin It On and Put It On." Presenting an overview of the market was Sam Benun of California Things, guild president.

Benun said scarves represented just 5 to 10 per cent of the company's sales last year, while this year they represent 50 per cent of the business. The 22-inch square scarf is the big fashion accessory currently, but triangles are doing well, too, especially the big ones that can double as a shawl or tie around the waist.

The new look in scarves will be the 44-inch square, he predicted.

CALIFORNIA THINGS offers four main items in its accessory line — scarves, shawls, tops and headgear. "We deal with everything above the waist."

In tops, the look is big, unstructured and easy flowing. The Oriental influence is the current rage, particularly in quilted styles, he noted. Another new trend for accessories, according to Benun, is coiling or rolling scarves around the head for a turban effect.

Benun said his company focuses on color, which he likened to vision. "We offer accessories to accent and highlight the dusty colors of ready-to-wear. Our bright colors are a complement."

Adding that the California accessory business began as a supplier of local markets, but then expanded to national distribution, he said his company now sells 80 per cent of its line outside of California.

Concerning accessories in general, he commented. "We offer young looks, new styles and our designers are not afraid of being different, which is part of our appeal."

REPRESENTING THE jewelry end of the accessory line was Donna Schaik from 1928 Jewelry, a 7-year-old company started on a bet with two pairs of earrings.

"The task facing us," she said, "was what should we do to capitalize on the accessory trend? Even with scarves, most women are still wearing long chains. To offer something different, we created an antique jewelry line. We've also come out with a rose gold finish that is a soft, pinkish color and compliments both silver and yellow gold."

She estimated at 25 per cent of her company's sales are pendants and lockets in keeping with the nostalgia trend of clothes.

She also predicted a resurgence of bangle bracelets this summer, worn with the short sleeve and sleeveless styles.

Pointing out some of the problems encountered by California manufacturers in trying to sell to Eastern markets, Mrs. Schaik listed the high cost of transportation as one and the importance of timing of shipments. "We build a reputation on what we do. If we do as we say and ship a complete line by the promised date, we'll draw the buyers."

ALSO ON THE panel were Cynthia Esters of Phillippe, which designs casual leather handbags, and Vicki Sbicea of Shoes 'n' Stuff, which is owned by her father, Frank Sbicea, who does all the designing.

Ms. Esters called this the year of leather, but "you have to have a company like ours that knows how to buy leather and as the machinery to work with it."

She reported that the big style in purses is the oversizes, slouchy versions. Her company offers a double-duty bag with a handle that can be carried or worn over the shoulder.

FASCINATING FABRICS

Double knits new in drapery field

Numerous women are making draperies, curtains and furnishings at home. The saving over ready-made or custom-made is tremendous. And, all it requires is the ability ric suitable for draperies? They've experienced its long-wearing, ease-of-care capabilities in apparel.

Another consideration is the availability of 60-inch er factor. The basic cost of knits is likely to be less than wovens, as knits can be produced by the manufacturer with much greater speed; the advantage passed along to the consumer.

Polyester double knits are not only suitable for draperies, the fabric fills a certain decorating void. It's appropriate for window treatment where neither strictly formal nor completely casual effects would be just right. Formal window decor, often with a valance, jabot or swag, requires the elegance of damask, velvet, moire or brocade. Casual, sometimes ruffled and bedecked window dressing, features permanent press fabric, denim, duck, gaily printed chintz.

MANY HOMES, particularly those of young families and career people, are a mixture of furniture styles, where tailored polyester double knit draperies relate to all the elements. Often, this type of fabric is just what is needed to tie these disparate elements together visually.

Double knits do not require lining. But a more "finished" look is provided with under-curtains of tricot or marquisette. Double-hung windows have the added advantage of adjustment for privacy, light and air control. Both draperies and curtains can be washed easily and often, contributing to a consistently fresh appearance.

It's a fact that many of us cringe at the very idea of sending formal draperies to the drycleaner, and incurring the expense, often putting it off much too long and risking permanent damage from prolonged soil.

It's not a coincidence that several leading manufacturers of double knit fabric are working on polyester double knits exclusively for drapery use. This is an unfilled need. Until this type of fabric is widely available, polyester double knit fabric sold for apparel may be used for draperies following certain guidelines.

SELECT FABRIC which is firmly constructed with smooth yarns. Loosely knit fabric might sag from its own weight when hanging at a window. Fabric with a soil repellent finish is preferable. The fabric should be medium weight with a feeling of "body." Unwind a long length from the bolt. Shape the cut end into a three-fold pleat and see how it falls into soft folds; how drapable it is.

Avoid obvious "dress" prints or knit-in designs such as blister effects. There are many paisleys, herringbones, jacquards and some splashy prints that are appropriate and in the same scale as woven drapery fabric.

Apply the basic rules for selection of drapery fabric. Draperies should be attractive individually and in relation to the design and use of the room and its furniture. Color creates moods, disguises defects and accents special features in the room.

The workshop

What to do while waiting for this energy crisis to let up? Build yourself a cozy retreat where you can enjoy nature's bounties in your own backyard. This 2-way chaise lounge is designed for togetherness and that is probably one of the few benefits of this gasoline shortage ... it will bring folks closer together.

The outdoor chaise shown here with actress Linda Foster and friend is a novel idea. It's an adaptation of the double-chaise design, but in this case, the two backrests face each other, inviting conversation. The wheels make it mobile and it can be outfitted with standard-size chaise pads for extra comfort. The backs are adjustable for reading or conversation ... or lower them flat for napping.

This project can save you money two ways. By giving your backyard all the comforts of a vacation resort, you and your family can stay right at home this summer. Also, by building this unique piece, you'll save plenty of money and get a solid piece of furniture in the bargain. Just trace the pattern parts on wood, saw out and assemble. It's so easy any inexperienced amateur can do it.

To obtain the 2-way chaise pattern No. 372, send $1 (add 25 cents for postage and handling) by cash, check or money order to: Long Beach Independent Press Telegram Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, Ca., 91409.

JOHN DAWSON

Mother's Day dining in the sky

HERE'S A DIFFERENT way to treat mother on Her Day — how about breakfast this morning in an imaginative setting at the top of Long Beach?

The restaurant I'm recommending is the handsome Penthouse atop the 14-story Holiday Inn, Lakewood Boulevard at Willow Street, adjacent to the San Diego Freeway. You can take mother there before or after church, because the Penthouse starts serving at 6 a.m. The restaurant has tables beside its large view windows, offering fascinating bird's eye views of Long Beach's tree-lined streets and nearby cities.

Open every day for breakfast, the Penthouse offers such ideas as ham and eggs for $2.05, including hashbrown potatoes, toast, jelly, butter and lots of fine coffee. Another dandy is orange or grapefruit juice with Danish pastry and coffee, $1.25. If mom or dad would like a Bloody Mary or Tequila Sunrise, cocktails are available from the lounge from 10 a.m. on. Breakfast will be served until noon.

Starting at noon, the Penthouse restaurant will serve its special Mother's Day dinners, complete from chicken a la reine soup or green salad to entree, potatoes or yams, another vegetable, hot bread, coffee or tea and dessert of fruit Jello, sherbet or pudding. The entrees will include roast turkey with dressing, giblet gravy, and cranberry sauce, $3.95; broiled northern halibut with lemon butter, $4.25; baked Virginia ham with ling cherry sauce, $4.75; roast leg of lamb with dressing, special sauce and mint jelly, $4.95, and choice roast prime rib of beef au jus, $7.25. The children's dinner will be turkey, $2.95, or baked ham, $3.25.

The menu planning for the Penthouse is under the direction of innkeeper John Dawson and food and beverage manager Ward Trobaugh. John, formerly with Holiday Inns in Oakland, El Paso and Tucson, has been the Long Beach innkeeper for over a year. Ward has been on the staff here off and on for more than four years.

Open to the public every day for breakfast, luncheon and dinner, the Penthouse features such regular menu dinners as the Long Beach Catch, emphasizing such seafoods as golden shrimp, $4.25; broiled halibut grand prix, $3.95, and the assorted fisherman's harvest, $4.75. Other regular entrees include golden fried chicken, $3.50; roast sirloin of beef, $3.95, and choice steaks from $5.95. One of the a la carte desserts is gourmet Bavarian cream pie

I'M ALSO ACQUAINTED with a lot of modern mothers who enjoy an informal dinner on Their Day — such as a big fresh "everything" pizza at Me 'n' Ed's pizza parlor and ye olde public house, Paramount Boulevard just north of Carson Street.

Owned by Bob Baldwin since the day it opened 12 years ago, the Lakewood Me 'n' Ed's is one of the Long Beach area's premium pizza restaurants because of the unusual quality of its pizzas and the friendly service by employees who cheerfully refuse to be tipped. On my visits to the restaurant, I've often seen it filled with families, including young mothers who bring their tiny babies in carriers which can be set up conveniently on the top of the large picnic-style wooden tables.

Some of the mothers prefer coffee, milk or a soft drink with their pizza. Others enjoy sharing a pitcher of cool beer with their menfolk. Me 'n' Ed's is also a favorite gathering place for grandmothers who enjoy a mug of Lucky's or Coors with their sausage pizza or beef with onions pizza. A mug of Lucky Lager is 35 cents; a family-size pitcher is $1.85.

Me 'n' Ed's will be open today from 11 a.m. on. On Sundays and week nights it serves until midnight. On Fridays and Saturdays it stays open until 1 a.m. There's entertainment Fridays and Saturdays starting at 8:30 p.m., featuring Beauty and the Beat. The beauty is Diane Vidmar who plays banjo; the beat is Jim Elsas, playing guitar. They offer a lot of oldtime melodies such as Pennies from Heaven, Pretty Baby or I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles which their audiences enjoy singing.

The quality of the pizza at the Lakewood Me 'n' Ed's is consistently, remarkably high. The white-hatted chefs work in a brightly-lighted, immaculate kitchen. The dining and banquet rooms are equally immaculate — tidied, swept and polished at intervals throughout the day and night. The pizzas are made by hand the old-fashioned way and baked in 750-degree brick ovens. The fiery temperature turns out a crust with wonderful flavor.

Among the pizza choices, priced from $1.65 to $5.19, are plain cheese, green bell pepper, Italian sausage, pepperoni, salami, beef and onion, linguica (another kind of delicious sausage), mushroom, anchovy, black olive. Me 'n' Ed's special of three toppings and the superb combination of everything. They come in three sizes — individual, large or giant.

'Day of the Locust'

diseased society while the stars get the cream — these are the people who tear down Grauman's Chinese. They are the Blacks of Hollywood in the 1930s. So "The Day of the Locust" becomes a Tom Swift fairy tale about yesterday and a surrealistic warning about the declining moral and social values of today.

The majesty and greatness of this magnificent film lie not only in its moral, but in every aspect of Schlesinger's mastery over the art of film, itself. The unique and hearty language, the abstract cutting and editing, the gorgeous sets and the eye-popping color schemes are examples of movies as art almost unprecedented in the medium. The intelligent construction of scene after scene, building like pieces of an elaborate architectural puzzle into an almost unbearable cinematic excitement, is something you see once in a decade in films.

Wit, ironic perception, grief, rage and shock are some of the responses Schlesinger aims for and gets. Audiences are suspicious and hostile when they are moved this way. They badmouth the movie out of ignorance, forming instant opinions that bear no traces of intellectual analysis. I have heard people say, "I hated 'The Day of the Locust' because it depressed me." That is a poor reason to hate art. No wonder unheralded masterpieces go overlooked among the more commercial extravaganzas of today's puerile film industry.

I THINK WE SHOULD shout "Bravo!" to Schlesinger for having the genius to get this overwhelming film made, and I think we should applaud the people at Paramount who made it possible financially. Without true works of art, we just have to stop calling the movies an art form and settle back and feed our insatiable appetites for entertainment with the junk we've been getting.

Rereading the preface to the paperback edition of "The Day of the Locust," I was struck dumb when I came across Nathanael West's own quote: "There is nothing to root for in my work and, what is even worse, no rooters." He was an acknowledged literary genius just like his own contemporary, F. Scott Fitzgerald, but they both died broken-hearted, victims of attacks from readers and critics. Today they are deified.

Just how long will we have to wait before John Schlesinger's cinematic homage to this great writer will be recognized for the greatness it contains? I predict that it will be as controversial as "Clockwork Orange" — seen by many and praised by few, the subject of embittered panel discussions and the hottest movie topic on TV talk shows since "The Exorcist."

DONALD SUTHERLAND also heads the list of handpicked stars in "The Day of the Locust," which is a spectacle worth seeing and worth making in critic Reed's opinion.

It isn't an easy or subtle film to digest, and there are repellent things in it, but "The Day of the Locust" is an achievement that makes nine out of ten other films with pretensions to budgetary expense and cinematic opulence pale in comparison.

The whole, fabulous Depression Era of Hollywood comes alive again, but it's not about the Valentinos and Garbos. It's about the little insects who watch the glamor from outside the action, throwing themselves against the studio gates like bugs squashed against automobile windshields at night.

It is Hollywood Gothic, made with satanic, God-searching genius, and its success (or failure) will largely determine what we care about or want to see happen to the dying art of American film.

Dear Mr. Corn:

We failed to bid a slam with these hands. How do you suggest the bidding go?

West
♦ AK
♥ AKQ
♠ 75
♣ J108764

East
♦ 752
♠ AKQ106532
♣ ...

Right Cards
Northville, Mi.

Answer: A grand slam is a cinch without a first round adverse ruff. However, a small slam would prove the limit of most partnerships. If West opens one no-trump instead of one club the bidding could go:

West
1NT
4♥

East
3♦

Dear Mr. Corn:

My partner opened a strong two heart bid and I had this hand:

♦ K107
♥ Q92
♠ KQ732
♣ Q5

I raised and she bid four clubs. I wasn't sure whether she was asking for aces or cue bidding so I just bid six hearts. We made it but I was "laid out." Was I that far off base?

Stretcher Case
Demopolis, Ala.

Answer: Ace-asking can cause many problems when one is on unsure ground. I can assure you that these type misunderstandings occur even in World Championships.

There is no substitute for partnership discussion and agreement, but under the conditions, you were forced to guess. You guessed right, so I can't criticize unduly. However, I'd suggest you and your partner agree on this point before your next session.

Dear Mr. Corn:

I played in a game where the players bid "four no-trump, asking" to distinguish from no-trump raises. I protested but was voted down. Am I out of date?

New Horizons
Dallas

Answer: No. You are right in step with the laws. Only 15 legal words are permitted in bidding. One through seven, pass, double, redouble, the four suits and no-trump. Sometimes small groups modify the laws to suit local custom.

Dear Mr. Corn:

Who was known as the Grand Old Man of Bridge? Researcher
Biloxi, Miss.

Answer: In the 1920s it was Milton C. Work. In later years it was Sidney Lenz.

Family of 15 has special joy

Ridder News service

CANDO, N.D. — For her, in her time, it was right.

But Mrs. George Hilts, mother of 15, says she doubts any of her children will have large families.

And she says, "large families are not for every one."

Although large families have been common in small towns such as this, the trend away is showing up.

Her way of life is to raise a large family. Her children she believes will do differently.

"Everything they are taught and everything they read steers them away from large families now," she observes.

Already, the six oldest Hilts children have left home. The four oldest are married. There are only nine at home.

Her husband, a doctor, runs a clinic right next to the big gray house where they live on Main Street here.

The Hilts are natives of Bowbells, N.D. They came to Cando 21 years ago when he finished his internship at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Lafayette, Ind.

At that time, they had four children. Since then the last 11 came along to live in the big house which the Hilts remodeled and moved into several years ago.

It has seven bedrooms — which is still not enough when the whole family is at home.

FROM THEIR beginnings with 12 daughters and 3 sons, the Hilts have now added 4 in-laws and 3 grandsons to their family circle. It makes a party of 24 on holidays.

Mother's Day is a big event. "I get my honors each year on Mother's Day," Mrs. Hilts said. "My house looks like a greenhouse."

Holidays are fun when you have a big family, the children agree.

"It's the next day that I feel it," adds Mrs. Hilts.

She has found Cando an ideal place to raise a family. The children are only a block from school.

FOR THE HILTS, the day begins around 7 or 7:30 a.m. When the first children start getting up. It's late — maybe after 11 — by the time they all settle down at night.

Days are packed full of activity. The family life centers around school and Sacred Heart Catholic Church. Then there's 4H, PTA, swimming, skating and piano lessons.

Always there are children coming and going and shouting:

"My foot is bleeding."

"I don't have any stockings."

Outwardly calm, Mrs. Hilts handles one thing at a time. But she says she wins no medals for self control. "I holler a lot."

Since she no longer has babies around, she handles all of her own household.

"I think it's best for the children if they learn to pitch in," she says. "It helps prepare them for life."

AT WIT'S END

God had a little extra help

When it first appeared, Erma Bombeck's special Mother's Day column became an instant tradition. This year we again bow to popular demand by bringing Erma's tribute to mothers.

When the Good Lord was creating Mothers He was into His sixth day of "overtime" when the angel appeared and said, "You're doing a lot of fiddling around on this one."

bombeck

And the Lord said, "Have you read the spec on this order?"

"She has to be completely washable, but not plastic."

"Have 180 movable parts...all replaceable."

"Run on black coffee and leftovers."

"Have a lap that disappears when she stands up."
"A kiss that can cure anything from a broken leg to a disappointed love affair."

"And six pairs of hands."

The angel shook her head slowly and said, "Six pairs of hands...no way."

"It's not the hands that are causing me problems," said the Lord. "It's the three pairs of eyes that Mothers have to have."

"That's on the standard model?" asked the angel.

The Lord nodded. "One pair that sees through closed doors when she asks, 'What are you kids doing in there?' when she already knows. Another here in the back of her head that sees what she shouldn't but what she has to know, and of course the ones here in front so that she can look at a child when he goofs and say, 'I understand and I love you' without so much as uttering a word."

"Lord," said the angel touching His sleeve gently, "come to bed. Tomorrow..."

"I can't," said the Lord, "I'm so close to creating something so close to myself. Already I have one who heals herself when she is sick...can feed a family of six on one pound of hamburger...and can get a 9-year-old to stand under a shower."

The angel circled the model of a Mother very slowly. "It's too soft," she sighed.

"But tough!" said the Lord excitedly. "You cannot imagine what this Mother can do to endure"

"Can it think?"

"Not only think, but it can reason and compromise," said the Creator.

Finally, the angel bent over and ran her finger across the cheek. "There's a leak," she pronounced. "I told You You were trying to put too much into this model."

"It's not a leak," said the Lord. "It's a tear."

"What's it for?"

"It's for joy, sadness, disappointment, pain, loneliness and pride."

"You are a genius," said the angel.

"The Lord looked somber. 'I didn't put it there.'"

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Fired up over crab treganza

flanary

He wears three hats — as fire fighter, athlete and actor — and wears them well. He's a whistler, too, and his neighbors always know when he's home from the sound of music.

Professionally, today's chef of the week, Dick Hammer, is captain Fire Station 60, Universal City.

He has come a long way. His father is a native of Copenhagen, Denmark (some members of his family still reside there), but Hammer was born in Long Beach. The family later moved to Bellflower, where he attended Excelsior High School. Competing in track and basketball, he was chosen captain in his senior year and won "Most Valuable Player" honors.

Fullerton Junior College was next to see Hammer. He again played basketball and ran track. As captain of the basketball team, Dick let the group to the league championships two years in a row, losing only one game. Recognition for his outstanding ability came with his being voted "Most Valuable Player" for the entire league.

Hammer attended USC on a scholarship, majoring in physical education and added volleyball to his athletic endeavors. And, while his first love was basketball, he was setting the stage for the biggest thrill of his already exciting life. The year 1954 saw UWC win the Pacific Coast Conference, the Far Western Conference and finally finishing the season as the number three basketball threat. In volleyball, the team came out number two nationally.

WHILE DOING graduate work, Hammer signed on as a recreation director for the Long Beach Recreation Department. He also kept up his participation in AAU basketball and volleyball.

In 1959, another of his goals became reality. He became a fireman for the Los Angeles County Fire Department. With this new career in front of him, he still found time to do some teaching on his days off working with instruction of mentally handicapped, blind, deaf and emotionally disturbed students.

Hammer's All American performance in volleyball was noted by those forming the 1964 Olympic Volleyball Team and 20 considerate fire fighters worked his shifts to permit him to take the trip to Tokyo.

Fire Fighter Hammer considered this the zenith of his athletic career, topping his Rio de Janeiro trip for the World Championships in 1960. He also participated in the 1973 Firemen's Olympics.

As for Hammer, the actor, you may recognize him in TV's Emergency reruns or as that All-American male staring down at you from Marlborough Country billboards. He's also done commercials for Coffee-Mate, Wheaties and Continental Airlines.

Hammer was "discovered" while making a fire inspection at the Universal Studios and was asked to do commercial work.

He and his wife, Betty, whom he met in high school, have a daughter and two sons. Mike, 20, and Christine, 18, both attend Long Beach City College. Danny, 16, is a student at Millikan High School and has teamed with his Dad on a Hallmark commercial.

As with all good fire fighters, he also can cook and Betty adds "he uses all the pots and pans available. He does a lot of improvising too, when he takes the notion." Today he's improvising with Captain's Crab Treganza.

DEAR ABBY

Interprets things his way

DEAR ABBY: I work in an office. Our boss is a Mormon and will not allow any of us to smoke, drink coffee or tea, or swear.

The smoking and swearing restrictions I don't mind, but I do resent not being able to have coffee in the office during breaks from the hectic pace of our business.

The nearest cafe is 15 minutes away, so going there for a cup of coffee is out of the question.

Does the Mormon church condone this kind of pressure on non-members to conform to its beliefs? I

don't question my boss's reasons for abstaining himself, but his demand that I do so too doesn't seem fair to me.

Meanwhile, this boss thinks he is being morally righteous by preventing us from drinking coffee in the office, but he is carrying on a not-so-secret affair with his secretary. Both of them are married. Does that mean, according to his religion, that I can't drink coffee, but I can still have extra-marital sex? —DON'T USE MY NAME

DEAR DON'T: Your boss is speaking only for himself and not the Mormon church, which stresses that each individual has a right to his own beliefs. Your boss' behavior shows him to be not only a poor boss but also a poor Mormon. NO church condones adultery!

DEAR ABBY: My neighbor, who thinks she knows everything, saw Joshua, my 3-year-old son, playing with his big sister's doll. He was cuddling it, rocking it and treating it in a very tender way.

This neighbor told me that I should not permit Joshua to play with dolls because it might make a homosexual out of him.

Joshua also plays with cars and trains, but occasionally he plays with his sister's dolls, and I don't see anything wrong with it.

Once, when Joshua put on my high heels and pretended to "go shopping" with one of my old purses over his arm, this neighbor told me that if I didn't discourage this kind of play, Joshua might grow up to be a transvestite.

Is she right? —JACKSON STREET

DEAR JACKSON: No. There's no reason why little boys shouldn't cuddle dolls. One day he may become a father, and babies need cuddling from fathers, too.

And as for Joshua dressing up in your clothes, don't worry about it — unless he persists in this habit, goes in for makeup and does it on the sly.

DEAR ABBY: Nearly every time I invite my boyfriend over for dinner, he plops himself down in an easy chair right after he finishes eating and falls fast asleep.

He works 10 hours a day and is 43-years-old. (I'm 42 and put in a good day's work, too, but I'm not all pooped out right after dinner.)

I've been tolerant of this habit of his for two years, but I have had it. Don't you think he is being selfish and unfair?

We discussed it, and he says I should wake him up and keep him awake. I say if he's that tired or sleepy, he should excuse himself and go home.

He says he loves me, but do you think a man can really love a woman and fall asleep in her face nearly every night? —FULL OF DOUBTS

DEAR FULL: It's possible. Don't awaken him, and don't chastise him. Insist that he have a complete physical checkup.

If he's all right, rejoice! It's proof that he is completely relaxed and at ease in your company. And if you can't see it that way, maybe you'd better look around for more alert, wide-awake companion-ship.

CONFIDENTIAL TO M. B.: It's not enough to forgive and forget. You have to forget what you forgave.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, Los Angeles, Ca. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

CHEF OF THE WEEK Fired up over crab treganza

He wears three hats — as fire fighter, athlete and actor — and wears them well. He's a whistler, too, and his neighbors always know when he's home from the sound of music.

Professionally, today's chef of the week, Dick Hammer, is captain Fire Station 60, Universal City.

He has come a long way. His father is a native of Copenhagen, Denmark (some members of his family still reside there), but Hammer was born in Long Beach. The family later moved to Bellflower, where he attended Excelsior High School. Competing in track and basketball, he was chosen captain in his senior year and won "Most Valuable Player" honors.

Fullerton Junior College was next to see Hammer. He again played basketball and ran track. As captain of the basketball team, Dick let the group to the league championships two years in a row, losing only one game. Recognition for his outstanding ability came with his being voted "Most Valuable Player" for the entire league.

Hammer attended USC on a scholarship, majoring in physical education and added volleyball to his athletic endeavors. And, while his first love was basketball, he was setting the stage for the biggest thrill of his already exciting life. The year 1954 saw UWC win the Pacific Coast Conference, the Far Western Conference and finally finishing the season as the number three basketball threat. In volleyball, the team came out number two nationally.

WHILE DOING graduate work, Hammer signed on as a recreation director for the Long Beach Recreation Department. He also kept up his participation in AAU basketball and volleyball.

In 1959, another of his goal's became reality. He became a fireman for the Los Angeles County Fire Department. With this new career in front of him, he still found time to do some teaching on his days off working with instruction of mentally handicapped, blind, deaf and emotionally disturbed students.

Hammer's All American performance in volleyball was noted by those forming the 1964 Olympic Volleyball Team and 20 considerate fire fighters worked his shifts to permit him to take the trip to Tokyo.

Fire Fighter Hammer considered this the zenith of his athletic career, topping his Rio de Janeiro trip for the World Championships in 1960. He also participated in the 1973 Firemen's Olympics.

As for Hammer, the actor, you may recognize him in TV's Emergency reruns or as that All-American male starying down at you from Marlborough Country billboards. He's also done commercials for Coffee-Mate, Wheaties and Continental Airlines.

Hammer was "discovered" while making a fire

inspection at the Universal Studios and was asked to do commercial work.

He and his wife, Betty, whom he met in high school, have a daughter and two sons. Mike, 20, and Christine, 18, both attend Long Beach City College. Danny, 16, is a student at Millikan High School and has teamed with his Dad on a Hallmark commercial.

As with all good fire fighters, he also can cook and Betty adds "he uses all the pots and pans available. He does a lot of improvising too, when he takes the notion." Today he's improvising with Captain's Crab Treganza.

CAPTAIN'S CRAB TREGANZA

- 2 onions
- 5 stalks celery
- 5 carrots
- 4 cloves garlic, mashed
- 1 cup parsley, chopped
- 6 tablespoons olive oil
- 5 8-ounce cans tomato sauce
- 2 cups water
- 1/2 teaspoon EACH thyme, rosemary and sage
- 3 whole crabs, washed and cracked
- 3 pounds clams in shells
- 1 pound shrimp
- 2 pounds white fish fillets
- 1/2 cup white wine
- Salt and pepper to taste

Saute onions, celery, carrots and parsley in oil. Add tomato sauce, garlic, spices with water and simmer 45 minutes on low heat.

Add crab and clams and simmer 30 minutes.

Add shrimp and fish. Cover and simmer 10 minutes.

Add wine and seasonings and simmer 5 minutes more. Serves 5.

DEAR ABBY

Interprets things his way

DEAR ABBY: I work in an office. Our boss is a Mormon and will not allow any of us to smoke, drink coffee or tea, or swear.

The smoking and swearing restrictions I don't mind, but I do resent not being able to have coffee in the office during breaks from the hectic pace of our business.

The nearest cafe is 15 minutes away, so going there for a cup of coffee is out of the question.

don't question my boss's reasons for abstaining himself, but his demand that I do so too doesn't seem fair to me.

Meanwhile, this boss thinks he is being morally righteous by preventing us from drinking coffee. In the office, but he is carrying on a not-so-secret affair with his secretary. Both of them are married. Does that mean, according to his religion, that I can't drink coffee, but I can still have extra-marital sex? —DON'T USE MY NAME

DEAR DON'T: Your boss is speaking only for himself and not the Mormon church, which stresses that each individual has a right to his own beliefs. Your boss' behavior shows him to be not only a poor boss but also a poor Mormon. NO church condones adultery!

DEAR ABBY: My neighbor, who thinks she knows everything, saw Joshua, my 3-year-old son, playing with his big sister's doll. He was cuddling it, rocking it and treating it in a very tender way.

This neighbor told me that I should not permit Joshua to play with dolls because it might make a homosexual out of him.

Joshua also plays with cars and trains, but occasionally he plays with his sister's dolls, and I don't see anything wrong with it.

Once, when Joshua put on my high heels and pretended to "go shopping" with one of my old purses over his arm, this neighbor told me that if I didn't discourage this kind of play, Joshua might grow up to be a transvestite.

Is she right? —JACKSON STREET

DEAR JACKSON: No. There's no reason why little boys shouldn't cuddle dolls. One day he may become a father, and babies need cuddling from fathers, too.

And as for Joshua dressing up in your clothes, don't worry about it — unless he persists in this habit, goes in for makeup and does it on the sly.

DEAR ABBY: Nearly every time I invite my boyfriend over for dinner, he plops himself down in an easy chair right after he finishes eating and falls fast asleep.

He works 10 hours a day and is 43-years-old. (I'm 42 and put in a good day's work, too, but I'm not all pooped out right after dinner.)

I've been tolerant of this habit of his for two years, but I have had it. Don't you think he is being selfish and unfair?

We discussed it, and he says I should wake him up and keep him awake. I say if he's that tired or sleepy, he should excuse himself and go home.

He says he loves me, but do you think a man can really love a woman and fall asleep in her face nearly every night? —FULL OF DOUBTS

DEAR FULL: It's possible. Don't awaken him, and don't chastise him. Insist that he have a complete physical checkup.

If he's all right, rejoice! It's proof that he is completely relaxed and at ease in your company. And if you can't see it that way, maybe you'd better look around for more alert, wide-awake companionship.

CONFIDENTIAL TO M. B.: It's not enough to forgive and forget. You have to forget what you forgave.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, Los Angeles, Ca. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

HAPPY MOTHERS DAY

To the most exciting "Little It" in this side of San Pedro, it's AMAZING what a fantastic person you are. Besides being the mother you are my friend. I REALLY hope when I get older I'm just like you (faced) I hope I'm not going to meetings. Thank you for everything you've done for me. I never met a man I didn't like. Well, I'm quelling "I never met a human being that doesn't like my mom" & that's the honest to God truth. Happy Mother's Day again, Mom. I REALLY LOVE YOU. (And I Like You Too.)

Helen O'Connell — still singing to beat the band

TV-Radio Editor

Helen O'Connell. A name of magic to the over-40 generation; a name to conjure up the past. A name that, for millions, will always stir memories of the early '40s when she was queen of the big band singers.

Memories, perhaps, of saving up money to buy your first records. Memories of your high school years, or of college. Memories of young romance. Memories of a world going to war.

If you were alive in those days, you can never forget such hit songs of Helen's as "Green Eyes," "Tangerine," "Amapola," "Yours," "Embraceable You" and "All of Me." Her voice and her style were distinctive; no one else was like her.

Now, 30 years past the peak of her fame, Miss O'Connell is still making big money as an entertainer. She tours 9 or 10 months a year; singing in hotels and supper clubs, at conventions, on cruises and at places like Disney World and Disneyland. Occasionally, she still appears with her singing partner of the '40s, Bob Eberly.

And Helen, who was a regular on several network television shows in the 1950s, still appears on TV occasionally. You can see her Saturday night, from 10 to midnight, on Channel 2 when she co-hosts the 24th annual "Miss USA Beauty Pageant" with Bob Barker on CBS.

The pageant will originate at the International Convention Center in Niagara Falls, N.Y. Several weeks later, on July 19, Miss O'Connell and Barker will host the "Miss Universe Pageant" from El Salvador, also on CBS. This is Helen's fourth year of doing the two shows.

HELEN ANCHORS the TV program from a booth and doesn't appear on stage, whereas Barker emcees the pageant. She doesn't sing, which is too bad. Entertainment for the pageant at Niagara Falls will be provided by the vocal trio The Lettermen and by the Glee Club of the U.S. Military Academy.

Hosting a TV show is more satisfying to her than singing is, Miss O'Connell told me at lunch the other day in the Beverly Hills Brown Derby. And it is nothing new for her. She was women's editor on NBC's "Today" for two years in the days when Dave Garroway was conducting the show. Earlier she had had her own TV show on a Los Angeles station, in which she both sang and interviewed guests, and later she cohosted the NBC network's "Here's Hollywood" show with Jack Linkletter.

"What do you think of persons who rap beauty pageants?" I inquired of the beauty pageant hostess.

"I think it's stupid," came the reply. "The girls want to do it, and it affords them wonderful opportunities. What's wrong with that? I wouldn't have objected if my daughters had ever wanted to enter such a pageant."

MISS O'CONNELL has four daughters and two grandchildren. Her youngest daughter, Helen Jr., is 17 and lives with her in the Brentwood home in which the vocalist has resided for 26 years.

The role of wife-and-mother always appealed to the singing star more than a career, she told me, and the only reason she came out of retirement — or went on the road in the first place as a teen-ager — was for the money.

Helen quit as vocalist with Jimmy Dorsey's Orchestra at the height of her fame in 1944 when her first daughter, Jackie, was born, and retired from show business for seven years. Two other daughters were born before her marriage to Clifford Smith Jr., heir to a Boston investment fortune, broke up in 1951 after 10 years.

"My marriage wasn't the happiest, but the seven years of retirement were most satisfying to me as a mother," she said. "I had no desire to renew my career, but I did so for the money. Fortunately, I had no trouble at all in getting plenty of bookings."

She and her former vocal partner with the Jimmy Dorsey band, Bob Eberly, were summer replacements for the Perry Como show on TV one year, and Helen also was a regular on Tennessee Ernie Ford's TV show one season.

In 1957, Helen was married to novelist Thomas Chambliss, author of "Never So Few" and other books, and she had her fourth daughter by him. He died in 1960, and she is single now.

POPULAR SINGERS nowadays make more money than just about anybody else, and I was shocked to learn from Helen that the most money she ever got for her hit records of the early 1940s was $25.

Yes, $25 a record.

"Green Eyes," "Amapola" and "Tangerine," all sung as duets with Eberly, reportedly sold in excess of 8 million copies, but Helen says she doesn't even know how many million-seller records she made.

"The record contracts were with Dorsey," she pointed out. "I just got my regular weekly salary plus $25. And my salary was nothing great — I'm sure some of the band members were getting more."

Helen also appeared in three movies with the Dorsey group — "the biggest was 'The Fleet's In'" — and for these, she recalled, she was paid $500 extra.

The singing star, whose dimpled face was as pretty as her voice, turned down an individual movie contract with a major studio and a chance to become a film star when she decided to retire in 1944.

HELEN TOURED with the Dorsey band for four years, and, she recalls, "they were rather lonely years for me." Explained the vocalist: "I was the only girl, and it didn't seem wise to date the guys in the band."

Sometimes, while performing at a dance, she said, "I'd look down into the faces of the young girls and wish I could be in their place. I missed all of that."

Miss O'Connell was born in Lima, Ohio, and grew up in Toledo. She took dancing lessons as a youngster, but not singing, and she says she still can't read music. Singing came naturally — "the whole family sang a lot" — and she was appearing on radio at 13, but without getting paid for it. She did, however, make $5 a night for singing and dancing appearances at clubs.

When she was 16 her father died, and as a result Helen left school after her sophomore year and started working full time. "It's not that I wanted to," she said. "I had to — to support my mother and younger brother and sister." Her older sister had already married and left home.

She sang with Jimmie Richards' band, then with Russ David's band in St. Louis, where she appeared on a daily radio show. She then joined Larry Funk, who billed his group as the "band of a thousand melodies." "And," said Helen, "I sang 999 of them every evening."

When Funk's band was appearing at the (Greenwich) Village Barn in New York City, Jimmy Dorsey discovered the attractive blonde singer in 1938 and quickly decided she was just what he needed.

The rest, as they say, is history.

McLean Stevenson's alive and working for NBC now

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

"Yeah, I suppose I am giving up a million dollars in residuals," says McLean Stevenson as offhandedly as if he were describing a missed putt in a golf tournament.

Stevenson is the comedy actor who has played Col. Henry Blake, the goof-off camp commander in "M-A-S-H" for the past three seasons. In a recent episode he was reassigned and his plane was lost at sea. No more Col. Blake.

Why would an actor walk out on a hit series without any tangible prospects for the future?

"FOR FIVE years I've been playing second banana in filmed comedy series, first on 'The Doris Day Show' and then 'M-A-S-H,'" he explained. "Now I want to see what I can do on my own."

"Sure, I'll be losing a lot of money. But so what? How many Jaguars can I drive? My needs are very small."

"I still live in an apartment, and I do my own laundry. I've always been able to find work; every year since 1961 I've earned more money than the year before. And it sure beats selling bed pans."

For eight years the Illinois-born Stevenson sold medical supplies, clerked for an insurance company and served as assistant director of athletics at Northwestern University.

HE TOLD about the transformation and a world of other things about himself during a rehearsal break for the "Cher" show.

"I had nine jobs in eight years, and I didn't like any of them," he recalled.

"The need for a change struck me as I was walking across a football field in my trench coat, blue jeans and sneakers. I watched those poor slob practicing like crazy, knowing that if they didn't block they wouldn't get paid."

"It was crazy to stay in college athletics unless you were a coach. I decided to go to New York and become an actor."

HE DROVE his Volkswagen to New York, and sold it to a parking attendant for $900 when he learned what parking charges were. A bystander heard him talking about his acting career and asked if he could sing.

Stevenson lied that he could, and the man got him a job in the revue cabaret, Upstairs at the Downstairs.

"Within an hour and 40 minutes after arriving in Manhattan, I had my first job as an actor," he says. "So I've never worried about getting jobs since then."

FROM 1961 to 1965, he worked in musicals such as How to Succeed in Business, TV shows ("That was the week That Was"), night clubs commercials, you name it.

Then he came to Hollywood, sold himself to Tommy Smothers as a sketch writer and began working in the sketches himself.

After two seasons with Doris Day ("I quit after the first year, got fired after the second one"), he appeared on Tim Conway's short-lived show, then enlisted in "M-A-S-H."

"I saw the movie and hated it," Stevenson recalled. "I told Gene Reynolds, who was producing the TV show, 'I can't play that character of Col. Blake.' Gene said, 'Great — you've got the job.'"

He considers "M-A-S-H" the "best half-hour comedy-drama in television history" and has nothing but praise for his former colleagues. But he is less pleased with 20th Century-Fox for the working conditions and with CBS for scheduling the show on three different nights in three years.

"But that wasn't why I quit," said the actor. "And I didn't quit to go to anything, because I had nothing to go to."

He does now. On the strength of his guest-hosting for Johnny Carson, NBC signed him for a weekly variety show. The show didn't make the fall schedule, but maybe January.

McLEAN STEVENSON

Station lets viewers help choose movies

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — Station officials usually decide what old movies will be shown and when during non-network hours. But a Minnesota TV station says it recently invited the public in on the programming act.

And while Minneapolis area viewers didn't get to decide the time WCCO-TV airs their favorite flicks, they did get to help pick most of the films shown since Feb. 10 from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. on weekdays.

"The idea was to get audience involvement and hopefully increase our ratings," says Tom Cousins, WCCO's promotion director. "And it's almost doubled our ratings for that afternoon show."

IT BEGAN, he said, when WCCO last October ran a two-page ad in local newspapers, polling viewers on their old-movie favorites from a list of 650 films — none later than 1970 vintage — in WCCO's film library.

Viewers also were asked whether they'd like the films on at 10:50 p.m., at "midnight or other" or at 3:30 p.m.

Cousins said the films were characterized as "Gems from the 30s and 40s," "Singing and Dancing Extravaganzas" and "Chilling Tales of Horror and Science Fiction," among other things.

STUDENTS at Holy Angels Academy, an area high school, tabulated the complete results. When the final tally was in, more than 6,000 Minneapolis area residents had voted in the picture poll, WCCO says. According to their count, the biggest vote — 1,738 — went to "The Thin Man," a 1934 comedy classic, with four "Thin Man" sequels following in popularity. The least-popular movie "Dime With a Halo," got 75 votes.

Most viewers — 3,723 — wanted their old movies on at 10:50 p.m., while just 993 wanted the weekday afternoon time period. But WCCO had to put the voter-approved films in the latter time period because its current late-night schedule isn't suitable for a string of "movie weeks" featuring films voted on by viewers.

Since Feb. 10, he said, his station has filled its 3:30-5:30 p.m. weekday slot with 12 "movie weeks" reflecting the top choices of the viewer poll. Last week, for example, was devoted to Jerry Lewis films.

Watching sports on TV can wear a guy out

By LEE MARGULIES
Associated Press

Sports enthusiasts who plop down in front of the TV set for the weekend face a test of stamina. There's so much to see that watching can be as exhausting as playing.

Take one recent weekend. CBS offered back-to-back pro basketball games on both Saturday and Sunday. NBC had its usual baseball game of the week on Saturday, and on Sunday presented tennis and hockey. ABC checked in Saturday with tennis, golf, bowling and "Wide World of Sports," then on Sunday aired "American Sportsman" and more golf and tennis.

In all, the three networks provided 26½ hours of sports in those two days. And that's only part of the story. Many local television stations around the country are just as sports minded.

ON THAT same weekend, for instance, local stations in Los Angeles presented an additional 18 hours of coverage of professional and college baseball, high school basketball, auto racing, soccer, boxing, wrestling and badminton. Chicago stations provided their viewers with 23 extra hours of baseball, boxing, basketball and wrestling. Kansas City stations carried two local baseball games and three fishing programs.

If you're beginning to think it's too much, you're not alone. So are some network sports executives.

"I am concerned about getting to that position of oversaturation," says Bob Wussler, head of CBS Sports. "On occasion I think we've reached it."

"I think we're coming close," says Herb Granath, vice president in charge of sports sales of ABC.

WUSSLER recalls the time last year in New York City when 31 football games were televised within 35 days.

"When that happens," the CBS executive explains, "you don't just hurt one or two sports, you pretty much hurt everything. There are only so many dollars out there."

So far there has been no cutback in sports programming for lack of sponsors. On the contrary, the number of hours devoted to sports is increasing.

Last year the three networks devoted more time than ever to sports — a combined total of 1,089 hours. That's about 100 more hours than in 1973 and twice as many as in 1960.

This year the total is expected to top 1,100 hours and it will certainly go up again in 1976 with ABC's prime-time coverage of the summer and winter Olympic Games.

WHY THE steady climb in sports programming?

"I think there are two very simple reasons for it," Wussler observes. "One, there seems to be an audience demand for it, and there seem to be enough sponsors to pay the bills."

Granath, too, thinks it's a combination of things.

"First," he says, "there's the fact that one of the things that television does best, I think, is live events — and most of the sports on the air are live events. There's a sense of immediacy, a vicarious feeling of attendance in watching it."

"And second, the growth of television sports really has paralleled the incredible growth of sports in general in this country."

Wussler's reference to sponsors should not be overlooked. The networks are profit-oriented and sports pays.

WHAT HAS HELPED make it possible for the networks to continue expanding their sports coverage the past few years is the involvement of advertisers who weren't interested in this market before. Granath explains:

MONTY HALL is emcee of the Variety Club Telethon '75, which started Saturday night and continues until 6 p.m. Sunday on Ch. 5.

"Until recently, sports programming was almost entirely supported by male-appeal produce producers ... Now there's been a relatively new trend which will continue expanding — advertisers who put out general products and women's products."

Edith's not worried about Bunkers' move

By BOB THOMAS

Associated Press

"The winner — and still champion."

That's "All in the Family," which has survived stiff competition, social critics and changing fancies to remain the No. 1 television series in the all-important ratings.

Can it remain the champ next season? That is the question in the trade with CBS' announcement that the show is moving from its safe Saturday-at-8 spot to Monday at 9.

The reasoning appears to be that "All in the Family" had to move out of the newly proclaimed "family" hour of 8-9, since Archie Bunker sometimes utters words not meant for tender ears.

THE FUTURE was viewed with optimism by Jean Stapleton, who is just as sunny but nowhere as dopey as she appears as Edith Bunker in the series.

She remarked after concluding the fifth year of taping:

"It was a wonderful year. I think there was more harmony on the show than ever before, and the quality was as high as ever.

"The only one who suffered was Sally Struthers, because not enough of the material was devoted to her. But I think that will be remedied next year.

"She and Rob (Reiner) are moving into their own house, so that will give them a chance to have more shows in which they play a prominent part.

"CARROLL (O'Connor) was giving his best all year, and Wes Kenny's personal qualities made a splendid contribution. It was our first year without (producer-director) John Rich, and there could have been a letdown. But there wasn't. It was a wonderful working atmosphere."

That has not always prevailed on "All in the Family," of course.

There have been walkouts from the mercurial O'Connor, and grumblings from other members of the company. But never from Jean Stapleton.

A total professional schooled in summer stock and Broadway shows, she has been the stalwart in the company.

"Oh, we've had our problems," she observed, "but no more than in any working atmosphere. Perhaps a little more; they are, after all, called 'the lively arts.' And with good reason."

MISS STAPLETON viewed happily the staff additions for next season: producer Hal Kanter, mentor of "The George Gobel Show," "Julia" and "The Jimmy Stewart Show," and director Paul Bogart, who has made films with Bob Hope, James Garner and Dean Martin.

"Isn't that wonderful that in its sixth year our show should be able to get a new producer and director of such stature?" said the actress. Wonderful indeed, but then CBS and executive producer Norman Lear realize the need to protect their golden goose.

Miss Stapleton is also protective of Edith Bunker, and she rejects the suggestion by feminists that the lovable dingbat perpetuates the myth of the docile housewife.

"Edith has grown from what she was at the beginning of the show, but the development has come honestly," she said. "She takes a stand when it's important.

"FOR INSTANCE, on Archie's gambling. And her insistence that they celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary.

"Also in a show called 'Edith's Friend,' which showed Edith being drawn to an old school chum at a reunion. It was sort of a 'Brief Encounter.'

"Perhaps she is a stereotype, but it would be very dull if we didn't dramatize that kind of a woman, in order to laugh at her. I think it's important to feminism to have that woman dramatized, especially in comedy.

"You can't have the liberated woman if there is no contrast, no revelation."

'Exorcist' director Friedkin to do 'The Spirit' for TV

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

William Friedkin, whose last two films were among the top moneymakers of all time, is returning to the medium where he started as a director — television.

NBC announces that Friedkin will produce and direct a two-hour movie for the next television season: "The Spirit," based on the Will Eisner comic books that have attracted fans of all ages for three decades.

Friedkin is the man who made "The French Connection" and "The Exorcist" and became a millionaire in the process — as well as one of the five most-in-demand directors.

WHY, THEN, would he seek a return to television?

He explained his reasons in an interview in his Universal Studio bungalow. Not an easy place to find, since it is marked with an assumed name "to avoid people who keep dropping by scripts for me to read."

"I'm not one of those who puts down television," remarked Friedkin, a serious-minded 35-year-old with probing eyes behind goggle-glasses.

"I've never viewed the medium as a 'poor cousin.'"

"As a matter of fact, there are fewer creative opportunities in films nowadays. Movies have to be blockbusters — bigger, grander, more exciting and violent, sexier than before. Some of the most interesting work is being done in television.

"SHOWS LIKE 'The Law,' 'Love Among the Ruins,' and 'In This House of Brede' are as good as anything you can find in a movie theater.

"I've always wanted to do TV again — but to use the medium in a way that it should be used.

"Not with a photographed play or a conventional story, but with something that uses the unique intimacy of TV. I've also wanted to do something that would appeal to the imaginations of younger children as well as adults, dealing with subject matter that is not salacious or contrived."

The answer was "The Spirit." He displayed copies of the comic books and emphasized it isn't your normal run-of-the-mill type of comic.

"LOOK AT the dramatic use of montage, of light and sound," he urged. "See the dynamic framing that Eisner employs, and the deep, vibrant colors.

"Many film directors have been influenced by 'The Spirit,' myself included. Look at this."

He displayed a comic cover of a man being chased by an elevated train. "This is where I got ideas for the chase in 'The French Connection'."

Friedkin got his start in Chicago television, directing 2,000 live shows.

Cool It!

When you're ready to blow your top, you're primed to fall victim to high blood pressure.

It's called hypertension and it can shorten your life. It can end it, too. Twenty three million Americans are killing themselves right now and don't even know it.

All this week, Dr. George Fischbeck will explore hypertension and introduce you to some medical experts who can help save you from yourself.

Join Dr. George and learn how to cool it.

6 Ways We Save You Money!!

1. INVESTMENT—No doubt about it, a room addition is one of the best investments you can make. What else can you buy and the longer you use it the more valuable it becomes.

2. DESIGN SERVICE—I don't care how much you spend on an addition. If the design is poor you can't get the enjoyment you deserve and you will only get a fraction of what you paid for it. At the Alamo we design the room for function, beauty, furniture arrangements and resale value.

3. FURNISHINGS—When you build any addition you are going to need some new furnishings. Alamo is the only contractor to have a complete line of furniture in stock for your selection. Alamo's room addition customers also receive our special "Customer Card" allowing them a full 25% discount on any furniture we have in the store. You may use this card for purchases for other rooms in your home. This service alone will save you hundreds of dollars.

4. NOT TOO BIG — NOT TOO SMALL—Let's assume you want a family room large enough for a sofa, a pair of chairs, a TV set, and a game table. If you buy a room too large you have wasted several hundred dollars. If, on the other hand, you build it too small you no longer can use it for what you had intended. Probably have to give up your game table which was very important to you. Alamo specializes in designing exactly what you need.

5. VOLUME BUYING—Alamo Center is one of the largest remodelers in the country. We don't have to buy in small lots for one customer at a time. We can order in large quantities, obtaining savings that are passed on directly to you.

6. UNFINISHED JOBS—Yes, Alamo will build the shell and leave the inside work for you if you wish. This will save you many hundreds of dollars. In addition, we will sell you all the finish materials you need at "Contractors cost" thereby giving you extra savings.

Pictorial Highlights of the Week

Beat the heat this summer in a cool and comfortable suit or sportcoat from Fuzz Harris. Select from a mind boggling collection of styles, colors, and patterns. Choose a light weight 100% polyester, or wrinkle free polyester knit blend. Your selection will be individually cut and tailored for the most satisfying suit or coat you ever owned. At the same cost as a comparable "off-the-rack" suit, you get far more quality, fit, and selection. To be the best dressed, see Fuzz Harris, 122 E. 3rd St., downtown Long Beach, phone 437-4406. Ample free parking across street. BankAmericard—Master Charge.

Sears Highway Passenger Tire Guarantee

If you do not receive the number of miles specified because of your tire becoming unserviceable due to (1) defects, (2) normal road hazards, or (3) tread wear-out,

We will: At our option, exchange it for a new tire or give you a refund charging in either case only the proportion of the then current selling price plus Federal Excise tax that represents mileage used. If the tire is unserviceable due to any of the above causes before 10% of the guaranteed mileage is received, the replacement or refund will be made with no charge for mileage received.

Nail punctures will be repaired at no charge.

Guarantee applies to tires on vehicles used for private family purposes.

Q. Is it true that Vice President Nelson Rockefeller cannot read because he suffers from some kind of disease?—E. H. C., Wallingford, Conn.

A. Rockefeller used to suffer from dyslexia, a reading difficulty in which he read words in transposed position. He long ago overcame the difficulty.

Q. I would like to know if Bing Crosby has retired, also his age.—Jan Walker, Sioux Falls, S. D.

A. Crosby, 71, has not retired, recently showed up in London where he cut two record albums consisting of his old favorites such as "Some Sunny Day," "The Best Things in Life Are Free," "Breezing Along With the Breeze." The old groaner also makes an occasional TV appearance or commercial but spends most of his time fishing, playing golf, and leading a relaxing life.

JAPANESE EMPEROR HIROHITO AND EMPRESS NAGAKO

Q. When are the Emperor and Empress of Japan coming to the U.S. to reciprocate President Ford's visit to Japan?—Eloise Schaeffer, Akron, Ohio.

A. The Emperor and Empress will fly to Anchorage, Alaska, on Oct. 1, 1975, will visit Washington, D.C., Woods Hole, Mass.; New York City, Chicago, Los Angeles, and on Oct. 9th, the Scripps Institute of Oceanography at La Jolla, Calif., near San Diego.

Q. During President Ford's Easter vacation in Palm Springs, he occupied at $100 a day the residence of his good friend Fred Wilson. Who is Fred Wilson?—D.L., San Bernardino, Calif.

A. Fred Wilson, 55, is a successful insurance broker with branches in Beverly Hills and the Bahamas who likes to golf with Ford.

Q. How is Shirley Temple Black doing as U.S. Ambassador to Ghana?—T.E., Salinas, Calif.

A. The word in diplomatic circles is that after only a few months on the job, Shirley Temple Black has become "the most popular U.S. Ambassador to Ghana the Americans have ever sent us." The one-time child movie star not only tries to speak Ashanti but she dresses from time to time in Ghanaian clothes and has become one of the most charming and industrious diplomats in West Africa.

Q. Now that events have humbled Henry Kissinger somewhat, any chance he might show enough courtesy to the rest of us by taking English lessons from the Actors Studio or Berlitz? When it's so easy for actors to shed their accents, why has Dr. Kissinger been so adamant about retaining the Dr. Strangelove sound?—E. Wagner, Denver, Col.

A. Dr. Kissinger does not make his living as a professional actor. He is a foreign policy expert. His accent, such as it is, does not handicap his performance. "The Dr. Strangelove sound" you refer to lies in the ear of the listener. Dr. Kissinger has been adamant on many points, but the retention of his slight accent is not one of them.

Q. The illegal political activities of several major airlines have in my opinion been criminal. Is someone like Harding Lawrence of Braniff Airways going to jail, or will these secret slush funds be covered up?—G. L., Dallas, Tex.

A. The Civil Aeronautics Board, the federal agency charged with regulating the nation's airlines, recently charged that American Airlines and Braniff Airways maintained and manipulated secret political slush funds and violated various reporting procedures. Harding Lawrence of Braniff will have to account to the CAB, his stockholders, the Internal Revenue Service, and possibly the Securities and Exchange Commission as well as the Justice Department for his responsibility in the mess.

Q. Does Warren Beatty hate Frank Sinatra? Did they have a fight on the night of the Academy Awards? Didn't his sister Shirley MacLaine have a fight with Sammy Davis Jr. that same night?—C. Bradfield, Santa Cruz, Calif.

A. On April 8, 1975, at the Academy Awards telecast, Warren and Shirley made comments concerning Sinatra's and Davis' support of the Republican Party—both Sinatra and Davis were staunch Richard Nixon supporters—but there was no fight, just good-natured kidding.

Q. I understand that Rabbi Baruch Korff, Richard Nixon's fund-raiser, has been offering Nixon for lectures and TV interviews at $250,000 per. Have there been any takers? Why does Nixon need so much money?—T. R. R., Arcadia, Calif.

A. According to Rabbi Korff, Nixon has run up some $300,000 in legal bills in order to keep control of his Presidential tapes and papers. Public contributions as of last month paid about $145,000 of those bills. No networks have offered Nixon $250,000 for an interview.

TENNIS STAR EVONNE GOOLAGONG

Q. Evonne Goolagong, the Australian tennis champ who is part aborigine—what does her name mean in her native tongue, if anything?—Carl Mayer, Madison, Wis.

Keeping Up...With Youth

by Pamela Swift

PAUL SOGLIN

DAVID HARRIS

ACTRESS JANE FONDA AND HUSBAND, ACTIVIST TOM HAYDEN

Activist Candidates

Last month, voters in Madison, Wis., reelected 29-year-old Paul Soglin as mayor. Soglin, a former antiwar activist who captured 61 percent of the vote against a conservative businessman, says that his easy victory proves that voters will trust an activist in office.

There are other cases to prove Soglin's thesis.

In Colorado, former Vietnam moratorium leader Sam Brown was elected state treasurer last November.

In Vermont, one of the Chicago Seven, John Froines, is state director of industrial health and safety.

In Minnesota, local antiwar activist Jim Lord, was elected state treasurer last fall on a campaign to "use state money for social needs" and "to reinvest Minnesota's $2.5 billion in ethical ways."

Other activists plan to follow these examples.

David Harris, one-time student-body president and antiwar activist at Stanford University, will seek the Democratic nomination for Congress from northern California's 12th District, currently represented by liberal Republican maverick Pete McCloskey. Harris, the former husband of singer Joan Baez, is currently a contributing editor to "Rolling Stone" magazine.

Tom Hayden, husband of actress Jane Fonda, is seriously considering entering the Democratic race for Senate against incumbent John Tunney (D., Calif.).

Both Hayden and Harris plan to campaign on economic reform tickets.

Overseas Youth Fares Reinstated

Young people between the ages of 12 and 21 will be able to make transatlantic flights at reduced costs this summer, provided they do not make their reservations more than five days in advance and they do not stop over at any cities en route to their final destination.

In 1973, the Civil Aeronautics Board eliminated the youth fares because it said they discriminated against other age groups. Now they have reinstated the transatlantic youth fare because so many young people were departing from Canada which never eliminated youth fares.

Nader's Newest

In his battle to protect American consumers from shoddy products and unfair prices, Ralph Nader has drawn his famous Raiders mostly from the ranks of college students and young professionals. But now he hopes to carry his campaign into the junior and senior high school classrooms.

Nader, in cooperation with Melinda E. Blau, a 31-year-old writer and mother of two, has recently produced a new consumer education kit targeted for secondary schools. Called To Buy Or Not To Buy, the package of learning aids is meant to acquaint youngsters with what Nader calls "life skills"—how to borrow wisely, hire the right lawyer, deal with a landlord, purchase insurance or get an automobile repaired.

"Most students," says Nader, "spend 12 years in school learning skills designed to help them earn a living, but they devote little or no time studying how to make their earnings provide them with a higher quality of living. They know next to nothing about banks, utilities, real estate agents, or small claims courts and how they can affect their pocketbooks, health, safety or rights."

Although such states as Illinois, Florida, Hawaii, Kentucky, and Wisconsin now include some sort of consumer education in their curricula, Nader and Blau hope their materials will encourage other states and school boards to do the same. Random House is selling the kit, which contains an introductory film strip, booklets and classroom study materials, to schools and libraries for $99.

Crisis in British Education

Great Britain's historic educational institutions—Eton, Harrow, Rugby, Charterhouse and Winchester — may soon become schools of the past, especially if the Labor Government has its way.

Antagonistic to the traditional British class system which it blames for so many of the country's evils, the Labor Party, headed by Harold Wilson, is committed to educational equality.

It seeks to abolish all private schooling, which is limited to the rich and the underprivileged who are particularly gifted and win scholarships. It favors the widespread use of the relatively new "comprehensive" school which very much resembles the ordinary American high school.

In the United States almost 90 percent of all 16-year-olds attend school. In Great Britain only 20 percent of all 16-year-olds are in school. The result is an intellectual and educational gap between young Britons and others.

There is a crisis in British education—the old versus the new, elitism versus egalitarianism—and no one seems to know which way it will go.

In 1965 the Labor Government established a democratic, comprehensive system as a replacement for the old "eleven" system. Formerly at age 11, British schoolchildren were divided roughly into two groups, those headed for university and those for trade.

Today about 50 percent attend comprehensive schools and another 50 percent are enrolled in grammar schools, private schools, or "direct grant" schools in which the state provides a number of scholarships. In short, education in Britain is in turmoil.

The 36,000-ton Hughes Glomar Explorer was used in secret CIA Project Jennifer—an effort to raise a sunken Soviet sub. The purpose of the structural towers was to deceive observers (including Soviet fishing ships) into believing that the Explorer was deep sea mining. The plan involved 4000 persons.

Parade and Project Jennifer

by Lloyd Shearer

Project Jennifer, the supposedly partial recovery of a sunken Soviet submarine, has become one of the most widely publicized operations in the 28-year history of the Central Intelligence Agency.

In September, 1974, however, when PARADE first heard of the project, it was a most closely secured top secret, and there was no indication that any other publication in the world had heard of it.

As this reporter sought to follow up and check out various angles and rumors, many of them with the Summa Corp. in Houston, Tex., that it was hiring Russian-speaking deep sea divers, that it was conducting a Russian language school aboard the Hughes Glomar Explorer, that it was in fact paying the Glomar's crew as much as $40,000 a voyage—he was told that the Hughes Glomar Explorer, constructed in the Chester, Pa., shipyards, was involved in recovering manganese nodules from the Pacific ocean floor. He was informed further that other corporations such as Tenneco and Kennecott were also engaged in the same sort of exploration, that the sea bottom was in fact a treasure house of valuable and needed minerals, and that the Summa Corp., formerly the Hughes Tool Corp., owned entirely by Howard Hughes, was determined to make it a profitable enterprise.

All other questions concerning a secret project, Russian-speaking deep sea divers, a sunken ship, the CIA, and the U.S. Navy, were quickly and deftly turned aside.

No news at Hughes

Phone calls for help to Richard Hannah, one of the most knowledgeable men in the country on the ways and means of Howard Hughes—Hannah handles the Hughes public relations account—proved friendly but fruitless. Hannah said he knew nothing of any sunken submarine.

PARADE's source, however, was zeroed in on the details of Project Jennifer, later termed Project Azorian, and was confident it would surface "because so many men are involved in it."

Sure enough, The Los Angeles Times early in February, this year, published a front-page story about the robbery of Howard Hughes' Hollywood office on Romaine Street and the disappearance of a top secret memo involving Hughes with the CIA recovery of a sunken Soviet submarine in the Atlantic.

The Times had the wrong ocean, but it was the first corroboration this reporter could obtain of his original source.

Immediately I phoned William Colby, director of the CIA, and asked him to confirm or deny several allegations concerning Project Jennifer.

As soon as Colby heard the name, Jennifer, he said, "Listen, we can't discuss this on the telephone. I'll have someone out to see you in a few hours."

A change of name

"Let's change her name to Barbara," [Colby's wife's name] I suggested, "and just chat for a minute."

"No," Colby insisted, "not on the telephone. This one is far too important. I'll have someone in touch with you right away."

Within a few minutes a CIA case officer based in Los Angeles phoned. We made an appointment to meet at my home. He arrived with another agent.

Both confirmed in detail the CIA project and both urged in the name of national security that PARADE not publish the story. If PARADE did, they maintained, it would make it exceedingly difficult for the Hughes Glomar Explorer to return to the site of the sunken Soviet submarine this July or August and try to recover the two-thirds of the Soviet sub it had not recovered.

The main objectives

What the CIA wanted most was the Soviet code machinery, logs, nuclear-tipped torpedoes, and other equipment it had not brought up.

According to its agents no other publication—they thought there were two, The New York Times and The Los Angeles Times which knew about the project—would break it.

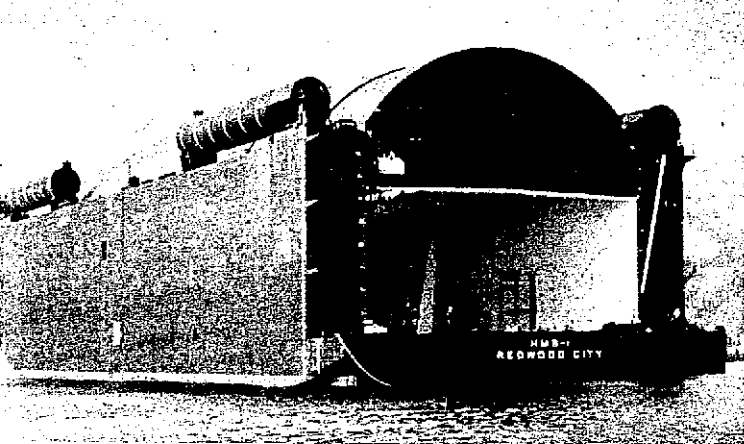

There is neither time nor space here to comment on the information, judgment, honor, and commitment of various CIA operatives. Eventually Jack Anderson, the columnist and PARADE's Washington bureau chief, did break the story on radio, explaining to me "the story's all over Washington. Chuck Morgan of the American Civil Liberties Union has been telling it to almost everyone in the National Press Building. What's your opinion?"

"My opinion," I said, "is that the CIA wants the story out. At a time when it's been accused of meddling in domestic affairs, when it's being investigated by several Congressional committees, it can point to Project Jennifer as a superb covert operation. Just imagine putting together a project involving more than 4000 men and keeping it secret for seven years."

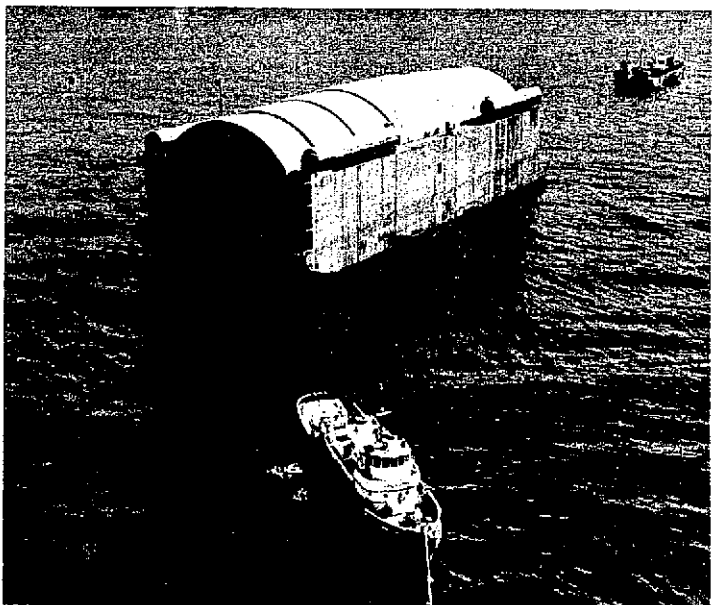

A moment of silence at Anderson's end of the phone. "You're probably right. Why don't you write the story as you know it. After all, it's our job to get the news and print it, or how else are the people going to find it out?"

I told Anderson I would. Here it is.

During recovery operations, the barge, shown open, rested 150 feet beneath the Explorer. The CIA, as a cover, registered both vessels under the name of Howard Hughes. Consequently, Hughes is now liable for property tax on $350 million to the state of California—a tax that comes to about $9 million.

The size of a football field, the barge, shown closed and at anchor, had fitted into its bottom—so no one could see it—a 6-million-pound claw. Lowered three miles to grab the sub, it reportedly dredged up a third of the vessel.

Early in March of 1968 a diesel-powered Soviet submarine of the G or Golf class, departed Vladivostok and proceeded southeast on a test voyage.

Originally constructed in 1958 it had been remodeled and equipped with at least two nuclear-tipped torpedoes. Approximately 750 miles northwest of the Hawaiian Islands, the Soviet sub exploded, possibly as a result of improper venting procedure. It quickly went to the bottom, three miles deep, with all hands. The U.S. Navy, through its various supersecret listening devices, detected and recorded the explosion.

Uncoded messages

From March until May in 1968, the Soviets made numerous attempts to locate their missing submarine. They sent out trawlers, a submarine tender, and from time to time called in plain, uncoded language over the marine distress channels for the submarine to identify its location.

The U.S. Navy monitored these distress calls. In May the Soviets gave up their search. Our Navy thereupon went back to its recordings, computed the various coordinates and by superb analysis determined where the Soviet submarine lay on the ocean's bottom.

It then sent down sophisticated photographic equipment which took photos of the Soviet sub. A report including the photos was sent to David Packard, then Deputy Secretary of Defense under Melvin Laird.

Packard was interested in what might be derived from the recovery of the sub. Intelligence experts were brought in for their professional opinions. They were ecstatic at the possibility of getting their hands on a Soviet sub with its coding devices, its torpedoes, its guidance system, and all the remainder of its gear.

The intelligence analysis was presented to the 40 Committee, which reviews and approves intelligence projects, and which voted to "go," and of course to Richard Nixon, then President, who gave the final go-ahead.

The Central Intelligence Agency under Richard Helms was assigned the responsibility of secretly recovering the Soviet submarine, no small assignment.

Decides on Hughes

Helms decided after much consultation with his technological experts that the Hughes Tool Co., owned by Howard Hughes, was the private company best qualified to undertake the job. The CIA, however, never got directly to Hughes. The agency contacted Raymond Holliday, chief executive director of the Hughes Tool Co. Holliday listened to the agency's proposal, relayed it to Hughes, then notified the CIA that Hughes' name and company could be used as a cover on "the collection effort for the submarine."

In January of 1970 the agency began sounding out various contractors such as Global Marine and Lockheed, both of which were in the ocean mining business. It was decided that the recovery would basically be made through a two-unit device. A surface ship would support and then have attached to it a large, clawlike device that would be lowered to the ocean bottom, entwine itself around the submarine, and draw it up via one single pipeline into the ship itself.

The cost would be approximately $350 million.

On July 4, 1974, the Hughes Glomar Explorer with a crew of 172 and its accompanying barge arrived over the recovery site in the Pacific. The recovery attempt was started one month later on Aug. 4. It took almost four days to lower the pipe at the rate of seven feet an hour to the sub site. The pipe claw weighed 6 million pounds. Guided by computer, its eight subsidiary claws grabbed the Soviet sub midship, fore, and aft and began to raise it.

From a depth of 16,000 feet, it raised the sub 7000 feet. Then the submarine itself fractured, broke some of the claws, and two-thirds of it sank back to the ocean bottom.

The one-third of the sub that was salvaged was drawn up into the well of the ship. It was carefully examined. From five to seven Soviet bodies, some skeletonized, were found.

A burial ceremony was conducted in Russian and in English by a U.S. Navy captain in full uniform. The Soviet national anthem was played. The American national anthem was played. The burial ceremony—there was one common casket for all the remains—was conducted in accordance with Soviet Navy at-sea burial ceremonies. The ceremony was photographed in full.

What did the CIA learn from salvaging one-third of the 1958-model Soviet sub?

Hits and misses

It learned something about the Soviet standards in metallurgy and welding, the station assignments of the sub's personnel, and the type of pinups the sub's personnel collected. But it claims not to have recovered the sub's coding equipment or its nuclear-tipped missiles or its warheads or its code books. Which is why, so it maintains, it wanted to keep the entire Jennifer Operation a secret so that it could try for another recovery.

If the Central Intelligence Agency obtained various coding equipment and anything else of value from the Soviet submarine, it would never admit it. No intelligence service informs its rivals of its accomplishments.

Which is why the American public is not likely to know ever what it got for $350 million or even to know if two-thirds of a Soviet sub still lies on the ocean floor. The CIA might have raised the whole job. One of its main objectives is to keep the Soviets guessing.

SOUTHERN SPECIALTY

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

On a Sunday evening sometime soon, try this novel main dish that had its origin in the South. Now if you live below the Mason-Dixon line, or were brought up there, we know you prefer white cornmeal to yellow, so you may wish to skip the shortcut of using packaged corn muffins and bake a square loaf of your own corn bread as the basis for Dixie Shortcake. Cut the loaf into squares, then cut each square in half to make the "shortcake." No one will quarrel with the filling and topping—it's downright delicious.

This is a versatile recipe, and if no ham is available you may substitute any leftover meat or poultry or use tuna.

For moderate appetites, one "shortcake" is enough, but hearty appetites will demand two. Green salad adds crispness, and for dessert, chilled canned pears with chocolate sauce.

DIXIE SHORTCAKE

6 tablespoons butter or margarine	4 cups milk
1 cup thin strips green pepper	1/2 cup thin strips pimiento
1 can (6 oz.) sliced broiled mushrooms	4 cups diced cooked ham*
1/2 cup flour	1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen cut green beans, cooked and drained
1 teaspoon salt	8 packaged corn muffins, heated

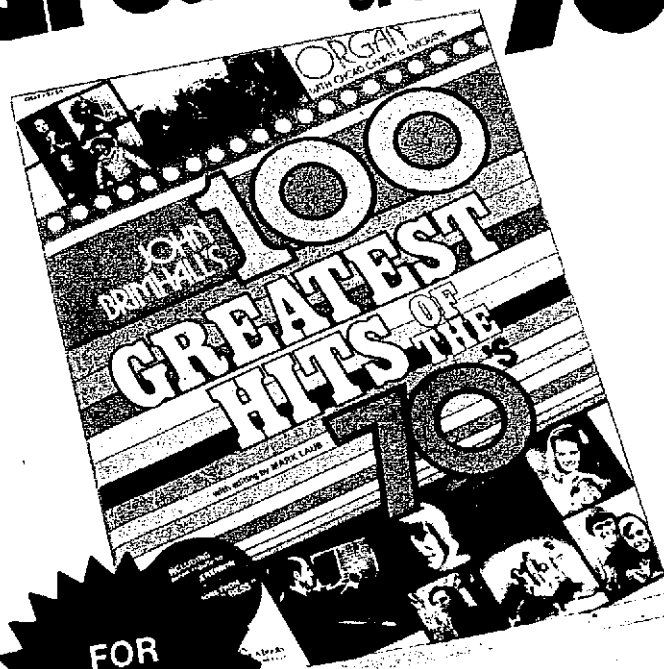

Melt butter or margarine in saucepan. Add green pepper and mushrooms; cook over low heat until pepper is tender. Add flour and salt; stir to smooth paste. Add milk; cook, stirring constantly until mixture thickens and comes to a boil. Add pimiento, diced ham and green beans to sauce. Heat 10 to 15 minutes over very low heat. Serve over split corn muffins. Makes four generous servings.

*Or leftover poultry or other meat.

How To Stay Awake While Driving

by E. D. Fales Jr.

All experienced drivers know the terrible pressure with which sleep closes in when you get tired on the road. Thousands have crashed and died. Other thousands have managed to get their eyes open—just in time to live.

Now the U.S. Department of Transportation is trying to find out what you really can do to remain awake at the wheel. In tests at the big Calspan Research Labs at Buffalo, N.Y., 30 tired drivers were paid to make long, dreary night runs, with computer electrodes strapped to their heads and over their hearts. Thirteen times drivers actually fell asleep, and psychologists Robert Sugarman and Paul Cozad, monitoring the results, made some startling discoveries.

When you get tired at the wheel, they found, your brain emits electric pulses called "alpha waves"—really waves of drowsiness. Your eyes feel heavy; your arms tire; you may want to steer with one wrist on the top rim of the wheel—in sheer fatigue.

If at this point you persist in driving, a second set of brain waves starts flickering. Scientists call them "theta waves"—and they're the waves that bring sleep. Now you may simply drop asleep without an instant's warning.

The road tests were run on the fast New York State Thruway. Night after night Cozad rode with the drivers—who had already put in a hard day's work and were tired. They would squirm, kick the floor, switch on the radio, stretch—and, despite all, finally drop off, still gripping the wheel, their feet still on the gas pedal.

In the 13 cases in which the drivers were overcome by sleep, the test car veered to the right 12 times. When the wheels touched the road shoulder, the new sound would wake the drivers up in time to realize their danger. The 13th time, the car veered left—toward a ditch. Cozad had to grab the wheel, slam on his own special emergency brake, and bring the car under control.

When danger sets in

From such tests the scientists learned:

- It's dangerous to drive after you feel "drowsiness waves."
- Beware of the second and third hours of driving.
- Don't drive very long near noisy trucks—loud noise lullabies you. Even awake, you lose steady steering control.
- Don't rely on your car radio—it can lull you, too.
- Give yourself "jabs." Raise and lower windows. Shove your seat back and forth.
- Look for excitement. It may be someone else's tough luck, but the sight of a speeding police car may keep you awake afterward. So may a roadside accident, or red warning flares. Even a road construction squeeze may help.

He jogs to stay awake: Truck driver John Markowicz finds that a few turns around his vehicle banish drowsiness and help keep him alert at the wheel.

- Look for landmarks. Merely passing a big city helps. Dr. Sugarman reports that the lights of cities miles away can banish "drowsy waves" from drivers' brains. The two psychologists suggest that superhighways—now dangerous because they're too dull—be built to pass near cities, for sheer stimulation.

Hitting the road myself, I discussed the psychologists' findings with some of America's best long-distance truck drivers—men who have to fight sleep as part of their job. They agree with the scientists—and have a list of do's and don'ts of their own to add:

- Stop every 2½ hours. This rule is a must to many truckers. They don't necessarily eat at each stop, just find it enough to halt for a chat with other drivers or to check their tires. (For ordinary motorists, the Calspan scientists suggest stopping every 90 minutes.)

- Be on guard if you find yourself drawing in long, weary breaths, getting mad at other drivers, or making foolish mistakes like stopping at a green traffic light (it happens). These can be signs of fatigue.

- Don't gulp a cup of coffee and drive on in the expectation it will wake you up. Truckers say coffee only helps for a few minutes.

- Don't eat a big meal—it brings on sleep. "When I'm tired, I stick to snacks," says Arthur Storch, who hauls furniture out of Grand Rapids.

- Keep cool. You can do this quite literally. Many truckers find that splashing cold water on their face has a wake-up effect. In fact, they complain that some service areas only seem to have faucets that run warm. Some say it helps to chew on an ice cube. Others favor the "chilly wrist"—they thrust a hand out of the window and turn the sensitive inside of the wrist to the cool breezes. "Stimulates your bloodstream," says Dana Shores, who learned the trick driving groceries across New England.

Midnight sprint

- Try jogging. "I know it looks nutty at midnight," says John Markowicz, who hauls produce between Scranton, Boston and Little Falls, N.Y. "But when I feel a little tired I stop, get out and jog around my truck."

- Lay off anti-sleep pills. Drivers who use them are feared by others. "We call them 'goofball drivers,'" says one. "They hallucinate. They see things that aren't there." Liquor, of course, is taboo. Truckers and psychologists alike have found that it eliminates the warning nod that comes before sleep.

- Give yourself an "ETA." That means "Estimated Time of Arrival." Many truckers time their runs in advance, setting an "ETA" for certain points. Then they keep checking their watches to see if they're on time. Or motorists can clock off every 10th (or 25th) mile as an aid to staying alert. "But never count each milepost," truckers warn. "That makes a trip last forever—and may bring on dozing."

Does having passengers help? Yes, drivers say, just by being there, even if they don't talk.

Time to pull over

Summing it all up, virtually all drivers agree that the only thing to do when very sleepy is to stop, pull over, turn off the engine (to avoid gas danger), and surrender to the "sleep waves."

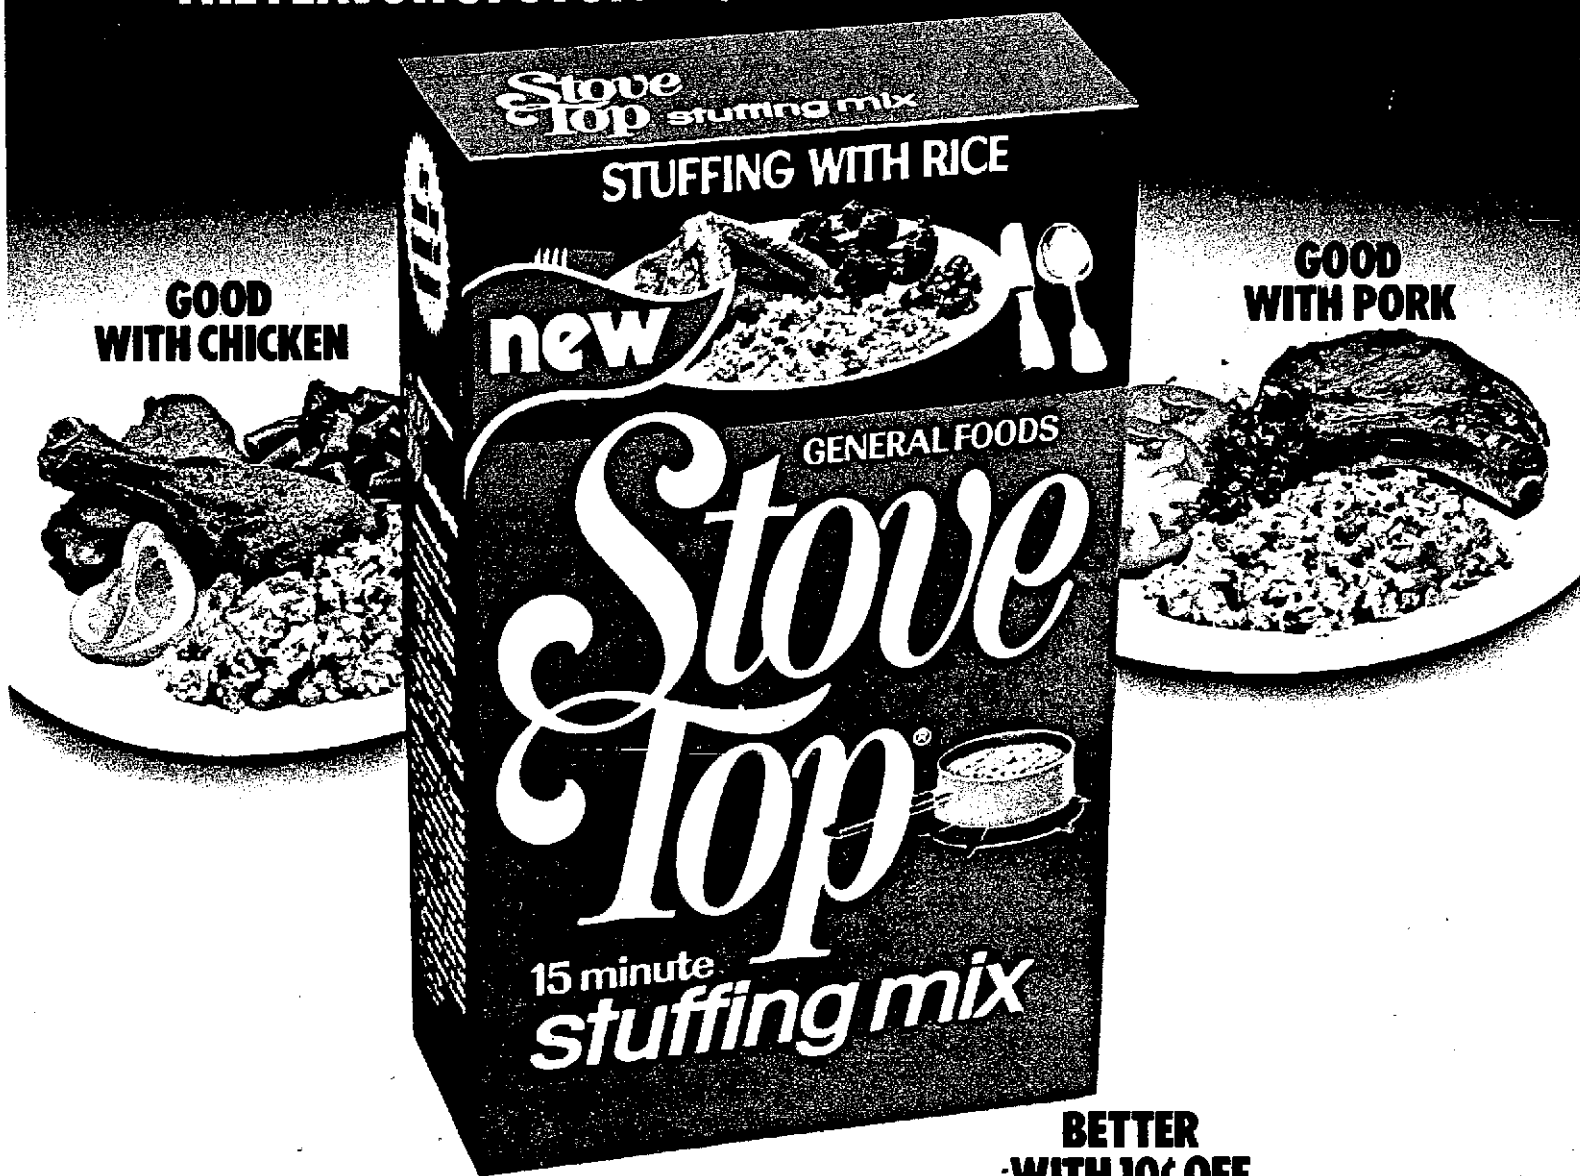

"After one hour's sleep I can go for four hours wide awake," says Leroy Small, who drives west out of Meriden, Conn.

Most drivers have developed their own tricks for waking up after a brief rest. Arthur Storch says he makes sure the truck is good and warm inside before he stops. After half an hour of sleep, he says, the truck cools off and he's awakened by the chilly air. John Markowicz just pulls into a service area and asks the attendant to wake him in two hours—a trick that other drivers might well emulate. Jack Amaral, who jockeys a huge tanker from New York to Chicago, doesn't even actually go to sleep, "I just stop and read awhile," he says.

But all emphasize that it's absolutely vital to stop and get out every two or three hours. "You must escape from that metal cage," says one veteran trucker. "You've got to get your mind off the hypnotic road."

BILL MOYERS INTERVIEWS HENRY KISSINGER

MOYERS ON AMERICA

Bill Moyers, 40, White House press secretary under Lyndon Johnson and currently a Newsweek magazine columnist and TV celebrity, grew up in Marshall, Tex., and was graduated with a journalism degree from the University of Texas.

A few weeks ago Moyers returned to his alma mater to accept an award for outstanding achievement in communication. The occasion gave him opportunity to comment on the mood of the nation. In the United States, he said, the mood in four years had changed from antagonism to resignation.

"I find a growing number of people," he pointed out, "who question whether anything matters, whether anything works, whether anyone listens, whether anyone cares.

"As many of you must," he continued, "I find myself afraid, cantankerous, bewildered, often hostile, often gracious, battered by a hundred new sensations every month and filled with the sense that we are either on the verge of the worst of times or the best of times.

"I vacillate, as I suspect you do, between the determination to change society and the desire to retreat into the snuggeries of myself and my family."

According to Moyers, what America must beware of "is defeatism, the nothing-can-be-done disease. In that kind of environment," he warned, "it becomes every man for himself and catastrophe is inevitable."

Moyers, however, is sure that the nation's resilient optimism will prevail.

"I've seen too many Americans," he reported, "coping with the unexpected, coping with the tragic, coping with the extraordinary, coping with the evil, the perfidy and the suffering and still holding on to their irreducible humanity, to their grace and their humor. I've seen too many of them to believe that this is yet a lost race."

SOVIET DIAMONDS

Without any fuss or fanfare the Soviet Union has begun to market jewelry diamonds, long the semi-monopoly of the De Beers South African syndicate.

The Soviet diamonds are on sale in Japan. The Matsuzakaya department store in Tokyo is one of the first to offer them at about $250 for a third of a carat.

According to a Japanese jewelry salesman, "The Russians have a long way to go to improve their diamond cutting and polishing techniques. To tell the truth, they have such a long way to go that we don't even advertise the Soviet diamonds as diamonds. We sell them as 'sparkling jewelry accessories.'"

RENT-A-THIEF

Department store owners in Toronto have discovered a new way to discourage shoplifting. For $100 a day they hire a student or an actor who permits himself to be caught stealing various items.

The rent-a-thief thereupon is bullied and abused by a store detective who roughly escorts him out of the establishment, all the time loudly threatening arrest. This scene of public humiliation is designed to dishearten all potential shoplifters.

RED GOLD

Most of the off-season strawberries in Europe come from an Arab village, Tira, 18 miles from Tel Aviv in Israel. Tira, referred to by the Israelis as "Strawberryville," has the highest income per capita of any non-petroleum Arab region in the Middle East.

The Arabs who live in Tira have planted 350 acres in strawberries, average 3000 tons annually, more than 80 percent of Israel's total strawberry production. This year the 9500 residents of Tira expect to gross about $2 million in what they aptly call "red gold."

NEW GI LOAN TERMS

Veterans of World War II, Korea, and Vietnam, there are new rules about GI home loans. No longer are you limited to one loan.

If you've paid off your first loan, passed it on to another GI, or disposed of the original property, you can get a second loan from the Veterans Administration.

Moreover, the VA will guarantee loans on condominiums and has structured a new set of loan terms for mobile homes and lots.

The federal government has also raised the maximum amount it will insure --from $12,500 to $17,500 --or 60 percent of the mortgage, whichever is less.

The rate on GI loans is 8 percent at this writing. For more details, consult your local VA office. No longer is there any time limit on GI loan eligibility.

AU PAIR SPIES

An increasing number of au pair girls from Communist countries have been seeking jobs in Britain. So many, in fact, that England's Ministry of Defense has warned that "anyone who contemplates employing an au pair or domestic from a Communist country must first consult the Security Directorate."

Says the ministry: "Any contact may be exploited for intelligence purposes. All contacts by letter, phone or by meeting are to be reported immediately to security chiefs."

Janet Lynn—The World's Highest Paid Woman Athlete

by John G. Rogers

ROCKFORD, ILL.

Janet Lynn loves to cavort on the ice, and when she buys a new pair of custom-made skates two or three times a year she pays $200 for each set. A steep price? Indeed it is, but pretty, blonde Janet can well afford the best skates in the world. For she is the world's highest paid woman athlete.

At 22 Janet is in the second year of a three-year $1.5 million contract with the Ice Follies, which tours the country every year. And she has arrangements for commercials, endorsements, personal appearances, recordings and publications that net her another bundle. Last year this petite miss—you could mistake her for a high school girl though actually she's a versatile industry all by herself—earned more than $750,000.

Janet is just as friendly and unaffected as she is wealthy and famous as a figure skater. Ask her the trite question: How does it feel to be the world's highest-paid?

"Gee," she replies. "I can't honestly comprehend it. All that money just for skating. I made up my mind I wouldn't let it go to my head or change me. My only real extravagance has been to take our whole family—besides me, that's my parents, two brothers and a sister—to Europe for three weeks last year. We had the grandest time being all together."

"Otherwise I never see much of the money. There's a management firm that puts $400 a month for me into a checking account and they take care of my taxes and investments and other details."

Life on the move

Hazel-eyed Janet, who wears blue jeans and sweaters when she's not in frilly trimmed tights under the spotlight on the ice, twirling and leaping with grace that thrills audiences, lives the life of a jet-age gypsy. Last year she was on the swift move for 11 months—from plane to hotel to arena. Does she feel this robs her of a normal life?

"Yes, in part it does," says Janet. "But you have to compromise. I can't see myself keeping up this pace after the end of next year. Still, even now I can reach out for what I can get in the way of normal life. For example, I've got high school friends from my home town, Rockford, Ill., scattered all over the country, and when the Follies hits a city, St. Louis, New York, Cleveland or wherever, my friends come to see me skate in the show and afterward we squeeze in some fun together—simple things because I have to keep in training or my timing and reactions go all off.

When the time comes

"We go to movies, listen to music, dance, have a picnic, a potluck supper or just talk. And the Follies has a cast of 90, a lot of them around my age, and you make good friends among them, too. I've dated some very nice guys but there's nobody superspecial. If I had a crystal ball, though, I'd say it shows me becoming a wife and mother when the right time comes along."

Janet Lynn—her real last name is Nowicki and her father owns a drugstore in Rockford, some 80 miles northwest of Chicago—put in a grueling apprenticeship to win her spot at the top. She doesn't remember it but she was 2½ years old the first time she skated at a Cub Scout outing attended by her older brothers. As she "aged" she found that she loved to skate and was good at it. By the time she was 6 she had a coach, Miss Slavka Kohout, who later became the wife of Dick Button, the former Olympic skating champion, now one of Janet's managers.

By dint of constant practice Janet made the U.S. Olympic team in 1968, finishing ninth in the competition in France. In 1972, in Japan, she finished third in the Olympics, earning a bronze medal. Meantime, starting in 1969, she won five straight annual U.S. championships at meets held in Seattle, Tulsa, Buffalo, Long Beach, Calif., and Minneapolis.

Popular all over, Janet, since the 1972 Olympics is a particular favorite in Japan, where the public snaps up posters of her as quickly as they're put on sale. Her autobiography is currently being translated into Japanese, and it would surprise no one if it exceeded its sales of 65,000 in the U.S. A Japanese soft-drink company pays her $50,000 a year to promote its product. Two of her record albums are on the best-seller list even though they're in English, not Japanese.

Janet is a strongly religious girl—in fact, one of the records contains a spoken affirmation of her Christian beliefs. Faith and family are pillars of her personal philosophy. She asserts earnestly, "I'm sure that what has happened to me was not all an accident. I wouldn't have had the strength to do it all alone." Appropriately, she's on the speakers bureau of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, which includes a number of professional baseball, football and basketball players.

Hard work and willpower

Since she is such a varied industry—Eastman Kodak is one of her employers—it's not surprising that there are a number of promoters and press agents affixed to Janet's career. But she relies mostly on herself for success.

As she has been doing for years and years, the five-foot, 115-pound young woman aims at practicing at least an hour a day, in addition to the Follies performance, and she has also been taking lessons in ballet and gymnastics. Holding the weight means willpower against much-loved cake and candy bars.

"A few pounds too many can affect your timing," says Janet, "and that's one of the reasons you might fall down on the ice before a full audience. Sure, I fall down once in awhile, everybody does. But when I do—in spite of all that money—I feel like a klutz."

PAINFUL ELIMINATION?

Many people have experienced painful elimination. And many have come to accept this as if it were natural. But there's nothing natural about it.

No matter what your age, you should have comfortable elimination.

And SERUTAN makes this possible.

SERUTAN is the effective laxative that forms a smooth gel in the lower digestive tract, where it combines with intestinal waste to give you comfortable relief.

There's no strain, and no cramps. That's because SERUTAN, with its natural ingredients, adds the necessary moisture and bulk to work with your system for smooth, easy results.

If you suffer from painful elimination, try SERUTAN. You'll be very comfortable with it.

my FAVORITE jokes

by lou NELSON

EDITOR'S NOTE: "I like doing topical humor," Lou Nelson explains, "because I work very soft and underneath." He defines "soft and underneath" as "having an audience feel it is sitting in a living room and talking to me, not a hard sell." Nelson started in show business as a song and dance man and shifted rather effortlessly to telling jokes in a low-key manner.

Nelson's entertained at the Riviera in Las Vegas, the Fontainebleau, Eden Roc and Diplomat Hotels in Miami Beach. He's appeared in two movies, Tony Rome and The Detective. In his act Nelson jokes about his two sons, but he says, "Actually, I like to spoil my kids, because I came from a rough New York neighborhood. If we ever saw a cat with a tail, it was strictly a tourist. They wouldn't let us kids swim in the East River—we'd leave a ring around the pier. There were 14 children in my family, that's why my mother called me Louis—I was the 14th!"

Here is Lou Nelson on a variety of subjects:

Take my big guy, the teen-ager. He's very independent. He lives alone—in my house. I was talking to him the other day—I had an appointment. I went up to his room, but how can you have a man-to-man talk with somebody wearing one earring and a shoulder pocketbook?

I had him out to Coney Island last summer. I said, "Do you want to go to the Crazy House?"

He said, "Nah, save your money, we'll be home soon."

You want to keep pornography away from your kids? Put it in their textbooks, they'll never see it.

My wife and I have the usual fights. I bought her a dog, he's cute, but he stutters. Anyway he caused a problem because I came home one night very late, and he started to bark. He woke my wife up and she hollered from the bedroom, "What time is it?" I said, "It's 12 o'clock." Just then the cuckoo sang out two times. I had to stand there and cuckoo 10 more times—with the hiccups. I walked into the bedroom and my wife was lying there with the curlers in her hair. She looked like a tree with dead birds in it. I got into bed and she said, "Boy, oh boy, to think of the guy I could have married." I said, "I saw him today. I bought three of his pencils."

My parakeet used to hate me. One day I walked over to the cage. I said, "Can you talk, dummy?"

He said, "Yeah, can you fly, stupid?"

In what other city but New York can you throw a slug to a blind man and have him chase you for seven blocks. Or, take a carriage ride in Central Park and have somebody ride shotgun.

It was Benjamin Franklin who said: "It's hard to forget a girl when you buy her a gift on the installment plan."

You have to learn to protect yourself, so I went to karate school. I did the whole bit, the white gown, black belt, wig with curls. In fact one night after school a cop stopped me. He said: "Hey, buddy, if you're not a registered nurse, you're in trouble." I told him I was a Greek soldier out on maneuvers.

One 2 a.m. I was in the subway. There wasn't a soul around. Suddenly a guy walked over. "Hey, Mack," he said, "can you help me out, can you let me have a few dollars? All I got in the world is this gun."

disability income benefits when a covered sickness or accident keeps you from working

What hospital insurance does for hospital bills, this Mutual of Omaha plan can do for your grocery, rent and clothing bills...important protection for working men and women. Other disability income coverages include Homemakers' plans for housewives.

Will your health insurance pay when you DON'T go to the hospital?

Mutual of Omaha's new MONEY BACK health insurance can protect you three ways...

can pay you IN the hospital can pay you OUT of the hospital can refund ALL your premiums if you NEVER get sick or hurt

Our figures show that you're seven times more likely to be laid up at home than in the hospital. That could leave an awful lot of bills unpaid if your health insurance covers you only in the hospital. Mutual of Omaha thinks you need protection at home, too... and does something about it.

With this plan, the family income can be protected during and after hospitalization... protected even if you never go to the hospital. And, in addition, if you never get sick, never get hurt, every cent you pay in premiums will be refunded when your policy matures at age 65.

Mutual of Omaha guarantees that you'll collect at least as much as you've paid in when you keep your policy in force to age 65. If you do receive benefits, and they total less than you've paid in at age 65, you then collect the difference. If you've never received benefits, you get a 100% refund... every penny you've paid in.

As a breadwinner, man or woman, married or single you can select the amount you qualify for (from $100.00 to $1,200.00 a month... up to $40.00 a day) to help replace your paychecks when a covered sickness or accident keeps you from working. These monthly disability income benefits are payable over and above any benefits you receive for hospital and medical bills. They are yours to spend as you please for any purpose you choose... yours to use for every kind of bill.

THERE ARE SEVEN REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD CONSIDER THIS MUTUAL OF OMAHA PLAN

1. You may qualify for a plan that can provide up to $1,200.00 monthly income benefits (up to $40.00 a day) to spend as you see fit if you're sick or hurt and can't work, or refund all your premiums when your policy matures at age 65 if you stay well.
2. These disability income benefits are provided in and out of the hospital.
3. Your coverage becomes effective immediately for new sickness contracted or injury received after your policy is in force. Pre-existing conditions (old health problems) will not be covered for 12 months. This applies to such conditions shown on your application and not excluded from coverage.

4. Mental disorders are covered the same as any other sickness.

5. Your policy protects you as a passenger in any kind of aircraft—even a private plane.

6. Benefits are provided for disabilities incurred both on and off the job. They are available in addition to any Workmen's Compensation or Employer's Liability coverage.

7. You have this renewal agreement: no matter how often you may receive benefits, Mutual of Omaha guarantees to renew your policy as long as premiums are paid on time. Your premium can be changed only when changed for all policies of your form and class in your state.

Please note that the amount of the benefit, the premium, and the deductible period vary with the plan you qualify for. And that these disability income benefits are not payable for losses caused by war or military service; narcotics, unless prescribed by a physician; childbirth, pregnancy, or resulting complications. Coverage terminates at retirement or age 65, whichever comes first.

Just Released 1975 Citizen's Guide to Social Security Explains How you can Collect from Social Security at any age!

By Claude Hopkins

Would you like to know exactly how much money you have invested in Social Security right to the penny? Then would you like to learn how to get the most from this investment, including all the brand new 1975 Social Security benefits? You can do both by filling out the short easy coupon at the bottom of this page. The left half of the coupon will be forwarded to the proper government office. They will check out your Social Security account and send you a report in a confidential sealed envelope. This report will tell you how much of your earnings have been recorded in your Social Security account on a year by year basis. This service costs you nothing, not even postage.

The right half of the coupon is a shipping label. It will be used to send you a copy of a new book entitled, "How You Can Collect from Social Security at Any Age." This book not only answers any questions you have concerning your Social Security benefits, but will make you aware of many facts you would never even think to ask. For instance, if you think that you have to wait until retirement age to start collecting your Social Security benefits, this book will surprise you with facts to the contrary. You'll find the book written in easy-to-understand language covering important facts like these:

- * How to increase the amount of your benefits if you are now on Social Security.
- * What's your share of the new Social Security benefits recently passed by Congress?

- * How to qualify for Social Security disability regardless of your age.
- * How to increase the amount of your Social Security benefits.
- * How to make your entire family eligible for Social Security benefits, even the youngest child.
- * How to go about replacing a lost Social Security card.
- * How to go about replacing a lost Social Security check.
- * How to figure approximately what your Social Security retirement will be.
- * What papers should you take with you to file a Social Security claim?
- * How millions of people who are only 30 years old, on the average, collect from Social Security.
- * How can a divorced wife collect Social Security benefits?
- * Can creditors seize your Social Security benefits?
- * How to make sure your employer hasn't made a mistake on your Social Security
- * How you may be robbing yourself of your Social Security benefits.
- * When are the six times you should definitely contact your Social Security office?
- * How to collect Social Security and still work.
- * How to collect on Social Security even if you've never paid in to it.
- * How to get hospital and medical nefits are made available every day. By purchasing a copy of this book, you're entitled to a FREE, one year subscription to the newsletter, "What's New in Government Benefits". This newsletter will have one purpose only -- Making and Saving you money!

This is a 100% no risk offer. If you are not satisfied with the book, return it and your money will be refunded immediately. And even if you return the book, you will still get the confidential report on your Social Security account.

If you do not take advantage of your new Social Security benefits, you are only cheating yourself. Remember, you have already paid for them. They belong to you. To get the new Social Security benefits you rightfully deserve, fill out both parts of the coupon below. Mail the coupon and $3.00 plus 50¢ postage and handling in cash, check or money order to: THE CENTER FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION, Government Programs Division, Dept. G-139 401 Market Ave., N. Canton, Ohio 44702. Your book will be mailed to you immediately. Your confidential Social Security report will be mailed separately when the government has completed running the check on your account. Make checks or money orders payable to: THE CENTER FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION.

insurance under Social Security.

- * How to get Social Security benefits if you're a student 18 to 22 years of age.
- * How to get the Social Security benefits available to veterans only.
- * How to apply for a refund if you have overpaid on your Social Security taxes. (Figures indicate that two out of three people overpay.)
- * Should everyone have two Social Security cards?
- * How to get the free services available to everyone from Social Security.

This book tells you not only what Social Security benefits you're entitled to and when, but how to qualify, and who to contact. (All local addresses and phone numbers are listed.) Although this book can mean hundreds or even thousands of dollars to you, it will cost you only $3.00 plus 50¢ postage and handling.
